The society voted to hold its next annual meeting in Des Moines during the state fair next fall, and decided to hold a special meeting the second week of next December, during the meeting of the Iowa State Horticultural society.

Addresses on horticultural and floricultural subjects were given by A. T. Erwin of Ames, J. T. Temple of Davenport, William Trillow of Des Moines, William Hester of Des Moines, J. A. Kramer of Cedar Rapids and J. S. Pollard of Eldora.

BIG SAPPHIRE MINE SOLD.

Dan A. Jacobi Takes Property From Dodd & Struthers.

Des Moines.—As a culmination of the negotiations which have been going on between A. D. Struthers and West Dodd on the one hand and Dan A. Jacobi, the immense sapphire mine in Montana will pass into the full possession of Mr. Jacobi on January 1 next, upon the payment of the sum of $75,000 to Messrs. Dodd and Struthers. Mr. Jacobi announced that an option to this effect was signed by the three interested parties at the law offices of Clark & Byers. The original option held by Mr. Jacobi called for the payment of $60,000 and expired on August 10. This option was not fulfilled at that time, owing to complications which arose, and recently Messrs. Dodd and Struthers offered a new option as above which was accepted by Mr. Jacobi.

WORK IN TUBERCULOSIS.

Satisfactory Results Are Made at Iowa City Sanitarium.

Iowa City.—The state tuberculosis sanitarium near this city has completed seven months' work and indications point to a very satisfactory return in the way of bettering the conditions of patients and effecting cures. The total number of patients has been 144, and the largest number at any one time has been 55, the present attendance.

Dr. Kirchner, the superintendent, is sanguine as to the results of the work, though it s still too early to furnish statistics of the cured. Nearly all the patients at first were men, but of the total of 144, over half are women, and it is women sufferers who make up a majority of cases now under treatment.

It takes from six to nine months to cure incipient tuberculosis, so statistics of cures are lacking. One man has been discharged as cured. Nearly all the others who have left the hospital have improved. Out of the total number discharged, forty-five have showed improvement, and only fifteen have left unimproved. Of these fifteen no one case remained over two weeks. They were composed of those farthest advanced. Of the forty-five who showed improvement many were advanced, and remained only a short time.

Dr. Kirchner is very anxous that the next legislature appropriate money to build an infirmary on the grounds, as well as additional cottages. An infirmary suited to the needs of the institution would cost about $50,000.

An infirmary is needed chiefly on account of the necessity of having an operating room. We have had eight cases where surgical operations were required before the patients could be treated for tuberculosis. After the third operation the patients were refused at the state universty hospital, because of the prejudice against them on the part of attendants and other patients. This is not a condition peculiar to the hospital at Iowa City, because the same conditions are found all over the country.

Cottages are needed because pleasant associatins have a great deal to do with recovery, and there is no gainsaying that small cottages are better in grouping the patients into small, congenial parties."

MOST NOVEL REUNION.

Fremont Voters to Meet at Fairfield, Sept. 17.

Fairfield.—In these days of reunions, associations and fraternal orders, this town makes claim to having the most unique affair of its kind in the country. It is no less than a society of men who voted for Fremont in 1856. John C. Fremont was the first republican candidate for president of the United States and his vote that fall was not as large as is cast for the prohibition candidate these days, but the Fremonters were a sturdy lot. They voted the way they believed and were willing to fight at the drop of the hat for their candidate.

There are 75 men living in the First congressional district who voted for Fremont. That was fifty-two years ago and of course each one of those voters must be 73 years of age or more today. The reunion for this year will be held in this city on September 17. The day will consist of an old-time barbecue with speaking and camping songs of fifty years ago. The principal speaker engaged so far is Hon. S. M. Molesbury of Columbus Junction. The Hon. Henry D. Mitchell of this city has the distinction of being the oldest Fremont voter in this country. He celebrated his 90th birthday July 5.

Smothers in Oats Barrel.

Prescott.—Smothered to death in a barrel of oats was the unusual death which befell a 2-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stulik, who lives one miles west of Williamson. The babe was playing in the yard when it fell headforemost into the barrel containing the oats. The little fellow managed to get out of the barrel and was observed by an older sister, who called her mother, saying that the baby's face was dirty. Mrs. Stulik responded to the call and found the child gasping for breath. Its mouth, nose and ears were filled with small grains of oats, and though a physician was summoned at once the babe died from strangulation.

HER GOOD FORTUNE

After Years Spent in Vain Effort.

Mrs. Mary E. H. Rouse, of Cambridge, N. Y., says: "Five years ago I had a bad fall and it affected my kidneys. Severe pains in my back and hips became constant, and sharp twinges followed any exertion. The kidney secretions were badly disordered. I lost flesh and grew too weak to work. Though constantly using medicine I despaired of being cured until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Then relief came quickly, and in a short time I was completely cured. I am now in excellent health."

Aunt Mandy Was Thoroughly Satisfied with New Husband.

Aunt Mandy is an old colored woman who for years has done washing for several families. She has had several matrimonial experiences, and when her last husband died one of her customers attempted to condole with her.

"I was very sorry to hear of your husband's death, Aunt Mandy," she said.

"Ya'as, ma'am," said Aunt Mandy. "He was a pow'ful good man."

"What did he die of?"

"Ah really don't know, ma'am."

"You don't know- Gracious! Couldn't the doctor tell you?"

"Ah didn't have no doctah, ma'am," said Aunt Mandy. "He jes done died a natch'ral death."

It wasn't long, however, before Aunt Mandy had another husband.

"I hear you are married again," remarked her patron one day.

"Ya'as, ma'am," giggled Aunt Mandy. "I was done married las' Sunday."

"And is your new husband equal to the last?"

"Ya'as, indeedy, ma'am," said Aunt Mandy. "He's jes as equal, if not equaller."

Mr. Manyack—Do you mean this present month or do you include last as well?

Appreciates Teachers' Work.

One woman says that when her children bring home their school reports at the end of the month she always finds five minutes in which to write a personal letter to the teachers. If there is something that the children have learned that surprised her she writes a note of thanks and appreciation, and if the reports are unsatisfactory she writes offering to help the teacher in any way she may suggest. Needless to say, the teachers are appreciative, as any one will know who has ever taught school.

Mentally Sound.

The proud beauty eyed him with scorn.

"What!" she exclaimed. "Do you think I would marry a dried up, insignificant, homely little man like you? You must be crazy!"

"No, Miss Pinkie," he said, looking around for his hat; "my mind is all right, but you have convinced me that it's in the wrong body."

Well Brewed Postum Always Palatable

The flavour of Postum, when boiled according to directions, is always the same—mild, distinctive, and palatable. It contains no harmful substance like caffeine, the drug in coffee, and hence may be used with benefit at all times.

"Believing that coffee was the cause of my torpid liver, sick headache and misery in many ways," writes an Ind. lady, "I quit and bought a package of Postum about a year ago.

"My husband and I have been so well pleased that we have continued to drink Postum ever since. We like the taste of Postum better than coffee, as it has always the same pleasant flavour, while coffee changes its taste with about every new combination or blend.

"Since using Postum I have had no more attacks of gall colic, the heaviness has left my chest, and the old, common, every-day headache is a thing unknown." "There's a Reason."

When the Little Man Scored.

A meek-looking little man with a large pasteboard box climbed on the car. As he did so he bumped slightly into a sleepy, corpulent passenger with a self-satisfied look and two little dabs of sidewhiskers. As the car rounded a curve the box rubbed against him again and he growled: "This is no freight car, is it?" "Nope," returned the meek little chap with the box, "and when you come right down to it, it ain't any cattle car, either, is it?"

An Observation.

One of the most annoying things in life is to fall in a coal hole, or stumble over an uneven bit of pavement, and get badly enough hurt to make you ill all day, but not badly enough to be able to recover damages from the city.

Weak Kidneys

Cause more trouble than any other organ of the body. The function of the kidneys is to separate inorganic salt and water in the process of circulation, and to remove them and their attendant poisons from the body through the bladder. Therefore when the kidneys become diseased and weak they are naturally unable to perform their work properly, and pains in the back, inflammation of the bladder and urinary disorders are the result. It is imperative that a prompt relief be afforded, which is impossible unless you remove the cause.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills

promptly eliminate poisons from the system and at the same time make the kidneys well and strong.

For Weak Kidneys, Backache, inflammation of the bladder and all urinary troubles DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are unsurpassed.

How He Hunted Bear.

A New York fishman was visiting a friend in the Adirondacks and was taken with a desire to go hunting. Borrowing a gun from his friend he set off alone in search of game. Some time after his host heard a distant report of a gun. A few minutes later he heard some one shouting. From a window he spied, in the distance, his friend, hot-footing it for home, and behind him a bear, gaining at every step. Nearly spent, the pursued reached the door just in time to cry out:

"Quick, Mike! Quick! Open the door! I'm bringing him home alive!"

A DEAD MAN'S JOKE

PERHAPS HE ENJOYED IT IN THE SPIRIT LAND.

Anyway, It Worked Very Successfully on Friend Who Hitherto Had Sincerely Mourned His Loss.

Thornley was a lovable chap, but an inveterate practical joker. When he decided to accept the offer of the South American syndicate and go to Venezuela his friends, who had suffered much from his pranks, wondered what he would do to the gentle subjects of Cipriano Castro. There were a dozen or more of them at the pier to see him off. Among them was Rolber. Between Thornley and Rolber there was a tie stronger than ordinary friendship. They had been boys together. They had been schoolmates. They married about the same time and were neighbors for many years.

"Gus, old man," said Thornley, as they were saying good-by for the last time, "I wish I had something to give you to remember me by, but I've been so busy lately preparing for this trip that I haven't had time to think of anything. Don't forget to write, will you?"

They shook hands again and then Thornley, reaching in his pocket, drew out three cigars.

"Smoke those, old man, and when you're smoking them remember me," he said.

Rolber took the cigars. The steamer sailed away and a few weeks later a letter from Thornley told of his safe arrival. Everything was strange, he said, but he hoped he would like the country.

Letters came at intervals and then came the news of Thornley's death. He had caught a fever and died suddenly.

The news was a great shock to Rolber. It was as if he had lost a brother.

Of the three cigars Thornley had given to him that day when he sailed away two had been smoked. Rolber preferred a pipe to a cigar, and after he heard of Thornley's death he had no desire to smoke the third. He put the cigar on his mantelpiece at home under a glass case, and every time he looked at it his thoughts turned to his dead friend.

Two years passed and still the cigar remained in its old place. Then, one night, Rolber discovered that all his smoking tobacco was gone. He searched high and low, but could not discover anything to smoke. He went at last to the mantelpiece and looked at Thornley's cigar. No, he would not think of smoking that. It would be a sacrilege. He turned away and took up a book. But there was no pleasure in reading. He was nervous and he needed a smoke. He searched again for some tobacco, although he knew there was none. Again he turned to read, but the craving of the steady smoker was too strong. He went and looked at the cigar. It had dried out, but still was in good condition. Sentiment and appetite struggled for a minute or two and sentiment won.

Rolber walked away and tried to satisfy his craving by putting his empty pipe in his mouth and drawing on it as if it were filled. That did not do. He simply had to smoke, and at last he turned back to the mantelpiece, lifted the glass case and took out Thornley's cigar. Just a moment he wavered. Then he struck a match, held the flame close to the cigar and with a sigh of satisfaction he drew in a lung full of smoke. It seemed to him that he never before had enjoyed a smoke so much. Three, four, five times he puffed contentment into his physical self and then—

There was a sudden burst of fire and sparks, a sharp report, the cigar was a wreck and Rolber was as nervous as a kitten.

"Well, I'll be switched," said Rolber, when he had recovered his wits. "Who would have thought that a man dead two years would play a joke on a fellow with a loaded cigar?"

CUMMINS IS NAMED

FOR SENATOR BY REPUBLICAN LEGISLATIVE CAUCUS.

HE HAD FIFTY-EIGHT VOTES

Forty-six Republicans Refused to Caucus—Declaration Made that They May Bolt.

Des Moines, Sept., 5.—Gov. Albert B. Cummins was made the republican party's candidate for United States senator for the short term in a formal caucus of the republicans of the legislature yesterday afternoon.

He not only received all but one vote in the caucus, but he received ten majority of the entire vote of the republicans in the assembly, 60 of the 108 republican members participating in the selection of their party candidate for senator, while forty-eight did not.

Fifty-nine republicans voted in the caucus and another was excused on account of sickness. On the ballot for the nomination for senator for the short term Governor Cummins received fifty-eight votes and Congressman Gilbert N. Haugen one. There are 109 republican members of the Iowa legislature, but one is absent from the state, and of the 108 eligible to sit in the body, forty-eight absented themselves from the caucus. Two of these appeared in the caucus and withdrew.

Saratoga Law Enforced.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Frances R. Hitchcock of New York, president of the Saratoga Racing association, testified at the hearing yesterday on charges against Sheriff Bradley of Saratoga county, that he believed the law was strictly enforced at the recent races at Saratoga. Several deputy sheriffs who were on duty at the track during the race meet testified that they saw no open betting.

VIRGINIA DROUGHT SERIOUS.

Lack of Rain is Causing Suspension of Industries.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 5.—A long continued drought in western Pennsylvania and West Virginia is gradually reaching serious proportions and the lack of rain is causing the suspension of many industries. At Greensburg, Pa., several plants of the H. C. Frick Coke company have been compelled to shut down. Farmers are hauling water for miles. Streams which have never before been known to go dry are so shallow that only here and there a stagnant pool is found. This water is scooped up, boiled and used for domestic purposes.

At Johnstown, Pa., two large reservoirs which have supplied the city with water, are practically dry, and a third, the Hinkston run reservoir, is the only hope of the entire city. Today many homes in the central part of Johnstown are without water. Warnings have been issued to the people to be as economical as possible with the water and new fire rules have been issued by the authorities.

At Morgantown, W. Va., the large plant of the American Sheet and Tin Plate company has suspended operations on account of the drought. Many lumber, coal and coking industries along Deckers creek are also idle.

COMMITTEE AGREES ON BILL.

Amendment Being Drafted for Introduction Tuesday.

Des Moines, Sept. 5.—Following are the principal features of the amendment to the state primary law which will be submitted to the legislature next Tuesday by the joint committee authorized to devise a plan for filling the senatorial vacancy:

Voters to obtain primary ballot of their party by signing written request supplied by election officials.

Only voters who are challenged to be required to swear to their party affiliation.

Primary ballot to be separate from official ballot.

Amendment only to provide for filling vacancy caused by death or withdrawal of senatorial candidate and not to provide new manner of selecting candidates for senator.

The subcommittee of lawyers to which was assigned the task of framing a measure is now engaged in drafting the bill, which will be introduced in both houses at the same time. An agreement has been reached on all important points, and all that remains to be done is to finish drafting the bill. Monday being a holiday, there will be no session of the assembly, and the members of the committee expect to have their bill ready for introduction when the two houses convene Tuesday morning.

$25,000 FOR FISH HATCHERY

Iowa Towns Want Biological Station Established.

Clinton.—Every river city in the upper Missippi valley is eligible to enter the contest for the new $25,000 biological station and fish hatchery that will be established during the coming year, in conformity with a bill passed by the national legislature last winter. The bill was introduced by Congressman Dawson of the Second Iowa district.

The commissioners, consisting of Dr. Everman, Professor LeFevre and Professor Curtis, are now making a tour of the Mississipi valley to ascertain the best location for the station. They have visited Davenport, Muscatine, LaCrosse, Winona and several other cities and will be in Clinton soon.

The object of the biological station will be the perpetuation of the Mississippi mussel or fresh water claim for the manufacture of pearl buttons. During the past few years so great has been the demand for the pearl button of the Mississippi valley that the vast beds of claims are being worked out, and entire depletion is threatened. It is to avert the threatened destruction of the claim that the biological station will be established. The station will be used also for a fish hatchery.

County Attorney De Graff emphatically declared that the negro will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. This means that he will face two charges, one of attempted criminal assault, and one of breaking and entering. The maximum sentence he can receive is thirty years, twenty years for attempted criminal assault and ten years on the other count.

Demands That Sum From Des Moines Gas Company.

Des Moines.—John A. Getchell, administrator of the estate of Henry F. Getchell, who died of injuries in the same auto accident in which Orlo Nattinger met instant death some months since, filed original notice of a suit for $100,000 damages against the Des Moines Gas Company for Mr. Getchell's death. The administrator avers that Mr. Getchell was the occupant of an auto that was running along at a fair rate of speed on a public highway and that the driver was exercising all due care and dilligence, but avers that the gas company had negligently placed an old tool wagon in the street and this the auto struck. He declares that there were no lights of any description on the tool wagon and no warning signs of any kind to show its presence on the street. Mr. Getchell was pitched some feet through the air by the force of the impct between the flying auto and the tool wagon and when picked up was unconscious. He was taken to a hospital where he died on Nov. 24, two days after the accident. The administrator of the estate of Mr. Nattinger, who was instantly killed in the same accident, recently sued the gas company for $20,000 damages.

GIRL ASSAULTED BY NEGRO.

Earl Nivert Positively Indentified in Police Court by Victim.

Des Moines.—Earl Nivert, tall, yellow negro, accused of attempted criminal assault on Miss Lizzie Agee, white girl, 28 years old, in her room at 414 East Fifth street, at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, Sept. 1, was positively identified as the guilty negro by the girl as he stood in police court pleading not guilty before Judge A. K. Stewart. The negro was placed under bonds of $5,000 and his preliminary hearing set for September 21, at 2 o'clock. He was then taken to the county jail for safe keeping.

Miss Agee was awakened by the breaking down of the door to her room on the second floor of the house. She saw the negro before he reached her and she screamed.

After a battle of some moments Miss Agee freed her face and screamed loudly for aid. Patrolman Pat Foley and B. F. Ford heard her cries. They were two blocks away. They ran to the scene of the crime and the girl freeing herself altogether, screamed again so clearly that the negro was frightened and running out of the bedroom door, went down the front stairs just as two men, alarmed by the cries came to the house The officers were but a short distance behind and after a chase of one block the negro sought to hide himself in the basement of the Charles Freel store at 419 East Grand avenue.

Entering the basement, the officers and the two men first in the persuit, captured the negro after a fight in which Nivert was cut on the scalp by a police club and slightly bruised on the body and face.

Nivert was bareheaded when captured, but a hat, suposed to be his, was found on the bed beside the girl he is alleged to have attacked. He denied in jail that he wore a hat, but laid claim to a dark cap which cannot be found.

Nivert is 34 years old, tall, yellow skinned, with a number of scars on his head and body, the marks of fights. High up on the back of his head a silver plate has replaced a part of the negro's skull, cracked in a fight in Kansas City six years ago when, according to the scars on his body, he was badly butchered.

DEMANDS $50,000 DAMAGES.

Mrs. Geo. C. Chapman Brings Action In District Court.

Des Moines.—Mrs. Ida Clapp Smith has been made defendant in a suit for $50,000 damages brought against her by Mrs. Alcie Atherton Chapman, who avers that Mrs. Smith has alienated the affections of her husband, George C. Chapman. All are prominent in Des Moines and connected with some of the best known families here. Judge C. C. Cole is acting as attorney for Mrs. Chapman. Both Mrs. Ida Clapp Smith and Mrs. Chapman have been moving in the best and most exclusive society in Des Moines, and the sensational action will cause consternation among their many friends. The big suit grows out of a pleasant little dinner for two arranged by Mr. Chapman which was in the Savery cafe. He and Mrs. Ida Clapp Smith were the two. And they were just in the midst of the tete-a-tete when Mrs. Chapman walked in. No scene was created and the two were allowed to midst of the tete-a-tete when Mrs. suit was the direct and immediate result. Mrs. Smith seemed confident that a settlement would be effected or that the entire matter would blow over, and it was later rumored that no petition would be filed as a settlement had been reached at a conference.

ATHLETES MEET PRESIDENT

OLYMPIAN VICTORS RECEIVED AT SAGAMORE HILL.

Each Is Warmly Praised—Mr. Roosevelt Tells How Proud He Is of Their Achievements.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—With a gun from the local yacht club booming a rousing welcome, the American Olympic team, victors in the recent events in London, steamed into the waters of Oyster bay Monday for their visit to President Roosevelt.

When they left their boat and reached the top of Sagamore Hill Mr. Roosevelt was on his veranda where he had been scanning them eagerly for several minutes as they approached, two abreast, whistling "A Hot Time in the Old Town To-night."

James E. Sullivan, the American commissioner, was first to be received by the president. He acted as master of ceremonies, presenting each one of his charges in turn. The president grasped each one by the hand and to each he spoke a few words of mingled greeting and commendation.

John J. Hayes, the Marathon hero, had the distinction of being the first to be presented.

"I am proud of you," said the president to him as he gave him a vigorous hand-shake, "your feat was marvelous. You won a great race and I am glad of it."

Tewanina, the Indian, who came in ninth in the Marathon race, pleased the president immensely.

"I am glad, indeed," he said to him, "that a real original American Indian competed for America and represented the country abroad. It was a fine showing that you made."

So it was with each and every one of the team that had made the trip and when the last man had been grasped by the hand and his heart cheered by the president's words and he had passed into the dining-room and partaken of refreshments, Mr. Roosevelt followed in, and then had to listen to some cheers for himself.

Some one proposed three cheers for "the greatest president the United States ever had, Theodore Roosevelt," and everybody responded. Mr. Roosevelt then addressed the athletes briefly.

Spanish War Veterans Meet.

Boston.—Over 3,000 veterans of the Spanish war are gathered in this city for the fifth annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans, which opened Tuesday. The Philippines were represented by a delegation that arrived by train from New York.

The chief event preliminary to the opening of the encampment was the banquet tendered by the state branch at the Quincy house Monday night to Walter S. Hale of this city, the commander-in-chief.

Pays Off Immense Loan.

New York.—The Trust Company of America of New York, upon which a sensational run was precipitated during the financial panic of 1907, has managed its business so successfully as to enable it to pay off a loan of $25,000,000 which it then effected.

GIANT TREES ARE IN DANGER.

Fire Threatens the Famous Calaveras Group of Sequoias.

Sonora, Cal.—The Calaveras group of big trees, one of the natural wonders of the world, is in serious danger of destruction by fire. Starting from sparks thrown off by an engine used to haul logs on Monday last, the fire quickly spread to the heavy timber a mile west of the north grove of big trees.

The first point of telephonic communication with the grove is Murphy's, some 15 miles distant, and from this place late Wednesday word was sent that the fire had reached the edges of the grove of mammoth trees and, driven by a strong wind, was threatening to wipe out everything before it. There is little if any undergrowth of bush among the big trees, however. It is hoped and believed by the settlers and rangers that the fire will not readily take hold of the living trees. The dead giants, however, will probably be destroyed. Already "The Mother of the Forest," a great dead hulk at the edge of the grove, is aflame.

POLICE ARREST WRONG NEGRO.

So Says Springfield Woman Assaulted by Colored Man.

Springfield, Ill. — At two o'clock Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Earl Hallam signed a statement that George Richardson is not the negro who assaulted her on the night of August 14. A warrant is reported to have been sworn out for the arrest of another negro named Ralph Buston, who may be implicated in the assault.

It was the alleged assault charged against Richardson and his arrest and removal to Bloomington, Ill., that precipitated the recent bloody race riot.

Twelve more indictments were returned by the special grand jury Tuesday in connection with the recent riots. Ernest Humphrey, alias "Slim" Humphrey, was indicted on a charge of murder, the true bill implicating him in the murder of Scott Burton, the aged negro who was lynched at Twelfth and Madison streets.

Burglar's Conscience Hurt Him.

Philadelphia.—Joseph G. Mantell surrendered himself to the police here Friday, declaring that he was wanted for robbing the home of Miss Bertha Brand in City avenue, Brooklyn, on October 28 last, and also the home of William Gluck, fourth assistant examiner in the patent office at Washington. The latter robbery was committed, he said, on November 9, 1907. "I have been tortured by my conscience and can get no rest day or night, so I want to face trial and end it all," Mantell told the detectives.

On visiting the Wyckhoff tle they are introduced to two other s, both known as Agatha Wyckhoff. dinner three other Agatha Wyckhoffs introduced and the plot revealed. e deceased step-father, in an eccentric ment, made his will so that the real atha, heiress to his fortune and the tle at Wye, England, might wed her nity. Thus Mrs. Armistead, chaperon, s in duty bound to keep the real atha's identity unknown and suitors e invited to tryout for the hand of the ress.

"They're all Americans," replied the commodating lady—"even my sec- tary. She was at my niece's board- school, and by my arrangement aperoned the party of girls on their p over. When I met her she seemed ch a bright, capable little thing I en- ged her at once for my secretary, my eyes are bad. As for the Agath- one of them roomed with my niece school, another she met while visit- her friends in holiday time, anoth- she became acquainted with quite accident on the train, and the oth- came in answer to an advertise- nt."

"Wonderful that so many girls could found who were all so attractive," aid again.

"They are attractive, aren't they?" e assented; "and their frocks are tty, too. I made them get colored ings to wear this second year of urning for my brother-in-law. I do hate to see young girls wearing ck, and every article they put on mes from New York city."

"I thought as much," I said. "I ought they seemed more like Amer- n than English girls. And how g has your niece been here?"

I asked the last question because I s afraid the conversation was going stop and I felt that in another mo- nt Mrs. Armistead might inad- rtently drop a hint as to the identity the real Agatha. It was very ex- ing.

"Nearly a year. This is the last six eks of the second year of mourning, d the first of the two years she is spend with her girl companions at e castle. You know my brother-in- w disapproved of girls 'coming out,' they call it, and placing themselves the marriage market. He'd rather ve the young men come to see them their own homes, so he put off my ece's presentation as long as he uld, hoping she'd be married before at time, I think."

"And have you entertained many ung men as yet?"

"My dear man! I should think we d, nearly two dozen at least. And ey were too funny, unobtrusively ing to discover which was the girl th the money, although that is really ainst the spirit of the whole thing, it is contrary to the object of the ill."

At this point I grew rather thought- l.

"Dear, dear!" she went on, "how utiously they did go about their urtships! They were all after the oney, I fear. This is a mercenary orld! All the girls have received ers, but none of them has accepted."

"What hard-hearted misses they ust be!" I exclaimed. "Are they all e that in America, I wonder?" And couldn't help thinking of that girl I et last summer.

"I don't know, I'm sure," replied rs. Armistead. "It's not like English rls. They're always ready and will- g to marry off whenever their mam- s have provided eligible partis for em. But I can understand it in this se. No one of the Agathas is more an 22 years old, and it's great fun r them, this care-free life at Castle yckhoff. They have everything they n possibly want that money can y—not one of them has ever been England before, and they are all de- ted friends. What wonder that the arm and novelty of their somewhat usual life have not yet worn off. eally it isn't strange to me that no e of them has been able to make up r mind to leave the enchanted cas- —though, to be sure, I think that ung Murray Brancepeth very nearly rried off one of our Agathas. She ems to fancy him, and between our- lves I think he'll win her yet."

"And if he does he'll win the twenty illions with her, I suppose?"

I said this coolly, in a matter-of-fact ne, and waited for her denial or ac- iescence, successfully concealing my terest in the reply.

But she gave me neither; she began to say something, but checked herself suddenly and looked at me admiringly.

"You're a clever man," she said, in- stead, "but you can't get any informa- tion out of me. Lots of them have tried, but it's no use. Besides, it isn't fair.

CHAPTER III.

Disappointed and somewhat cha- grined at Mrs. Armistead's answer, I rose to my feet and prepared to join the young ladies in the drawing room. I had been so interested in discussing Fletcher Boyd's will with Mrs. Arm- istead that I had completely forgotten Vincent. At first I thought he had al- ready left the room, but in a moment I heard him laugh and discovered him actually sitting on the floor before the fire, playing a species of mumble-the- peg with the secretary. Extremely un- becoming conduct for both of them, I thought, and Mrs. Armistead thought so, too, for she spoke sharply to the secretary, who left the room with red- dened cheeks. Vincent, however, was unabashed, and, after holding the door open for her, he followed me to the drawing room, without heeding my re- monstrances. He seldom does heed them, I may say.

It was on the third day of our stay when Vincent and I had begun to feel thoroughly at home at Castle Wyck- hoff, and when Vincent had begun to feel more than thoroughly at home with Agatha First, that I made an important discovery. The morning was rainy, and after breakfast there was nothing to do but to read—that is, until Agatha Sixth came down- stairs. I had found her to be an un- usually well-educated girl and had given her all my attention during the three days I have mentioned. So I wandered into the library and began to explore the tall bookshelves to find something that interested me. And I found it, though it wasn't exactly for what I had been looking. On the lowest shelf I discovered three heavy but new-looking albums. From idle curiosity to look at what I supposed were pictures of the dead barons of Wyckhoff I dusted the first of the big books and began to turn the leaves. I found it full of photographic repro- ductions of oil paintings depicting the ladies of the family, and on the last page of the book I came upon a pic- ture which thoroughly startled me. It was a copy of a full-length portrait of the last Baroness Wyckhoff, whose second husband had been Fletcher Boyd. The picture showed a slender little lady, with straight dark hair, an aquiline nose, and a dark complex- ion, the living image of Agatha Sixth!

Stunned by the importance of my find I closed the book, put back the albums where I had found them and stole from the room. I had a guilty feeling, almost as if I had done some- thing wrong, yet it had been an acci- dent for which no one could really blame me. Full of excitement, I went to find Vincent to acquaint him with my good news, and discovered him in the morning room playing chess with Agatha First, or rather, he was show- ing her how to play, for he was hang- ing over the back of her chair and moving her hand with his hand when- ever it was her move.

"Good-morning, Miss Agatha," I said, pleasantly; "how does the game progress? Is Lord Wilfred an efficient teacher?"

"Very," replied the young lady, short- ly, and both of them looked at me with such insolent hostility that I was obliged to leave the room, murmuring apologies for intruding.

I was rather vexed with Vincent about this; he doesn't show me quite the respect due an older man from a boy of his age. Not that I am old, or anywhere near middle age, but still I am Vincent's senior, and this inci- dent determined me not to communi- cate my discovery to him. Why should I tell him and put a formidable rival into the field? Not that I'm afraid of Vincent exactly, for I have always found that when the girls tire of his fun they are very glad to fall back upon an experienced man like myself, who has seen the world and is ac- quainted with Shakespeare and the musical glasses. Nevertheless, it seemed a pity to invite Vincent to en- ter the lists against me, for I had fully made up my mind to win Agatha Sixth. Not that I am mercenary—not at all. But it had been some time since I seriously considered marrying, and, after all, I thought, why not con- sider it now, and, as long as I was se- lecting a wife, why not pick out one of these six girls? They were all beautiful and accomplished. "And why not," I asked myself, "while I am about it, make it that one of the Agathas, whose title was the honor- able, with twenty millions?" Twenty millions, when you think of it, ought to keep a careful man comfortable for life, and Vincent was smart enough—let him look out for himself.

We spent the evening of that day each according to his fancy—Vincent playing tag and blind-man's buff with four of the girls, while the fifth played on the piano, and I in the next room reading Edmund Burke's speeches aloud, while my adored Agatha Sixth did fancy-work. She really did every- thing very well. Finally Vincent and I took our leave, and when we were in our own rooms and Vincent had wrapped himself in my favorite bath- robe and appropriated my armchair, I was almost tempted to tell him all about it. Just as I was about to begin he spoke.

"Arch, my boy," he said—a disre- spectful method of address, by-the-way, but I let him proceed—"Arch, my boy, do you know I like that girl, Agatha First? She's a true sport, and that plump little one with the blue eyes is a pace-setter."

"Agatha Third, you mean?" I asked. "I was not aware that you had got any further than our introduction with her."

"Oh, yes," said Vincent, as though it were the easiest thing in the world; "I told fortunes with her all after- noon and played tag with her most of the evening yesterday."

"Really, Vincent," I said sarcastical- ly, "that fortune-telling game of yours is a little old. Can't you find some- thing new?"

"What's the use, so long as it works?" he replied, watching the smoke from that nasty pipe of his curl upward to the ceiling. "But I tell you what," he pursued, reflectively, "that girl with the fair hair who played the piano, Agatha Fourth, she's a stun- ner."

"Upon my word, Vincent," I expostu- lated, "where do you find time for so many of them at once? Doesn't Agatha First feel neglected?"

"I suppose so," replied the young in- solent, "but I can't help that. I'm going to give them all a whirl—but Arch'bald"—he was getting sleepy and his pipe had gone out—"I really do like red hair best."

"I don't know what you are talking about," I said, impatiently—"but, Vin- cent, I want to tell you something. I've made a discovery."

"What is it?" he said, without the slightest interest, and I changed my mind again.

"Nothing," I said. "I've forgotten what it was."

Vincent rose, and, stretching him- self mightily, went toward his own room. At the door he turned and smiled one of the smiles he does not often give to men, and I felt that this one was not meant for me.

"I've made a discovery, too, Arch," he said.

I stared at him in amazement, won- dering what was coming.

"What's that?" I asked.

"I've discovered that Miss Marsh's eyes are gray, as gray as stars," he said, only half aloud, and disappeared into his room.

AGATHA FOURTH.

HERE'S PRETTY POINT OF LAW.

Full Confidence Between the Accused and His Defender.

The ethics of the difference between the professional opinion of a paid ad- vocate and the honest conviction of a learned man were set forth by a well- known English barrister who died re- cently. It was a case of murder, and the client and counsel were closeted together. "Smith," said the barrister, "of course, I know you didn't murder the man, but, as a matter of fact, did you do it with the butt end of a re- volver or with a stick?"

"Sir," said Smith, "I swear I am in- nocent." "I know that perfectly well, but you must tell me. For if you did it with a revolver I shall say to the prosecution, 'produce the stick!' and if you did it with a stick, I shall say, 'produce the revolver!'" The client paused and scratched his head medi- tatively. "It was the butt end of a revolver, sir." "That's right!" said the counsel; "I think I can get you off now."

Number of Heathens.

In the world's religions those who are usually termed heathen have a larger place numerically than all the other religious divisions. Mohamme- dans, Buddhists, Brahmins and all other non-Christians except the Jews number together about 1,400,000,000, leaving but about 448,000,000 to be divided among the Roman Catholics, Protestants of all denominations, Ar- menian, Greek, and Abyssinian Cath- olics and Jews.

How Hammer of Death Struck James.

The old parish church of Plumstead, which has just been reopened, is prob- ably at least 1,000 years old. The pic- turesque churchyard, a cherished haunt of the poet Bloomfield during his visits to Shooter's Hill, contains a delightfully choice "derangement of epitaphs." One of these, on "Master James Darling, aged ten," teaches a lesson of moderation during the pres- ent cherry season to the youth of other places besides Plumstead. Speaking from his tombstone, Master Darling exclaims:

"The hammer of Death was give to me
For eating the cherries off the tree."

EDITOR TIMES—

Dear Sir:

If it is true, that "Variety is the spice of life," we are receiving it in many ways. We have traveled through Oldedberg, Prussia, Mecklenberg, Saxony, Bavaria, Elsass-Lothering, Baden, Wuerttemberg, Switzerland and Italy. We are stopping at our fifty-second hotel, have rode on sixty-one trains and eleven boats. Not only have we noticed a differance in language and dialects, but fully as much in habit, dress and manner. From a farmer's stand point it is interesting to notice the variety of crops and mode of farming: for a clergyman, the churches and ways of worship; for a lady the ever changing fashion; for a painter, the beautiful landscapes and scenery; for a physiogamist, the different types of humanity, etc. Thus the eye and ear of the observor can feast day after day. Summing up the larger cities, from the impressions they made on us, we consider Breman the most stylish, Hamburg the most American like, Berlin the cleanest, Nurnberg the most peculiar in architecture Zurich the most for pleasure. Rome the most historical and Naples the most filthiest. Since our last letter we visited the Zoological garden in Basel, which has a large collection of wild and domestic animals. The central part of the city was also very interesting for its peculiar old buildings. Our next stop was at Strassburg, a city of 170,000 inhabitants. Here we attended a Jewish worship in a large synagogue on Saturday morning, which was very interesting to us, since it differs from any we had ever seen. As we were about to enter the building we politely removed our hat, but we were told that it was not allowed. In the auditorium, which was filled with men, (a few ladies were seated in the galleries) all wore their hats, most of them wearing silk hats. We will not try to describe the service here, but we assure our friends that it was the most exciting and novel meeting we over witnessed in our life. As it was Masy ascension day, a holy day among Catholics, we attended the service in the great cathedral or "Muenster." We were especially interested in the great organ and the singing by a chorus of 25 male voices. The building is colossal in every way and represents the master work of many architects. It also contains the world renowned "Strassburg clock." We next went to Kehle which lies on the other side of the other side of the Rhine. After a short stop we boarded a train for Meissenheim, where we expected to stay a few hours and look up some distant relatives and the birth place of Mrs. Wessels mother but our presence almost arrayed the whole village and there was no thought of getting away, so we stayed over Sunday. When we left a large crowd accompanied us to the depot and their kindness was almost boundless. Our next stop was as Baden-Baden which is noted for its health giving baths. It is admirably located in a valley with a little stream flowing through the center. Numerous parks are nicely kept in connection with some of the hotels. An old castle on the top of the highest mountain just out side of the city is visited by most tourists. Itt ook us nearly an uearly an hour to climb up, but it was worth the effort.

The next day we were in Karlsruhe and spent much of the time in the botonical and zological garden and the city park. The following day found us in Stuttgart which is an enterpsising city of 182,000 inhabitants. Here we spent a profitable half day in the architectual fair which is being held there from June to October. It represented a number of houses, schools and chapels according to modern plans. A large variety of buildings material from a nail and screw to the finest wood and marble. All kinds of furniture and cooking and heating apparatus and many side lines. As departments it excelled anything we ever saw at a world's fair. Stuttgart has a number of large museums but we only visited one which contained thousands of relics from Africa, India, China, Japan. North and South America and the Isles of the sea. A number of parks with their statues were looked at the old and new king's palace and the great market. An hour's ride brought us to Heilbron which is only a small city of 13,000. From here we made a side trip through the finest fruit region to Oeringen, the place from which the writer's mother departed 60 years ago. We tried to find some traces of her kin folks but in vain. Still the old hills covered with vineyards and the valleys dotted with heavy laden apple trees of which our grand parents had often told us, remained the same. Back to Hilbron and from there through the Necker valley bro't us to Heildelberg. We spent a half day in the old castle which at one time was the finest palace in Germany, but for the last two centuries has been the most historic ruins. We passed thru' the Rupprecht's part 13 century, then the ladies room 14 century, next the dining room beneath which we saw and walked over the wine keg with a capacity of over 52,000 gallons which Herzog Karl Theodor had built in 1751, next the English building with its large chapel down several steps in a large room we viewed the statues of a large number of great men 350 years old, the library built by Louis V in 1520, then along an underground way with small openings toward the valley through a wall 16 feet thick, next the buildings of Otto Henry built 1610, up the octican tower with a winding stairway 128 steps above the main building and many other rooms which we can not all remember. No pen can fully describe these old ruins. Another place of interest was the Holy Ghost church built in the 12 century by the Catholics. During the reformation became the property of the protistants. But since a great many bodies of great men had been entered under the church a compromise was made and a wall built thru' the building For a number of years the Catholics worshiped in one end and the Protistants in the other. From here we go to Worms and on to Frankfort on the Main.

Sincerely,
Rev. G. H. Wessel.

Joe Johnson and daughter were at Clear Lake and Mason City this week Monday.

Will Test Pure Paint Law.

Des Moines.—If the ingredients of paints and oils are secret and therefore an asset of the manufacturers, is the company liable to prosecution in Iowa for failing comply with the state law passed by the Thirty-second general assembly, which compels manufacturers of paints to state the ingredients of their products before they are allowed to sell them?

A test case involving this question has developed from charges filed in Justice Cope's court against A. A. Eberson, a Kansas City paint manufacturer, who exhibited and sold his product at the state fair.

The charges were filed against Eberson by J. C. Tate, a member of the state food and dairy commission, which body is named by the statute to deal with all cases growing out of the section. Mr. Tate purchased a can of paint from Mr. Eberson and the ingredients were not specified on the label.

Mr. Eberson pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Justice Cope. He was tried at once and gave as his defense the fact that the ingredients of his paints and oils are an asset, and that his business would be ruined should they become known.

After a short trial Justice Cope found Eberson guilty and assessed a fine of $10 and costs. The defendant immediately deposited an appeal bond of $200 and declared his intention of taking the case to the highest court.

Law Makers Have Luncheon.

Attorney General H. W. Byers entertained at luncheon at the Savery at 12 o'clock of the third, eleven prominent republicans to discuss the form of a primary law amendment relating to the senatorship.

Senator W. P. Whipple of Benton county and Representative W. L. Harding of Woodbury county outlined to the guests at the luncheon the draft upon which they and other lawyers of the committee have agreed, practically.

It is commonly believed that this form will be acceptable and is likely to be made a law without any serious opposition. Messrs. Whipple and Harding are standpatters.

The important feature of the proposed law, of course, relates to the test of party affiliation, it having been decided that a separate ballot must be used. The form of oath to be administered to the voters seeking to participate in the primary election of a party is adapted from the New York law and is as follows:

That I affiliate with and I in general believe in and am in sympathy with the principles of the -------- party; that it is my intention to support generally at this general election the nominee of such party, and that I have not enrolled with nor participated in any primary election or convention of any other political party since the first day of the preceding year.

Hamery to Appeal to Legislature.

Superintendent Hamery of the Department of Public Safety, desires legislative action to assist him control the social evil in Des Moines. Councilman Hamery will also welcome any assistance that might be offered by any other cities of the state along this line. The desire of the head of the police department is to do away with the trust in scarlet women that has existed, according to evidence now gathered, for eight years or more. Mr. Hamery says it is impossible to absolutely abolish the evil, as it has been tried in other cities and failed. The question now about to be considered by Mr. Hamery is the segregation of the red light district some place where it will be sanitary and at the same time not an eye sore.

Conferences Galore.

Many conferences were held by the standpatters in the legislature on the 3rd. In the early morning, while yet the midnight bells were ringing out, there was a conference of half a dozen of the anti-Cummins people at one of the hotels. Later, when the senate was in session not a standpatter was in his seat, and a conference was on in which about fifteen participated. It was at this caucus that it was first definitely agreed to stand together if the house standpatters would do the same, in refusing to go into a caucus and in dead locking the joint session against the election of Cummins for United States senator.

Will Elect Senator.

The action of the republican caucus committees in calling a caucus to nominate a party candidate for United States senator for the short term was made necessary by the defeat in the house of all motions to adjourn and postpone action on the senatorship and by the adoption by the house of the senate concurrent resolution providing for a joint session of the assembly next Wednesday to elect a senator for the short term. It was commonly reported that the standpatters offered to combine with the democrats for the Iowa plan if the latter would vote adjournment. Standpat members of the republican caucus committees declined to act in the calling of the caucus. The standpatters maintained the utmost secrecy concerning their conference. It leaked out, however, that about twelve senators and about as many house members had signified an intention of signing the agreemet to stay out of the republican caucus and to deadlock the election of senator by voting for other men than the candidate of the caucus if he should be Governor Cummins.

Drys Will Hold Off.

The state amendment federation will not introduce the resubmission joint resolution to this special session of the legislature. The federation fears that the special session may not have the time to give to debate and fight during the legislature that this measure might mean. In view of the fact that the regular election is at hand and the next session of the legislature is to be in January, the Rev. R. T. Chipperfield of Sioux City, president of the federation, does not believe in the advisibility of submitting this constitutional amendment bill to this legislature. The federation would first get in touch with the members of the legislature on this bill after the election this fall. J. A. Harvey of Perry, a member of the committee, and the Rev. W. C. Barber, secretary, are both in opposition to the proposed plan. Since the announcement of the intention to present this bill the federation has received a number of protests from temperance people from over the state.

Four Big Conventions.

At least four state conventions to be held in Des Moines during September are announced by the Commercial club. On Sept. 4 there will be a meeting at the Savery of those interested in the short courses of agriculture such as have been conducted at Ames and other places over the state in the last year or two. The Iowa Fraternal congress will hold a two days' session on Sept. 15 and 16, and a large number of delegates from the fraternal companies will be present. There will be two state political conventions during the month. The republican state convention will be held on Sept. 9 and the democrats will meet on the 24th.

Pledges Demanded of All Students.

The following statement is to be signed by each pupil who enrolls in the three high schools of Des Moines at the time of his enrollment:

I hereby certify that I am not now a member in any relation, and that I am not pledged to become a member in any relation, of any fraternity, sorority or similar organization; and I promise that I will not become a member in any relation of such organization or organizations during the entire period of my continuance in the public schools of Des Moines. I understand that membership in forbidden societies is, under the rules of the board, cause for permanent suspension from school.

POINTER BY THE PICKPOCKET.

Best Method for the Protection of a Diamond Stud.

"An acquaintance of mine had a queer experience the other day," said a man who has not much faith in anything. "A short time ago he was introduced to a pickpocket by a friend. The pickpocket is one of the best in the business.

"My friend didn't think anything more about him, but the other night he was in a saloon, after he had been celebrating most of the day. He was pretty happy and the pickpocket came in. My friend had a diamond stud in his tie with a screw attachment. The pickpocket walked up.

"'You may not remember me,' he said, 'but I met you the other night with so and so. Take a bit of advice from me. You may lose that shiner of yours if you're not careful.'

Then the pickpocket looked at the diamond. He said the screw attachment wouldn't stop a good thief from getting the diamond, but he could fix it. He fished around in his pockets and produced a rubber band, which he tied around the screw.

"'Now,' he said, 'they can only get your stone by biting it off'"

THREE CURES OF ECZEMA.

Woman Tells of Her Brother's Terrible Suffering—Two Babies Also Cured —Cuticura Invaluable.

"My brother had eczema three different summers. Each summer it came out between his shoulders and down his back, and he said his suffering was terrible. When it came on the third summer, he bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and gave it a faithful trial. Soon he began to feel better and he cured himself entirely of eczema with Cuticura. A lady in Indiana heard of how my daughter, Mrs. Miller, had cured her little son of terrible eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. This lady's little one had the eczema so badly that they thought they would lose it. She used Cuticura Remedies and they cured her child entirely, and the disease never came back. Mrs. Sarah E. AND SHE LEFT HIM GUESSING.

Woman's Directions of Little Help to Traveling Lawyer.

A New York lawyer was called recently to a hamlet in Berks county, Pennsylvania, in the interest of a large coal corporation, and now he is telling this story on himself:

He was driving along a country road and feared he might have lost his bearings. The village he wanted to reach seemed elusive, so he halted in front of a farmhouse to make inquiries.

"Madam," he called out to a broad German woman, who stood looking at him from beneath a "poke" bonnet, "can you tell me how far it is to the next village?"

"Oh, yust a leedle vays," came the response.

"But, my good woman, how far is it? Is it two, four, six or eight miles? That's what I want to know."

"Yah, I tinks so."

And the Wall street lawyer drove on a wiser man.

MELBOURNE'S ARMS OPEN

ADMIRAL SPERRY FORMALLY WELCOMED TO CITY.

Official Landing Day for the American Fleet—Crews March to Church on Sunday.

Melbourne.—Monday was official landing day for the American fleet and Admiral Sperry and the officers of the battleships came ashore formally, in full regalia, and were formally welcomed by the federal and city officials.

Admiral Sperry expressed himself as highly appreciative of the warm welcome extended to himself and the men under him, and the kindly greeting of the Australians, both at Sdyney and at Melbourne, has developed a feeling of gratification throughout the fleet.

Twenty-five hundred men of the ships were given shore leave Sunday, and 1,000 marched through Collins street to St. Patrick's cathedral, where pontifical mass was held at noon. The American blue jackets and marines were preceded by 2,000 cadets and a number of bands were in the procession. The streets were thronged with spectators, who gave the men a hearty welcome. After the services in the church were ended the men were served with lunch in the cathedral hall. Special services were held in all the Protestant churches.

Melbourne.—The streets of Melbourne late Monday night were filled with surging, good-humored crowds numbering hundreds of thousands, all out to do honor to the visiting Americans. The crush in the principal thoroughfares was so great that many women fainted and several persons were injured.

The entire day was set apart to jollification and will ever live in the memory of the inhabitants of Victoria. The federal government tendered a banquet to the admirals and senior officers of the visiting warships at the parliament house, at which Lord Northcote, governor-general of the commonwealth, and Prime Minister Deakin made brilliant speeches. Rear Admiral Sperry, replying in behalf of the American navy, declared that a rupture between the English-speaking nations would be not only a loss but a crime. Admiral Sperry was presented with an address by the commonwealth parliament.

BIG FIRE IN NEW ORLEANS.

Property Loss Is Between One and Two Million Dollars.

New Orleans.—Fire which broke out in the center of the commercial district Sunday afternoon swept over portions of three blocks, destroying a large number of wholesale houses, manufacturing plants and small stores. Originating at Bienville and Chartres streets, the flames worked their way north as far as Conti street, and west towards Royal, bringing about a loss of between one and two million dollars before they were finally subdued.

Several circumstances combined to give the fire a headway which proved hard to overcome. At the time the alarm was turned in, shortly before three o'clock, the New Orleans firemen were in the midst of their annual picnic at a suburban park, and the engines and patrols responded with a mere handful of men. It was fully an hour before the department was in a position to make anything like a successful fight against the fire, and then the handicap against it was added to by an inadequate supply of water.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

"Look here!" grumbled the old farmer. "This here almanac is a fraud. It predicted snow for yesterday and, by gum, it was hot as blazes all day."

"But my dear sir," responded the bland almanac peddler, "it snowed up at the north pole yesterday."

The old farmer's jaw fell.

"It did?" he drawled slowly. "Wal, I reckon the almanac is all right then. It did tell the truth, didn't it?"

Weak Kidneys

Cause more trouble than any other organ of the body. The function of the kidneys is to separate inorganic salt and water in the process of circulation, and to remove them and the attendant poisons from the body through the bladder. Therefore when the kidneys become diseased and weak they are naturally unable to perform their work properly, and pains in the back, inflammation of the bladder and urinary disorders are the result. It is imperative that a prompt relief be afforded, which is impossible unless you remove the cause.

promptly eliminate poisons from the system and at the same time make the kidneys well and strong.

For Weak Kidneys, Backache, inflammation of the bladder and all urinary troubles DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are unsurpassed.

A Fatal Accident.

Saturday, Clifford Howlett of Erin township was in the field pitching bundles on a wagon. He saw a mouse and went behind the horses to get it. The team became frightened and ran, knocking him down when one of the wheels ran over his head and crushed his skull so that he died instantly. Clifford was a promising young man and it seems awful that life was snuffed out so quickly without warning. —Garner Democrat.

Travel.

From the days of Herodotus and Marco Polo, travel has been recognized as an educative and civilizing experience. A year on the continent of Europe is considered the best possible "finishing" course for English and American youth whose parents can afford it; but it is not so commonly perceived that a great and valuable advance is steadily going on in this country by virtue of the interchange of visitors between north and south and east and west. It is a commonplace that the United States presents great diversity of climate, and that it has been peopled from many different nations, of widely varying habits of life and thought. Such a diversity of elements united in one national entity would be a great source of weakness were it not for the constant travel for which Americans are noted. Much of this is due to the annual conventions of national organizations. The Christian Endeavor society, the National Educational association, the Grand Army, and many other bodies meet once a year, each time in a new place; and special railroad rates induce large numbers to visit cities which they might otherwise never see. The local pride of those who act as hosts insures a full appreciation of whatever is of interest in the surroundings; and the interchange of hospitality draws people from the different sections more closely together, and gives them an opportunity to broaden their outlook and get new points of view. In a smaller way, hundreds of trade associations and fraternal orders are doing the same thing for their members. The influence of it is probably greater than any one can see, declares the Youth's Companion. It has demonstrated the fact that hospitality is not the exclusive possession of any one section; that communities which differ widely in their views on many matters may each have good reason for the faith that is in them; and in the end it will greatly help to form and foster a feeling of national solidarity. Even the gain in mere geographical knowledge is something. "I have seen wonderful crops of corn and wheat in my country," said a recent western visitor to the New England coast, "but this is the first time I have ever seen rocks growing out of the water."

This is a skeptical age, notwithstanding the fact that there are many "easy marks" who can be readily "worked" by appeals to their credulity. A Hindoo hypnotist out in Ohio had a lively experience owing to the prevalent doubt as to the genuineness of his exploits. He professed to hypnotize a young girl and bury her in a grave in which she was left for nine days. But certain unbelievers alleged that a tunnel led to the grave, that the coffin had a false bottom and that the girl's pretended hypnotic sleep without food was a "fake." So wrought up were some of the crowd, says the Troy (N. Y.) Times, that there were threats of "gun play" and general commotion. The excitement calmed down, but while it lasted there was every prospect of a row. The man from Ohio nowadays much resembles his fellow-American from Missouri. He wants to be shown.

The post office department makes an announcement which will be of international interest. The concurrence of the British postal officials having been obtained, an order has been issued that, commencing August 15, there shall be admitted to the parcel-post mails exchanged between the United States and Great Britain parcels, without regard to the value of the contents, which do not exceed 11 pounds or five kilograms in weight nor measure more than three feet six inches in length and six feet in length and girth combined. The postage rate in the United States for parcels going to Great Britain is 12 cents per pound or fraction of a pound. This addition to parcels post facilities will prove a notable convenience.

There might well be more such attacks on summer resort marriages as was given on a recent Sunday by the vicar-general of the Catholic diocese of Trenton, N. J. A pleasure resort had advertised for a couple to be married in public, and the vicar-general devoted a sermon to the matter. This is the way divorce dockets are recruited.

POSTOFFICE ROBBED.

Two Highwaymen Grab a $250 Bundle of Currency.

Bloomfield.—Just after Assistant Postmaster Frank Brown had cashed a small money order for a stranger, his attention was called by another man to the next window and the moment he turned his back the first stranger grabbed a bundle of currency containing $250 and with the second man ran from the building. Brown immediately notified the marshal of the robbery and soon the whole city was out after the two men. The robbers succeeded in eluding their pursuers and made for Belknap. An automobile was pressed into service by Bloomfield officers and one of the robbers was captured in Belknap. The other boarded a train, but left it about a mile east of Belknap and a posse began scouring the surrounding country for him. The man arrested was brought back to Bloomfield and identified as the robber who grabbed the money. The officers took $181 in currency from his pockets. He gave his name as James Brons and claims to be from Wisconsin. He will not talk of the affair.

METHODISTS AT CLARINDA.

Bishop Spellmeyer Opens District Conference.

Clarinda.—Bishop Spellmeyer called the Methodist Episcopal conference of the Des Moines district to order in the Chautauqua auditorium at 9 a. m., September 9, with the largest attendance in the history of the conference. Only the routine work of the opening organization took place that morning. In the evening there were addresses in the auditorium. Col. Hepburn welcomed the visitors to Clarinda in an eloquent address at the first meeting of the session. The auditorium was well filled with the early arrivals.

The chief feature of the present conference will be the retirement of two of th district superintendents, Rev. Griffiths of Council Bluffs and Rev. Hohanshelt of the Creston district, and the selection of two pastors to take their places. It is not expected that there will be many changes in the more important pastorates, although there will be the usual number of changes in the smaller churches. The proposition to reduce the number of presiding elders to four will be one of the new propositions to be discussed.

EX-POSTMASTER SUICIDES.

Pioneer Resident of Iowa City Sends Bullet into Brain.

Des Moines.—H. D. Overholt, aged 8th.— Judge Howell in district court Iowa city, shot and killed himself in a room on the fourth floor of the Kirkwood hotel Tuesday morning, Sept. 8th, at 8:30

Mr. Overholt left his daughter's home, 930 Third street, after breakfast and went down town. He has been in a nervous condition for some time and his family at once began a search for him. At last a glance at the register of the Kirkwood showed his name. "H. D. Overholt, 930 Third street," and Clerk A. A. [illegible] went with Mr. Woodbridge a son-in-law, to the room where the body was found.

The door was unlocked but closed and on the floor in front of the dresser the dead man lay in a tumbled heap. He had fallen out of the chair in which he sat as he fired the fatal buttet. The 32-calibre Smith and Wesson revolver lay on the floor beside him and the narrow stream of dark, dried blood on the cheek pointed to the hole in the forehead where death entered. Coroner Iver Newlen viewed the body before it was removed to the undertaker's from the hotel room and decided after an investigation that an inquest will not be necessary.

Muscatine Claims 19,200

Muscaine.—That Muscatine, Iowa, is a rapidly growing city was demonstrated when, with the publication of a new directory, it was found that the population is now 19,200. Last year the officials census showed the population to be 15,400, and a comparison makes the increase almost 4,000 in twelve months. Industrially, the city is also advancing, more than $2,000,000 having been spent in building during the year.

An unusual yield of barley is reported from the Ford Thompson farm near Albion. The grain has just been thrashed and yielded sixty-three bushels to the acre.

NEW IDEAS AT THE FAIRS.

Educational Work Planned by Two Associations.

Iowa Falls.—Two fair associations in this part of the state propose to do an effective educational work along lines that are prominent in public interest at the present time. In Cerro Gordo county an exhibit will be made of all the weeds common to this part of the state, and experts will give instructions on the best known methods of extermination, with a view to conducting a thorough and systematic war on these pests. In Marshall county an exhibit of tuberculosis in stock will be made, with a view to familiarizing stockmen and farmers with symptoms and effects of the disease in stock, with a view to eradicating the trouble. No live specimens will be shown, because of the danger of contagion, but diseased parts will be exhibited, showing that the disease does not manifest itself externally, but grows on some organ and gland internally. The benefits of the tuberculin test will be emphasized as a practical and sufficient test, in combating the spread of the tuberculosis in stock.

BODIES TELL TALE.

Four Are Found in Vicinity of Des Moines.

Des Moines.—After weeks of quietness in police circles, Charles Corson killed Alec Yant, a negro, Saturday night. From tha ttime until late Sunday evening, the 13th, new discoveries were made of murders, suicides and attempts at suicide. Mystery surrounds two of the cases, those of Grant G. Oliphant, the insurance man, who has been missing for nearly three weeks, and Miss Lucy Hanley. The latter case was thought to be merely one of suicide when an effort was made to locate the young man mentioned in a note left by the girl. The it was learned that he had disappeared the day following the girl's disappearance.

The other cases, those of E. G Thompson, a well known farmer of New Saylor, and Carl Hansen, are declared by the authorities to be plain cases of suicide.

The greatest mystery surrounds the Oliphant case, and Coroner Newlen is of the opinion that a vigorous investigation of it should be pushed

FIGHT FOR $400,000 ESTATE.

Will of Alexander McHugh Is Contested at Ida Grove.

Ida Grove.—A strenuous legal fight for the $400,000 Alexander McHugh estate is scheduled to take place at the coming session of the district court. Widow will be arrayed against nephews and nieces. The last will of the deceased left the entire estate to the widow, there being no children, but now come the nieces and nephews in Ohio and California and seek to set aside this will. They contend that the instrument was not properly executed and that it was not the last will and testament. The case has already been continued through several terms of court, but it is expected to be tried this time. The claimants against the widow are C. W. Tuttle, Laura Tuttle Rouse and Mabel Tuttle Williams.

SHOOTING IS A MYSTERY.

Death of Man Near Hampton Not Fully Explained.

Hampton.—William Buschbaum, a resident of Aredale, near here, is dead as the result of a gun shot wound received in a mysterious manner. In company with John Miller, Buschbaum was out along a creek, and in some manner not explained, was shot with a 22-caliber revolver. The ball entered the abdomen, inflicting a serious wound, but in this condition, Buschbou walked back to town. Miller's friends declare the shooting was entirely accidental, and this theory has been generally accepted. At least no investigation on the part of the authorities has been commenced. The dead man leaves a wife and two children.

Horse Shoers at Muscatine

Muscatine.—At the first annual meeting of the horseshoers of Iowa, held here, it was decided to form a state association. About fifty delegates were present and the meeting was a very enthusiastic one. A number of prominent local people addressed the assembly. Cedar Rapids will get the next meeting according to present indications.

THE CORN RAISERS' NIGHTMARE.

TO JOIN IN GENERAL WAR

LABOR MEN TO TAKE PART IN FIGHTING TUBERCULOSIS.

Announcement Made That American Federation Will Join in Fight Against Plague.

Washington. — American workingmen and workingwomen, represented by the American Federation of Labor, will co-operate with the coming world's congress on tuberculosis to prevent the spread of consumption in workshops, homes and public buildings.

This developed at the session of the executive council of the federation, when the council decided to assume charge of a mass meeting to be held in connection with the congress on Sunday, October 4.

John Mitchell will preside and make an address emphasizing the importance to workingmen of the tuberculosis crusade. Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, will make the principal address. The effect of tuberculosis upon the workers will be proved by statistics, which show that 25 per cent. of all deaths between the ages of 15 and 45 are due to consumption.

It was decided that the American Federation of Labor make every effort to aid in furthering the movement among the people of our country to secure legislation for the conservation of our natural resources.

A resolution was adopted to urgently request President Roosevelt to intervene and prevent the surrender of Jan Pouren to the Russian government. Pouren participated in the revolutionary movement of the Baltic provinces to obtain a freer form of government for the people of Russia. When the revolution failed he escaped to the United States and obtained employment which he followed for more than eight months. Russian spies in the United States ferreted him out and now demand his extradition.

KAISER DOESN'T ENTER FRANCE.

William Changes His Mind About Ascending the Hohneck.

Altenberg, Alsace.—Emperor William disappointed the general expectation that he would set foot on French territory Friday in the course of a sight-seeing trip along the Vosges range. The French authorities forwarded his majesty a hearty invitation to do so and had made every preparation to welcome the imperial visitor. He had intended to ascend the Hohneck, the highest point in this vicinity, which is situated in French territory. From it a splendid view may be had of Remiremont and the valley of the Moselle river. Emperor William arrived here late in the afternoon and decided not to proceed across the frontier.

Commodities Clause Hit.

Philadelphia. — The commodities clause of the Hepburn railroad act was Thursday declared to be unconstitutional by the United States circuit court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania. Judges Gray and Dallas agreed in an opinion, covering 75 typewritten pages, that the clause is unconstitutional. Judge Buffington dissented, but did not file an opinion.

Gans Beaten by Nelson.

Colma Arena, San Francisco.—Battling Nelson clinched his claim to the lightweight pugilistic championship by defeating Joe Gans for the second time at Colma arena Wednesday afternoon. The fight ended in the twenty-first round when Gans, beaten down by a succession of blows from his sturdy conqueror, failed to get upon his feet within the count of ten.

DELAY IN BIG LABOR CASE

Legal Proceedings Against Gompers and Others Are Postponed.

Washington. — The legal proceedings against President Samuel Gompers, Secretary Frank Morrison and John Mitchell of the American Federation of Labor, in which they were charged with contempt of the supreme court of the District of Columbia on account of acts and utterances apropos of the judgment of that court directing them to cease publishing the name of the Bucks Stove & Range company in their "We don't patronize" list, were virtually postponed for two weeks after a brief hearing Wednesday. Justice Gould of the supreme court presided.

The postponement was taken at the instance of counsel for the stove company and in opposition to the expressed wishes of Mr. Gompers and his associates, who complained of the delay as expensive and unnecessary. It was stated on behalf of the company, however, that it would be necessary to examine witnesses as to the issues made by the petition and the answers, and Justice Gould, saying that he saw no necessity for great haste and urging the desirability of affording both sides a full opportunity to be heard, granted the request. He appointed an examiner to take testimony, gave each side 30 days, and announced his own willingness to sit in the case after the facts shall have been ascertained.

BISHOP SPALDING RESIGNS.

Head of Peoria Diocese Retires because of Ill Health.

Peoria, Ill.—The resignation of Rev. John Lancaster Spalding, bishop of the diocese of Peoria, was officially announced from his residence Thursday in the following note:

"Bishop Spalding having been ill three years and a half, and foreseeing that some years must elapse before he has hope to resume active duty in the diocese of Peoria, has, after due consideration, resolved to tender his resignation as bishop of Peoria to Pope Piux X." The bishop is now in his sixty-ninth year and still suffers from the paralysis which brought him near to death."

Bishop John L. Spalding.

Deposit Guaranty Law Upheld.

Guthrie, Okla.—The supreme court Thursday upheld the validity of the depositors' guaranty law, denying the injunction prayed by the Noble State bank to restrain the state from levying a one per cent. assessment upon the deposits of the bank. It was contended that the law is unconstitutional in that it levies on and takes private property without consideration. On this point Judge Huston in the Logan county district court overruled the bank and denied an injunction, the case then being appealed.

My new knowledge, while it robbed e affair of its piquant mystery—for had decided that Agatha Sixth was truth the real Honorable Agatha—ade my game even more exciting, w that the stakes were assured. I with Agatha Sixth, walked with r, talked with her, and played chess ith her all the first week; and as early as I could make out Vincent's rogram ran something like this: Be- re breakfast he took a horseback de with Agatha Fifth; after break- st he played golf with Agatha First; nnis with Agatha Third; and took gatha Second out sketching. In the fternoon Agatha Fourth played hopin to him by the hour. Agatha ixth he had not approached, fearing e, as was natural. In the evening e played games with them all or re- red into the library with Agatha ifth, who seemed to have lost her ead over him completely.

This program he repeated day after ay with reckless lack of generalship nd yet every now and then, to my urprise and disgust, I caught him eep in his unfortunate flirtation with rs. Armistead's secretary. It wasn't air to the poor girl, and I told Vin- ent so plainly. We were sitting on he low stone balustrade of the castle —Vincent in riding clothes and look- ng as fine a lad as any in old England. He was waiting for Agatha Fifth to go iding with him, although it was later han usual, all of us having break- asted. For myself, I wore my tennis hings, which become me greatly, if do say it, for I intended to play a et with those tennis fanatics, Agatha econd and Agatha Third, as the aris- ocratic Agatha Sixth was a late riser nd had not yet come downstairs.

"No, Vincent," I said, "it won't do. lirt with all the Agathas, if you must, ut when it comes to the secretary, let er alone. To say nothing of what is ue her, think of the time you're asting. We have only six weeks—think of it—six weeks to make a try or twenty millions of dollars!"

"You forgot to say that a wife goes long with the filthy lucre," he said, nd somehow I felt uncomfortable. Vincent has a faculty for making one eel uncomfortable. It makes me quite ngry—he's no better than the rest of s, but he's so confoundedly innocent bout some things.

I was going to explain to him that e needn't speak as if he thought that I were the sort of a man to marry a irl merely for her money—when his face lighted and he spoke more ration- ally.

"Gad," he said, "what a rare lark it would be to toss up a coin and take a chance at it. Six to one only—you'd have a good show to win out!"

"How foolish you are, Vincent!" I responded. "Suppose you took a chance at it, as you say, and just proposed to any one of them, when you had made no attempt to win her—wouldn't she know you were fortune-hunting? And if it should happen to be the real Agatha she'd refuse you on that account because it would defeat the object of her father's will; and if it were not the real Agatha she'd refuse you, too, because she'd know she had no fortune to give you."

"Of course," said Vincent, sighing, "you're right about that. But I tell you, Archibald, I'm not flirting with Miss Marsh. She's an awfully sensible little girl, and I go to her for advice about the course I'm pursuing with the Agathas. I need encouragement, you know; it's all such a beastly mess. One doesn't know with which one of the attractive young ladies to fall in love. It's so difficult to decide with that twenty millions hovering in the background. Just think, Arch, what the governor would say if his penniless younger son should bring that amount into the family. And the daughter of a baroness, too, it would be such a match! I can just see how tickled he'd be to have his youngest so well provided for. The dear old governor!" And Vincent's eyes moistened. "So you see," he went on hurriedly, "Miss Marsh's attitude toward me is entirely friendly. She is merely the confidante of my difficulties of the heart, and her taste, I find, is excellent."

"It is also changeable," I said dryly, "if the course you have been pursuing is through advice of hers."

Vincent smiled. "And then you know," he went on, ignoring my thrust, "she's writing a very interesting book, the history of the barons of Wyckhoff, and I'm helping her. I'm awf'ly interested in genealogy, y' know."

This was true. Incongruous as it may seem, Vincent's one serious hobby—I don't consider his paint-dabbling serious—which had to do with research and scholarship, was his love for things ancient in general, and family trees in particular. It had been Baroness Wyckhoff's wish that some review of the lives of the barons of that name should be made, since the last one had died, and Mrs. Armistead had given her secretary this work to do. I eyed Vincent searchingly as he spoke, but his face was so thoroughly unconscious that my suspicions were disarmed completely.

"Yes," he said, "there are a lot of very interesting old books in that library."

"Yes," I said, "that's why you and Miss Marsh spend so much time there, I suppose. I'm glad to hear it. I really couldn't see what you thought was so attractive—" A sharp blow in the chest interrupted my speech.

"Shut up," Vincent hissed in my ear; "don't you see Miss Marsh?"

As he spoke that young person tripped lightly up the wide stone steps of the veranda and was about to pass on when Vincent stopped her.

"Good morning," he said, his hat in his hand. "Are you beginning work so early?" and he looked at the papers carried under her arm.

"Yes," she said, "I have a new idea about that last chapter we wrote."

"I'm sorry I can't be with you this morning," he answered, and she passed into the house. She wore a white frock and a natty little blue apron, and I must admit looked very fresh and dainty, but Wilfred's tone was so cool and conventional that I mentallly freed him again from my accusation that he was in the midst of a warm flirtation, though you will agree with me that appearances had been very much against him.

But that evening when he and I were having our nightly bedroom colloquy I was obliged to admit that Vincent, considering his methods, had accomplished a great deal. With some embarrassment he related to me the tale of his horseback ride in the morning, and I must say it completely unsettled my belief in the discovery I had made as to the identity of the real Honorable Agatha Wyckhoff. Neither Vincent nor I knew what to make of it.

"Do you know, Arch," he said, striding up and down my room, "I've been through a horrible experience to-day? It was an awful shock to me, and a lesson."

"I'm glad it was a lesson," said I. There are so few lessons in Vincent's life.

"Yes," he said, "I felt like a beastly cad. And I don't see what I've done to deserve it. Of course, I've held her hand a couple of times—"

"That bad habit of yours again," I murmured.

"And I've looked at her a lot—she's got the most soul-moving eyes y' know."

I didn't know, but I nodded. The boy was very much in earnest.

"But I never thought," he went on—"I never thought she—she—" He stopped and the words seemed to stick in his throat.

"Great heaven, man," I cried in my impatience, "get it out. What didn't you think she'd do?"

"I never thought she'd really care for me," he muttered, shamefacedly, and turned his back on me.

"What do you mean?" I demanded, impatiently. He is most exasperating.

"Why, this." He ceased his restless walk and stood on the hearth rug, facing me. "We'd been out about an hour this morning, Agatha Fifth and I, and we'd been getting up into the hilly country, when suddenly we came out of the woods and saw below us the grandest stretch of country you can imagine."

AGATHA FIFTH.

Here he broke off and went into a rhapsody over the sky-line and the grazing sheep, and said something about Utopia and Eden and other things like that, until he got through at last and came to the interesting part. They can't help going on like that, these artist fellows, and Vincent never losses an opportunity to get in a bit of description.

"Well," he continued, "I was just enjoying that view and saying nothing, when she stopped switching the tops off the harebells with her crop and, turning those warm hazel eyes of hers on me, she said in a low voice, as if what she said didn't matter at all, 'I love you!'"

"What!" I shouted. "She didn't?"

"She did," asserted Vincent ruefully, but with firmness—"She did. Just like that, out of a clear sky. Simply folded her hands and looked at me and told me she loved me."

"Angels and ministers of grace, defend us!" I ejaculated. Nothing else seemed adequate. "What under the sun did you do?"

"Why, I told her simply that I didn't love her, and couldn't marry her, and I was very sorry, but I thought we'd better get on our horses and go home."

"Quite right, if you don't really care," I said, "but oh, Vincent!" as a thought struck me, "just think, she might have been the Honorable Agatha—the real and only honorable!"

"She was!" said Vincent.

I was speechless. This was the end of it, then. I saw the millions taking unto themselves wings, and my pan of milk spilled. The real Honorable Agatha had been discovered, the secret was out, but she had avowed herself as loving Vincent and he had spurned her. After such a performance there was no chance for either of us.

"How do you know she was?" I asked, weakly.

"She told me so herself," he answered.

"But after you refused her, I suppose?"

"Of course," said Vincent, resignedly.

"But, Wilfred, my boy," I cried, springing up, and knocking off my glasses in my excitement, "couldn't you change your mind, couldn't you fix it up? If she really cared I should think you could!"

Though this event would have proved the deathblow to my own hopes, still my interest in Vincent's welfare is so genuine that I couldn't help this anxious expostulation. But again he misunderstood.

"You don't mean that, I know, Arch," he said. "Of course I wouldn't marry the girl when I really don't care for her. But wasn't it the deuce of a position to be in?"

"Oh, Wilfred, Wilfred!" I mourned, "twenty millions right in your grasp, and you threw them away. I wish I'd had your chance. Your poor father, how disappointed he'd be if he knew."

"He'd be more disappointed in me if I had changed my mind and said I would marry her just for the sake of the money," said the young man, crossly, and turning on his heel he left the room. Vincent's getting more quick tempered every day lately, and he used to be so good natured. I'm sure it was only natural and very disinterested in me to bewail for him the result of the unfortunate affair that morning.

HOTEL MAN HAD A CONSCIENCE.

His Letter, with Enclosure, Surely Proved the Fact.

Whoever says that hotel men are without conscience will have an adversary in a young advertising man. He was at one place up in the mountains the other week and determined to stay all night. Before dinner he complained of a slight headache to the proprietor, but the remark was passed apparently without notice. He ate a big meal, but did not enjoy it much because of his headache.

Next day he moved on to his next stop, and upon his return to the city was surprised to find a letter from the proprietor of the house where he had spent the night. It said: "Through an act of carelessness on my part I allowed you to eat the regular dinner the other night—a dinner not suited for a man with a headache. Now I should have prepared some eggs and toast and tea for you, but I allowed you to eat something you did not enjoy. It is, therefore, my duty to apologize, and to make restitution for the same." In the envelope containing the letter was a quarter.

"Howlers" Better Than "Healers."

Rokitansky, the father of the well-known operatic singer, was professor of pathology at the Vienna university. Besides the two singers he had another couple of sons, who had acquired a certain celebrity as medical men. One day, when the old professor was asked how his sons were getting on, he replied, shaking his head:

"You see, friends, two of them heal and the other two howl, and the howlers earn four times as much as the healers."

Night Sweats & Cough.

E. W. Walton, Condr. S. P. Ry., 717 Van Ness St., San Antonio, Tex., writes: "During the summer and fall of 1902, my annoyance from catarrh reached that stage where it was actual misery and developed alarming symptoms, such as a very deep-seated cough, night sweats, and pains in the head and chest. I experimented with several so-called remedies before I finally decided to take a thorough course of Peruna.

"Two of my friends had gone so far as to inform me that the thing for me to do was to resign my position and seek a higher, more congenial climate. Everyone thought I had consumption and I was not expected to live very long.

"Having procured some Peruna, I decided to give it a thorough test and applied myself assiduously to the task of taking it, as per instructions, in the meantime.

"The effects were soon apparent, all alarming symptoms disappeared and my general health became fully as good as it had ever been in my life.

"I have resorted to the use of Peruna on two or three occasions since that time to cure myself of bad colds."

Too Hard to Answer.

"Look here, my friend," said a traveling man to the hotel clerk, "I want to ask you something."

"What is it?"

"Why is it that you people always holler 'front' whenever you want a bell boy?"

"Why do we holler 'front?' Why, because—er—simply because it's—Looky here, young feller, do you want to know more about this business than I do?"

The extraordinary popularity of fine white goods this summer makes the choice of Starch a matter of great importance. Defiance Starch, being free from all injurious chemicals, is the only one which is safe to use on fine fabrics. Its great strength as a stiffener makes half the usual quantity of Starch necessary, with the result of perfect finish, equal to that when the goods were new.

Shower of Sulphur.

Charolles, a small town 30 miles from Macon, in France, has recently been visited by a shower of sulphur. The roofs, gardens, fields, vineyards, rivers and ponds were covered with a yellow dust, and for some time the peasants in the fields were troubled by a sulphurous biting odor which made breathing difficult.

More Dignified.

"Good night, you precious lamb!" said the mother, with the liberty one sometimes takes, even with one's son, at bedtime.

EDITOR TIMES—

Dear Sir:

The cool and dreary weather of the last two weeks and the falling of the leaves, all make us think of returning home. While our friends write of hot weather in Iowa, the majority of people out here wear over coats and wraps. They all tell us this is an unusual season. The continuous rains have caused much of the grain to spoil in the field. The cool weather is agreeable to the tourist, but the rainy days not, still, the worst weather finds hundreds of tourists on the streets. We have met a great many Americans but today for the first time we met two men from Iowa. As they had just arrived we were glad to get news in general from home. Our last letter was sent from Heidalberg. From there we went to Bensheim and after a visit of two hours through the principal streets we went on to Worms, the city where Luther defended himself before the church diet. A beautiful monument has been erected to his memory in the heart of the city surrounded with beds of flowers, fountains and shrubbery. Worms

Worms was an important city in the middle ages, but in the beginning of the 19th centuay it had dwindeled down from 90,000 to 9000. Of late years it has enjoyed a prosperous season and now counts 45,000 inhabitants Many factories crowd the western shore of the Rhine, among them a tannery which employs 5000. The St. Peter and St. Paul's church are some of the most noteworthy buildings. The former was built in the 11th and 12th century and is a massive building. It needs constant repairing and seems to be breaking down under its own burden. The St. Pauls church is the older of the two and is only used as a museum and contains some rare relics from pre hystoric ages. It also contains some caskets, in which can be seen the skeletons of French and Romans burried many centuries ago. In the gallery is Luther's library, consisting of books, papers and letters.

Our next stop was in Frankfort on the Main, a city of 352,000. The first building which attracts the attention of a visitor, is the magnificent depots, 543 trains daily pass in and out this building and many thousands of passangers. The city was a great business centre for many centuries. At one time it was the place where the German Emperors were crowned. A number of statues and monuments grace the city parks. The zoological garden and the palm garden are some of the finest in Germany.

We spent Sunday in Frankfurt, and enjoyed our stay very much, as the guests of Prof. and Mrs. Junker. On Monday morning the Professor accompanied us to the new deaconess home and hospital, which will be completed in November. It is one of the best arranged and when finished, will be the best equipped hospital we ever saw. We can not here refer to the many things of interest in connection with our three days stay.

An hour's ride brought us to Mazing a city of 92000 inhabitants. The city is closely enterwoven with the history of the Celts, Romans and the wars of middle ages. Its forts were often captured and here and there a vistage of those restless times, may still be seen. From Mazing to Cologne we made the trip via. steamboats, our ticket allowing us to stop off at any landiag. Both shores of the Rhine are dotted with old castles. Nearly every high rocky peak contains a castle or the ruins of one. We will only mention the most interecting ones: Rheinstein, Ehrenfels, Pfalz, Gutenfels, Lorley, Rheinfels, Die Katz, Die Maus, the friendly brothers, Godesberg and Drachenfels. Some of them have been repaired and are now inhabited, others only contain some of the massive walls, towering many feet above the bluffs. A stop of one day in Coblenz gave us time to see this city, situated so beautifully between the Rhine and the Mosel rivers. On the north end of the city, at a point where the two rivers meet, stands the largest statue erected in honor of Emperor Wilhelm I. It rises 120 feet abcve the ground, with a colosal architreve foundation, bearing this inscription: "Never will this kingdom be destroyed, if we stand united." A short distance up the mosal a bridge over 1000 feet long, built 600 years ago spans the river. On the other side of the city on the west banks of the Rhine is the palace of the president of the Rhine province. On the opposite shore, on a high rocky cliff stands a great military fort, rising 400 feet above the Rhine. From here we made a side trip of a few miles to Ahrenberg, a small village. In this place we visited a large church built of pebbles and shells. The decorations are unique and novel, inside and out side as they are divided in panels by differant colors of material. Back of the alter is represented in life size figures, the crusifiction of Christ. To one side in a dark corner, the grave of Mary and on the other side the grave of Christ with a dim light thrown on each to make it very real and impressive. Even the pulpit and large baptismal fount are made of shells and small stone.

Just before we reached Cologne we pass by the bridge, which colapsed a few months ago whereby a number of workmen lost their lives. They are now fishing it out of the river in small sections. Cologne is a city of 428,413 inhabitants of which 300,000 are Catholics and 9000 Jews. Of course the great cathedral is one of the first places which a tourist visits. The foundation of this the greatest of all buildings was laid Aug. 14, 1248 and its completion was celebrated Oct. 15 1880. Of course the work of building was was frequently hampered. The building is 470 feet long, 200 feet wide, the roof is 220 feet high and the twin spires 510 feet. We made several trips around and through the city, but space forbids to make mention of more. One more week and we hope to be back in Bremen to get ready for our homeward journey. We hope to sail from Bremen harbor Sept 5 and if all goes well to again put foot on American soil Sept 15.

Sincerely,
Rev. G. H. Wessel.

Many Items of Interest from Our Correspondent at Des Moines.

Apply Steam Road Rules.

Travelers on the interurban line between Des Moines and Herrold will continue to pay fare to and from the regularly established pay stations instead of the stations on the line where they may elect to get on or off the cars. Pay stations have been established by the company every two miles between Sixth avenue in this city and the station of Herrold. This is declared by the state railroad commission to be a sufficient number, and that the company may not be required to establish additional ones at this time. Decision was made in the case of J. H. Chandler against the Inter-Urban Railway Company. The petition and the decision applies, specifically, to the section of the line described. How many stations there are west of Herrold and whether th etwo-mile limit between pay stations would be held by the commission to apply to all parts of the interurban lines is not known. These matters may be developed on a new case on which further hearing may be held.

Social Evil Bill Passed Up.

The proposed bill providing for the abatement of houses of ill fame as nuisances, which has been prepared by John B. Hammond, state chairman of the prohibition party, has been turned down by the state legislature. Hammond worked with members of the legislature in efforts to induce them to introduce the bill, but all to whom he went refused to take up the matter at this time. They did not declare themselves opposed to the bill, but stated that they did not believe that it should be taken up during the special session. Mr. Hammond declared that he will make another attempt to secure the introduction of the bill when the Thirty-third general assembly meets in regular session. The bill provides for the issuing of writs of injunction against any person or persons in any way associated with the social evil and for actions in equity to abate prostitution as a nuisance.

Need Fire Marshal.

Des Moines insurance men are determined that the office of city fire marshal shall not be abolished and they will present to the city council a petition protesting against the contemplated abolishment of the office, signed by every fire insurance man in the city. The insurance men have been discussing this matter ever since it was stated that the office would be abolished and a petition was prepared and the work of securing signatures begun. Within a half hour signatures had been secured representing nearly fifty companies and the remainde will be secured soon. This is merely a matter of a little time as all the fire companies and agents in the city have agreed to sign and the petition will go to the council.

Memorial Exercises.

The houses of the legislature held extended memorial exercises for departed members of former general assemblies and for Representative Hickey of the thirty-second, the only man lost by this general assembly by death. In the senate exercises were held for Judge P. M. Casady, of Des Moines, senator in the Second and Third assemblies, Senator Dowell making extended remarks; Judge L. C. Blanchard, for whom Senator John Hughes made a few touching remarks and M. A. Dashiel, concerning whom Senators Jamison, of Clarke, and Ericson of Boone spoke feelingly.

School Art Work Abroad.

An art collection of the work done in the West Des Moines schools last year was exhibited during August at the international congress of art in London. This collection was called for by the Prang institute and was first exhibited in Chicago. Because of the high grade of work done the collection was taken to New York City for exhibit, and later entered at the international congress.

Disregard Pure Food Law.

Five complaints have been lodged by the state food commissioner against the Letts-Fletcher company, wholesale grocers of Marshaltown, and A. E. Morse, retailer, charging them with selling flavoring extracts which do not come up to the standard required by law. Both of the firms declare that they are protected by the manufacturers, who guaranteed the extracts.

Allison Honored in Memorial Service.

When both houses of the general assembly met in joint convention to pay homage to the late William B. Allison, all factionalism was forgotten, all partisanship was laid aside for the nearly two hours' devotion to the man who had for forty years been the chief representative of the state in the halls of the nation and had served his country so well. The galleries were filled with visitors from the city and from all over the state, called here by the presence in the city of the judicial convention. The words which were spoken were heartfelt ones, for among the legislators were many who knew Allison as a counsellor, as one who had by words of wisdom guided the state as well as the nation through troublous legislative periods. Lieutenant Governor Garst was the presiding officer. The Hylo quartet furnished the music for the occasion. Throughout the service it was a touching tribute of the state to its greatest citizen. The resolutions signed by the memorial were read by Senator Frudden of Dubuque.

New Home for Grant Club.

The Grant club has closed a formal contract with R. R. Rollins for the new club house to be erected on High street. Mr. Rollins stated recently that specifications had been submitted to the contractors and the work of excavating would probably be started in ten days or two weeks, and the building pushed to completion at the earliest date possible. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy on February 1.

The plans provide for a club house of the most modern type, and the building will be occupied exclusively by the Grant club. This will be the only exclusive club house of the kind in the city. The building will have a frontage on High street of 66 feet, with a depth of 122 feet. It will be two stories high, in addition to a basement. The estimated cost is $30,000. The furnishings for the new club house will all be of the most elegant kind, and an entirely new lot has been ordered, including furniture, silver and tableware, etc. This will all be marked with the club monogram.

Instructions to Shippers.

Secretary G. A. Wrightman of the Iowa State Manufacturers' association is prepairing copy for a pamphlet to be sent to all shippers and manufacturers in the state dealing with the subject of freight claims. The opening paragraph states:

"The first thing to know about is, that you do not have to stand any loss, damage, delay or overcharge caused by the railroads on things you ship out or on things you ship in. This is so, not only for your benefit, but for the general welfare of the country and for the good of the railroads themselves."

The main points of the law on such matters are stated concisely and the proper method of presenting and handling claims is explained and illustrated, together with a description and explanation of the different papers used in the handling of freight traffic of all kinds.

Art Gallery Is Enriched.

The historical department at Des Moines has received the gift of a portrait in oil of the lately appointed bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, Dr. W. S. Lewis of Morningside college at Sioux City. The commission has been given to a successful Iowa artist, Mr. Wilbur A. Reason, of Fort Dodge. Bishop Lewis will sail for the orient in a few weeks, and if the portrait can be completed before his departure from the state he will be induced, if possible, to be present upon the installation of the portrait. Friends and associates of Dr. Lewis who have been associated with him in his great career as a minister and college president present the portrait at the invitation of the historical department.

Lower Levy; More Money.

Althought this year's tax levy is smaller than that of 1907 by 2.6 mills, the appropriation ordinance passed by the city council recently gives all departments practically more money than last year. This is due to the release from old obligations due to the issuance of $180,000 bonds. There is an increase this year in the city improvement fund of .3 mills, in the sewer fund of .5 mills, in the library maintenance fund of .3 mills, and in the bond interest of .5 mills.

B. F. WRIGHT DIES

GREAT FIGHTER PASSES AWAY AT CHARLES CITY.

WAS FATHER OF PROHIBITION

During Strenuous Political Times He Was Actually Threatened by a Mob.

Charles City, Ia., Sept. 14.—B. F. Wright is dead. Victor in many fights in his long career—fights that stirred the whole state of Iowa and left their impress upon its history—B. F. Wright, the doughty warrior, had to yield finally to death, and after a stubborn struggle against fatal disease he succumbed yesterday morning at 7:45 o'clock, at the home of his daughter in this city.

For fifty-one years Mr. Wright was a resident of Iowa, all of that time in Charles City. When he first came from Ohio in 1857 as a young man of 20 to seek his fortune in the new west, he engaged in the mercantile business as an employe of the pioneer house of Ferguson & Co., which was soon succeeded by the firm of Wright and McNabb, the latter now located in San Diego, Cal. But the peaceful pursuits of merchandising were not fitted to the turbulent disposition of Mr. Wright; he loved to "mix it" too much with men in politics and elsewhere to stay in a business that required constant self-repression. So in 1872 he engaged in newspapering and in that field he soon made himself a reputation that went far and wide over Iowa—a reputation for pronounced convictions and a vigorous way of asserting them. In his years of newspapering he was for twenty-five years editor and publisher of the Floyd County Advocate and for eleven years of the Charles City Daily Press . He did not lay down his pen until he had to and even when he was sick in bed, barely able to move, he continued his work by dictating his editorial and other matter to his younger associate, Robert N. Nicol.

B. F. Wright's greatest claim to fame rests in his part in the great struggle for prohibition in Iowa thirty years ago. He has, in fact, been called the "father" of the prohibitory amendment which was adopted by 30,000 majority in the election of June 27, 1882. Whether this is justified or not, he had much to do with planning, executing and conceiving this great measure.

In December of that year, 1878, Mrs. Foster presented the matter to the state meeting at Burlington. The matter was looked upon favorably. In her report she stated that the new idea of a constitutional amendment was not original with her, as "it had been first suggested to her by a gentleman in Floyd county." This gentleman was B. F. Wright.

Mr. Wright took the stump for the amendment and wrote column after column in his newspaper. He made speeches many time when it was dangerous to do so. He was threatened with mob violence at McGregor if he made a speech, but unheeding the threats, he rolled a dry goods box out into the street and got upon it and made his address, The leader and joined the temperance hand and joined the temperance forces and did yeoman service in Clayton county.

Mr. Wright was the third son of Rhoda and Adam Wright, and was born in Vernon, Trumbull county, O., Aug. 20, 1837, and was 71 years old on his last birthday.

Woman Incinderates Self.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 14.—Mrs. Ella Isbester, wife of James Isbester, a business man of Salem, Wis., committed suicide Wednesday afternoon, while her husbond was at Antioch, Wis., to get a physician. Mrs. Isbester, who had suffered from some nervous disorder, went out into an open field, saturated her clothing with coal oil and set it afire. After the woman's clothing and hair were nearly all burned away, her husband returning with the doctor, passed the field. The two men took the still conscious but severely burned woman into the house.

Before lapsing into unconsciousness she said, "I did it to save some one else."

TEN YEARS OF BACKACHE.

Thousands of Women Suffer in the Same Way.

Mrs. Thos. Dunn, 153 Vine St., Columbus, Ohio, says: "For more than ten years I was in misery with backache. The simplest housework completely exhausted me. I had no strength or ambition, was nervous and suffered headache and dizzy spells. After these years of pain I was despairing of ever being cured when Doan's Kidney Pills came to my notice and their use brought quick relief and a permanent cure. I am very grateful."

IN THE OLD MILITIA DAYS.

"Captain, you will appear on the parade ground with your company at ten o'clock for inspection."

"Sorry, colonel, but you'll have to postpone it till to-morrow! I promised my wife that she could use the cannon to-day for a churn!"

An Artist's Generosity.

The famous painter Corot and his sister were joint owners of some house property in the Faubourg Poissonniere. One day one of the tenants—a tailor—came to Corot and said he could not pay his rent.

"What can I do for you?" asked Corot. "I cannot intercede for you with my sister, because I am not on good terms with my family." (As a matter of fact, Corot was regarded as a "failure" by his family.) "However," he added, "here is the money to pay the rent, only don't let anyone know I have given it to you."

The tailor after this used to return periodically when his rent was due and obtain the money from Corot, who remarked on one occasion, "I appear to be very generous, but I am not, because I get half of it back from my sister as my share of the rent."

When the Minister Scored.

A country clergyman, while recently advocating the support of a charitable object, prefaced the circulation of the plate with the following address: "From the great sympathy I have witnessed in your countenances, there is only one thing I am afraid of—that some of you may feel inclined to give too much. Now, it is my duty to inform you that justice should always be a prime virtue to generosity; therefore, I wish to have it thoroughly understood that no person will think of putting anything on the plate who cannot pay his debts." The result was an overflowing collection.

"THE PALE GIRL."

Did Not Know Coffee Was the Cause.

In cold weather some people think a cup of hot coffee good to help keep warm. So it is—for a short time but the drug—caffeine—acts on the heart to weaken the circulation and the reaction is to cause more chilliness.

There is a hot wholesome drink which a Dak. girl found after a time, makes the blood warm and the heart strong.

She says:

"Having lived for five years in N. Dak., I have used considerable coffee owing to the cold climate. As a result I had a dull headache regularly, suffered from indigestion, and had no 'life' in me.

"I was known as 'the pale girl,' and people thought I was just weary. After a time I had heart trouble and became very nervous, never knew what it was to be real well. Took medicine but it never seemed to do any good.

"Since being married my husband and I both have thought coffee was harming us and we would quit, only to begin again, although we felt it was the same as poison to us.

"Then we got some Postum. Well, the effect was really wonderful. My complexion is clear now, headache gone, and I have a great deal of energy I had never known while drinking coffee.

"I haven't been troubled with indigestion since using Postum, am not nervous, and need no medicine. We have a little girl and boy who both love Postum and thrive on it and Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

From Terrible Eczema—Baby's Head a Mass of Itching Rash and Sores —Disease Cured by Cuticura.

"Our little girl was two months old when she got a rash on her face and in five days her face and head were all one sore. We used different remedies but it got worse instead of better and we thought she would turn blind and that her ears would fall off. She suffered terribly, and would scratch until the blood came. This went on until she was five months old, when I had her under our family doctor's care, but she continued to grow worse. He said it was eczema. When she was seven months old I started to use the Cuticura Remedies and in three months our baby was a different child. You could not see a sign of a sore and she was as fair as a new-born baby. She has not had a sign of eczema since. Mrs. H. F. Budke, Sigsueur, Minn., Apr. 15 and May 2, '07."

The Sign of Power.

It is the greatest manifestation of power to be calm. It is easy to be active. Let the reins go, and the horses will drag you down. You must not mistake calmness for dullness or laziness. . . . Activity is the manifestation of the lower strength, calmness of the superior strength.—Swami Vivekannanda.

KANSAS CITY, - - MISSOURI

PRESIDENT URGES ELECTION OF TAFT

REMARKABLE TRIBUTE PAID TO THE NOMINEE OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

HELD UP AS MODEL CITIZEN OF NATION.

In a Letter to His Old Friend, Mr. Conrad Kohrs of Helena, Montana, the Chief Executive Appeals to the Party to Support the Man Best Fitted to Carry On the Policies Inaugurated by the Present Administration.

Mr. Conrad Kohrs, of Helena, Montana, is an old time Montana cattle man and one of the most prominent citizens of Montana. He and the president came into close relationship more than 20 years ago when they were both members of the Montana Stock Growers' association, the president being at that time the representative of the Little Missouri Stock Growers in the association. The intimacy has been kept up ever since. Mr. Kohrs is one of the pioneer citizens of the northern Rocky mountain region and one of the men who has taken a leading part in its great development.

Sagamore Hill,
Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 9, 1908.

My Dear Mr. Kohrs:

I have received your letter about the candidacy of Mr. Taft, the man who I feel is in an especial sense the representative of all that in which I most believe in political life.

Every good citizen should desire to see both prosperity and justice, prosperity and fair and righteous dealing as between man and man, obtain permanently in this great republic. As a people we are justly proud of our business industry, of our energy and intelligence in our work; and it is entirely right that we should ask ourselves as to any given course of conduct: "Will it be profitable?" But it is also no less emphatically true that the bulk of our people, the plain people who found in Abraham Lincoln their especial champion and spokesman, regard the question: "Is this morally right?" as even more important than the question: "Is this profitable?" when applied to any given course of conduct. Indeed, in the long run our people are sure to find that in all dealings, alike in the business and the political world, what is really profitable is that which is morally right. The last few years have seen a great awakening of the public conscience and the growth of a stern determination to do away with corruption and unfair dealing, political, economic, social. It is urgently necessary that this great reform movement should go on. But no reform movement is healthy if it goes on by spasms; if it is marked by periods of frenzied advance, followed, as such periods of frenzied advance must always be followed, by equally violent periods of reaction. To permit the direction of our public affairs to fall alternately into the hands of the revolutionaries and reactionaries, of the extreme radicals of unrest and of the bigoted conservatives who recognize no wrongs to remedy, would merely mean that the nation had embarked on a feverish course of violent oscillation which would be fraught with great temporary trouble, and would produce no adequate good in the end. The true friend of reform, the true foe of abuses, is the man who steadily perseveres in righting wrongs, in warring against abuses, but whose character and training are such that he never promises what he cannot perform, that he always does a little more than makes good what he does promise, and that, while steadily advancing, he never permits himself to be led into foolish excesses which would damage the very cause he champions. In Mr. Taft we have a man who combines all of these qualities to a degree which no other man in our public life since the civil war has surpassed. The honest man of means, the honest and law-abiding business man, can feel safe in his hands because of the very fact that the dishonest man of great wealth, the man who swindles or robs his fellows, would not so much as dare to defend his evil-doing in Mr. Taft's presence. The honest wage-worker, the honest laboring man, the honest farmer, the honest mechanic or small trader, or man of small means, can feel that in a peculiar sense Mr. Taft will be his representative because of the very fact that he has the same scorn for the demagog that he has for the corruptionist, and that he would front threats of personal violence from a mob with the unequaling and lofty indifference with which he would front the bitter anger of the wealthiest and most powerful corporations.

I have naturally a peculiar interest in the success of Mr. Taft and in seeing him backed by a majority in both houses of congress which will heartily support his policies. For the last ten years, while I have been governor of New York and president, I have been thrown into the closest intimacy with him, and he and I have on every essential point stood in heartiest agreement, shoulder to shoulder. We have the same views as to what is demanded by the national interest and honor, both within our own borders, and as regards the relations of this nation with other nations. There is no fight for decency and fair dealing which I have waged in which I have not had his heartiest and most effective sympathy and support, and the policies for which I stand are his policies as much as mine.

Mr. Taft can be trusted to exact justice from the railroads for the very reason that he can be trusted to do justice to the railroads. The railroads are the chief instruments of interstate commerce in the country, and they can neither be held to a proper accountability on the one hand nor given proper protection on the other, save by the affirmative action of the federal government. The law as laid down by the federal courts clearly shows that the states have not and cannot devise laws adequate to meet the problems caused by the great growth of the railroads doing an interstate commerce business, for more than four-fifths of the business of the railroads is interstate, and under the constitution of the United States only the federal government can exercise control thereover. It is absolutely necessary that this control should be affirmative and thoroughgoing. All interstate business carried on by the great corporations should, in the interest of the whole people, be far more closely supervised than at present by the national government; but this is especially true of the railroads, which cannot exist at all save by the exercise of powers granted them on behalf of the people, and which, therefore, should be held to a peculiar accountability to the people. It is in the interest of the people that they should not be permitted to do injustice; and it is no less to the interest of the people that they should not suffer injustice. It is to the interest of shipper, farmer, wage-worker, business man, honest shareholder, and honest manager alike that there should be economy, honesty, intelligence and fair treatment of all. The stockholders must receive an ample return on their investments or the railroads cannot be built and successfully maintained; and the rates to shippers and the wages to employes, from the highest to the lowest, must all be conditioned upon this fact. On the other hand, in a public service corporation we have no right to allow such excessive profits as will necessitate rates being unduly high and wages unduly low. Again, while in all proper ways rates must be kept low, we must always remember that we have no right and no justification to reduce them when the result is the reduction of the wages of the great army of railroad men. A fair working arrangement must be devised according to the needs of the several cases, so that profits, wages and rates shall each be reasonable with reference to the other two—and in wages I include the properly large amounts which should always be paid to those whose masterful ability is required for the successful direction of great enterprises.

If there is one body of men more than another whose support I feel I have a right to challenge on behalf of Secretary Taft it is the body of wage-workers of the country. A stauncher friend, a fairer and truer representative, they cannot find within the borders of the United States. He will do everything in his power for them except to do that which is wrong; he will do wrong for no man, and therefore can be trusted by all men.

Mr. Taft has been attacked because of the injunctions he delivered while on the bench. I am content to rest his case on these very injunctions; I maintain that they show why all our people should be grateful to him and should feel it safe to intrust their dearest interests to him. Most assuredly he never has yielded and never will yield to threat or pressure of any sort, as little if it comes from labor as if it comes from capital; he will no more tolerate the violence of a mob than the corruption and oppression and arrogance of a corporation or of a wealthy man. He will not consent to limit the power of the courts to put a stop to wrongdoing wherever found. This very fact should make the labor people feel a peculiar confidence in him. His record as a judge makes the whole country his debtor. His actions and decisions are part of the great traditions of the bench. They guaranteed and set forth in striking fashion the rights of the general public as against the selfish interests of any class, whether of capitalists or of laborers. They set forth and stand by the rights of the wage-workers to organize and to strike, as unequivocally as they set forth and stand by the doctrine that no conduct will be tolerated that would spell destruction to the nation as a whole. As for the attack upon his injunctions in labor disputes, made while he was on the bench, I ask that the injunctions be carefully examined. I ask that every responsible and fair-minded labor leader, every responsible and fair-minded member of a labor organization, read these injunctions for himself. If he will do so, instead of condemning them he will heartily approve of them and will recognize this further astonishing fact that the principles laid down by Judge Taft in these very injunctions, which laboring people are asked to condemn, are themselves the very principles which are now embodied in the laws or practices of every responsible labor organization. Judge Taft on the bench—as since in the Philippines, in Panama, in Cuba, in the war department—showed himself to be a wise, a fearless, and an upright servant of the whole people, whose services to the whole people were beyond all price.

Let all fairminded men, wage-workers and capitalists alike, consider yet another fact. In one of his decisions upon the bench Judge Taft upheld in the strongest fashion, and for the first time gave full vitality to, the principle of the employers' liability for injuries done workmen. This was before any national law on the subject was enacted. Judge Taft's sense of right, his indignation against oppression in any form, against any attitude that is not fair and just, drove him to take a position which was violently condemned by short-sighted capitalists and employers of labor, which was so far in advance of the time that it was not generally upheld by the state courts, but which we are now embodying in the law of the land. Judge Taft was a leader, a pioneer, while on the bench, in the effort to get justice for the wage-worker, in jealous championship of his rights; and all upright and farsighted laboring men should hold it to his credit that at the same time he fearlessly stood against the abuses of labor, just as he fearlessly stood against the abuses of capital. If elected, he has shown by his deeds that he will be president of no class, but of the people as a whole; he can be trusted to stand stoutly against the two real enemies of our democracy—against the man who to please one class would undermine the whole foundation of orderly liberty, and against the man who in the interest of another class would secure business prosperity by sacrificing every right of the working people.

I would for no consideration advise the wage-worker to do what I thought was against his interest. I ask his support for Mr. Taft exactly as I ask such support from every farsighted and right-thinking American citizen; because I believe with all my heart that nowhere within the borders of our great country can there be found another man who will as vigilantly and efficiently as Mr. Taft support the rights of the working man as he will the rights of every man who in good faith strives to do his duty as an American citizen. He will protect the just rights of both rich and poor, and he will war relentlessly against lawlessness and injustice whether exercised on behalf of property or of labor.

On the bench Judge Taft showed the two qualities which make a great judge: wisdom and moral courage. They are also the two qualities which make a great president.

Sincerely yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Two Capitals for Spain.

Queen Victoria's complaint against the terrible summer heat and the equally trying winter cold of the Spanish capital precipitates the question of advisability of moving the government to Barcelona. Latest indications are that the matter may be compromised; that Madrid may remain the fall and spring capital, while Barcelona may become the summer and winter capital. The reasons for keeping the government at Madrid appear to be largely sentimental and economic; it is the old capital of the long line of Spanish rulers extending back for centuries, and the opposition to moving the government is deep rooted in national pride. The cost of moving the seat of the kingdom would be enormous and the finances of the nation are none too prosperous. Madrid is situated unfavorably from almost any standpoint. The surrounding plateau is treeless, exposing the city to the scorching south winds in summer and to the frigid breezes that descend from the snow-covered Sierra Guadarrama in winter. In contrast with this uncomfortable situation Barcelona's equable climate, due in large part to her position on the Mediterranean, appeals strongly to the Spanish love of ease. Barcelona has long been the commercial center of Spain.

Bracciano, where Cardinal Merry del Val has been ordered to regain his nerve power, is the so-called Capelat of the Maremma. Among other things it is famous for its establishment of mineral waters, the oldest in the known world. A Rome correspondent says it was not until 1852 that these waters were rediscovered by some workmen who came across a vault of Etruscan masonry. This was soon uncovered, and underneath was found a basin filled with objects of gold, silver and bronze. A thermal establishment was thus found which was centuries older than the foundation of Rome. Vicarello is the name of this wonderful establishment of mineral waters. It is almost at the gates of Rome, and was so celebrated in olden times that men traveled from the then known world's end to drink and bathe in the waters. These waters were, and are still, called "Apollinaria." They are limpid, frothy, and slightly acid to the taste. They are excellent to be taken in cases of dyspepsia, neuralgia and nervous complaints. It is thither Cardinal Merry del Val motors every day.

Because some boys in bathing on the Atlantic coast had appealed for help and then laughed at those who came to the rescue, another boy at the same bathing beach, taken with cramps a little while later, called vainly for assistance until he went down the third time. Then some spectators saw that he was not joking, and with great difficulty got him out of the water unconscious, and saved his life. Other boys in other parts of the country have not been so fortunate, and the newspapers have several times this summer reported that the bather was drowned, as those who heard the calls for help thought they were only in fun. It is the old story of the boy who called: "Wolf! wolf!" when there was no wolf. How long will it take the boys and the men, for that matter, to learn the lesson?

To cheat the government of what is coming to it seems to many women but a venial fault. They may have conscientious objections to a customs tariff; or they may have found some inner self-justification in the fact that most men swear off their personal taxes. They will awake to the realization of their culpability at about the same time that all street car passengers thrust their nickels on the conductor who has overlooked them. Perhaps it is not fair, says the New York Mail, to apply the penalties for smuggling against women so rigorously as against men, until they are admitted to full participation in public affairs, and have their social consciences exercised and strengthened thereby.

The fact is that the farm is in a better way than the town. There is a good deal of nonsense about "doing something for the farm." What is needed vastly more, says the Washington (D. C.) Times, is to do something for the town; to make its living conditions better for the unfortunates whom an inexorable social and industrial system draws to the city.

Events of Recent Occurrence Throughout the Commonwealth.

GREAT FAMILY REUNION.

Has Had Three Marriages, Fourteen Births and No Deaths in Past Year.

Webster City.—At the reunion of the Tjernagle family, held at the Nels Peterson home north of Randall, it was decided that it might be necessary to penalize members who persisted in remaining unmarried after a certain age, and also those married members who remain childless. These measures were agitated, not because the Tjernagle tribe is in immediate danger of extinction, but because it was thought only fair that those who neglect to do their share in perpetuating the race should suffer a penalty for such neglect. There were one hundred present at this reunion, and the record of the family shows that here have been 452 descendants of Peter and Helga Tjernagle, six generation back. Of these 87 are related by marriage. There have been in all 92 deaths, leaving 360 descendants living at present—a most remarkable showing. But more remarkable still is the fact that during the past year there has not been a single death in the family. The secretary's record also shows that within the year there have been three marriages and fourteen births. The next annual meeting of this remarkable family wil be held in Stratford.

AGAINST UNIFORM SYSTEM.

City Officials at Ottumwa Convention Oppose Uniform Accounts.

Ottumwa.—Municipal officers in annual convention here unanimously decided that the law providing for uniform municipal accounting in Iowa passed by the Thirty-first general assembly was as a whole impracticable in view of the fact that no one set of books can be used to record all transactions when the transactions in each city differ so widely.

Discussion on this subject was brought about when State Examiner A. D. Sheet of Des Moines read a lengthy report on the working of the new law.

John MacVivar of Des Moines delivered a very interesting talk before the convention boosting the Des Moines plan of city government.

The city clerks and auditors present at the convention held a separate meeting and set on foot a move for the organization of an auxiliary body to the league to be comprised of accounting officers only.

FIRE AT FORT DODGE.

Mulroney Manufacturing Plant Burns with $125,000 Loss.

Ft. Dodge.—Fire destroyed the Mulroney Manufacturing company's plant here with a loss estimated at over $125,000. The cause of the blaze is unknown, but it is thought to have occurred from defective wiring. It was thought for some time that a part of the business district was threatened. The building was a three-story brick and contained stock valued at over $80,000. The company manufactured shirts, overalls and other men's goods. The building and contents are completely ruined. The loss on the building is $35,000 and on the machinery $20,000. The total loss above the insurance is estimated to be between $30,000 and $40,000.

AN IOWA PICTURE CIRCUIT.

Morning View Company Starts Project Along Burlington.

Red Oak.—Along the Burlington railroad towns considered of sufficient size are going to have a new circuit of moving picture and vaudeville theaters. A company has been incorporated in this city for that purpose and several of the projects are well under way. Rooms have already been rented in Creston, Shenandoah, Clarinda and Red Oak. other locations are being sought and altogether fifteen or more theaters will be finely fitted and put in operation. The Comet Amusement company is the name of the new concern and the headquarters will be in Red Oak.

Masked Men Hold Up Iowa City Agent

Iowa City.—Forced at the point of a 44-caliber revolver, Charles Hibbs, Rock Island dispatcher, was compelled by two masked men to hand over $85.80, the contents of the cash drawer and a $30 gold watch. The sheriff and posse were immediately notified and are hot on the trail. It is believed the men escaped west along the track.

NEW RESCUE HOME.

"Father" Coffin Gives Property to Iowa W. C. T. U.

Des Moines.—The deed for the $16,000 property near Fort Dodge given by "Father" Coffin to the W. C. T. U. of the state for a woman's voluntary reformatory has been received by Mrs. Ida B. Wise of Des Moines, one of the state board. The home was formerly used as a home for ex-convicts.

The building, which has twenty-five rooms, is situated on the 700 acre farm belonging to "Father" Coffin, four miles west from Fort Dodge. In the conveyance of the property "Father" Coffin also gives the state union fourteen acres surrounding the home. Back of the house is an orchard of 100 trees planted by "Father" Coffin and in their first year of fruitage. and sixty rods of grapevines.

The home at Fort Dodge will be opened as a voluntary reformatory for women. A woman entering the home is expected to stay two years and take up some line of occupation to study by which she is to earn her living.

No woman will be received into the home twice and will be dismissed only upon approval of the board when it is known that she has reformed. It is just thirty-five years since "Mother" Benedict took up the rescue work in Des Moines and the sale of Benedict home will mean a memorial fund to her name.

FORT DODGE PREPARES

Will Give Judge Taft a Royal Welcome There.

Fort Dodge.—The fact that Fort Dodge is the only town in Iowa where Judge Taft is scheduled to speak is calculated to bring into this city the largest crowd in its history. Citizens are preparing plans on an elaborate scale for train facilities and accommodations to take care of the crowds. The schedule calls for the arrival of the train here shortly after 11 in the morning and departure in the early part of the afternoon for Omaha. Senator Dolliver of this city received an urgent invitation from National Chairman Hitchcock to accompany the party on the entire trip. He expects to be with the party when it arrives in this city if not on the entire trip. A part of the plan will be for Mr Taft to take luncheon at the Dolliver home during his stop. Politics will be entirely eliminated and citizens will join in a grand demonstration complimentary to the distinguished guest.

TELEPHONE FIRMS MERGE

Deal Made at Nevada to Control 1,700 County Phones.

Nevada.—A deal was perfected here whereby a merger of the Nevada Mutual, Roland Mutual, Cambridge Independent, Maxwell and Short Line telephone companies will be effected. The name of the consolidated company will be the Story County Independent Telephone company and the headquarters will be in this city. It is understood that F. M. Boardman manager of the Nevada Mutual, will be at the head of the new concern. This merger will give the Story County Independent company control of about 1,700 phones in the county and the 250 miles of toll line already owned by the Nevada company.

He was taken to Ida Grove, where he later died in a hospital. Yaun and his companion, L. V. STEAMER COLON BATTERED BY FIERCE HURRICANE.

Panama Craft Plying Between New York and Isthmus Arrives in Port, However.

Colon.—The steamship Colon, half-masted and showing other evidences of distress, came limping into port Friday. She had been badly battered by the hurricane encountered Sunday. Three members of her crew lost their lives while engaged in the hold in repairing a water tank.

The Colon belongs to the Panama Railroad Company. She left New York September 10,and was due to arrived here Thursday. She encountered the hurricane at a point 40 miles north of Watling island. The wind blew 100 miles an hour, and tremendous seas were soon sweeping over the vessel. The staterooms and the dining saloon were flooded, one of her smoke stacks was carried away, three boats were washed overboard, and the wireless telegraph apparatus was dismantled. Orders were given that no passengers be allowed on deck, and the travelers had to spend Sunday and Sunday night in the dining saloon. The water got to the mail bags, and the registered and ordinary mail was badly damaged. Sunday night passed with the ship laboring through the storm and the passengers huddled below in a state of panic. Early Monday it was discovered that salt water was making its way forward into the fresh water tanks. Fearing that the fresh water would give out the second assistant engineer, William Liley, and the ship's carpenter, J. Olson, were sent down into the hold Monday afternoon to change the tank connections.

The two men were below for an hour without giving any signs of returning. Anxious for their safety, R. Barthl, a water tender, and A. Sands, a junior engineer, volunteered to go below and learn what had happened when the disaster occurred.

PEST GRIPS ST. PETERSBURG.

Asiatic Cholera's Ravages in the Capital of Russia.

St. Petersburg.—Three hundred and five cases and 115 deaths from the Asiatic cholera were reported for the 24 hours ending at noon Thursday.

The municipal administrations are under fire from all sides for their criminal inefficiency in handling the epidemic and for their failure to make adequate preparation for hospital, ambulance and sanitary services. Although they had ample warning of the coming of the disease, no effective steps were taken to stamp out the scourge; even the elementary precautions of disinfecting and cleaning were neglected. A recurrence of the outbreak in the spring in even greater proportions is considered inevitable.

Six Killed in Explosion.

Sedalia, Mo.—Six persons were killed and 30 injured, four of whom are not expected to live, as the result of an explosion of a car of black powder at Windsor, near here, at 10:15 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The explosion was caused by John Wesley, a negro, who threw a lighted match into a pile of powder which had spilled from a broken keg of the explosive. For his prank Wesley paid the penalty with his life, his body being horribly mutilated.

Rain Checks Forest Fires.

Duluth, Minn.—A heavy rain fell at Grand Marais extending westward from there 15 or 20 miles. While not extinguished, the forest fires were held in check as a result of the storm, and Grand Marais, Chicago Bay, and other north shore settlements that have thus far escaped the flames, are considered safe.

CONGRESSMAN LANING FREE.

Ohioan Acquitted of Charge of Misapplying Funds.

Fremont, O. — The jury in the Laning case returned a verdict of not guilty late Thursday afternoon after considering the case less than an hour all told. Following the return of the verdict there were congratulations on all sides between attorneys, jurors, judge, the defendant and others interested.

Mr. Laning is interested in many business enterprises in Norwalk, his home. He was a director of the Ohio Trust Company, through which his various financial matters were negotiated, and president of the Laning Printing Company, the plant of which was recently burned. This company did much of the state printing.

Together, with J. C. Gibbs, manager of the Ohio Trust Company, the congressman was indicted on the charge of misapplying funds of the latter company and embezzling stock of the Norwalk Savings Bank Company. They also were accused of loaning funds to fictitious real estate companies, owned in part by officers of the bank, it was alleged, and used as a "blind" to cover personal loans.

HARD BLOW AT FORAKER.

Hearst Makes Sensational Statement About Him and Standard Oil.

Columbus, O. — Thomas Hisgen candidate of the Independence party for president, and William R. Hearst addressed a meeting in Memorial hall Thursday night under the auspices of the local organization of the party. Mr. Hearst read letters which he said had been written by John D. Archbold of the Standard Oil Company, to Senator J. B. Foraker of Ohio, referring to legislation pending in congress and mentioning two inclosures of checks, one for $15,000 and another for $14,500.

Cincinnati.—That he had been an attorney for the Standard Oil Company several years ago, terminating such service before the federal prosecution of that concern, but such employment had nothing to do with matters pending in congress or in which the federal government was interested, is the substance of a brief statement made Friday by Senator Foraker in answer to charges made by William R. Hearst in Columbus Thursday night.

NURSE CARELESS; THREE DEAD.

Serious Case of Poisoning in San Diego County Hospital.

San Diego, Cal.—Three deaths have already resulted from the carelessness of Mary Arthur, a 19-year-old nurse at the county hospital, a fourth death is expected and four other persons are seriously ill. The dead are: J. Young, Charles Kemp and Henry C. Shuette.

All were taken sick Thursday afternoon, and evidence of poison was so great that an investigation was started, ending finally in a confession by Miss Arthur that she had neglected to throw out some water in which there was a quantity of atropine, and that her patients had got hold of it for their medicine. Miss Arthur is in a state of collapse, but is kept under surveillance.

Tabriz May Be Bombarded.

Tabriz, Persia.—A decisive struggle between the sultan and the Nationalists for the control of Tabriz is imminent. Ain Ed Dowleh of the shah's forces has sent an ultimatum to Satar Khan to lay down his arms and surrender the city in 48 hours, threatening otherwise that he would bombard the capital. Satar Khan flatly refused to comply. Foreigners here are in great danger. The Nationalists, thinking that their presence will interfere with the bombardment, refuse to permit them to leave the city.

The REAL AGATHA

BY EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON

PICTURES BY WEIL WALTERS FREY CAMPBELL ALESHIRE WILSON

COPYRIGHT, 1907 BY A. C. McCLURG & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Lord Wilfred Vincent and Archibald Terhune are introduced at the opening of the story, in England, the latter relating the tale. The pair on an outing miss their train and seeking recreation meet the Honorable Agatha Wyckhoff." Her hand is much sought after, because of her wealth. On visiting the Wyckhoff castle they are introduced to two other girls, both known as Agatha Wyckhoff. At dinner three other Agatha Wyckhoffs are introduced and the plot revealed. The deceased step-father, in an eccentric moment, made his will so that the real Agatha, heiress to his fortune and the castle at Wye, England, might wed her affinity. Thus Mrs. Armistead, chaperon, was in duty bound to keep the real Agatha's identity unknown and suitors were invited to tryout for the hand of the heiress. An attempt by Terhune to gather a clew from the chaperon fails. Vincent shows liking for the chaperon's secretary, Miss Marsh. Terhune finds old books containing picture of a former Baroness Wyckhoff, which is exactly like Agatha Sixth, whom he is courting. Vincent entertains them all and while riding with Agatha Fifth she confesses her love for him and also that she is the real heiress. He spurns her proposal.

CHAPTER IV.

For some days after that I was in a quandary. Here, in the face of my discovery in the library, was Vincent's positive information that Agatha Fifth was the heiress. Reluctantly I determined that the likeness between Agatha Sixth and the picture of the Baroness was accidental, and began to devote myself to the unfortunate Agatha Fifth. She seemed much inclined to discourage me, but I persevered and we soon became great friends. I found she was only 18, and drew my own conclusions from this fact. At 18 one's convictions are never very deep-rooted, neither are one's love affairs, and I thought it likely that the girl would soon forget her ill-prospered attachment for Vincent's handsome face, and might begin to think of someone else. Surely this was a very natural belief! So the first two weeks of our stay at the castle sped by and I saw to my satisfaction that I was gaining ground with the Honorable Agatha every day, while poor Vincent wasted his time flirting with each Agatha in turn (he had taken up Agatha Sixth since my desertion) or in assisting Miss Marsh to write up a lot of old dead barons who were much better left to a decent and dignified obscurity.

One day, toward the close of the two weeks, I met Vincent hurrying through the hall toward the stairs. He had on an old velveteen coat covered with paint daubs, his luncheon basket was over his shoulder, and I guessed that he was going on one of his sketching tours in search of fresh woods and pastures new.

"Where are you going, Wilfred?" I asked, as he stopped, "and where's Agatha Second?" She usually accompanied him on his sketching expeditions.

"Painting," he replied, concisely, ignoring my second question; "and where may you be going?"

"For a walk with Agatha Fifth," I answered, smiling at him—a little pityingly, perhaps. He had lost such a chance!

Vincent chuckled and his eyes looked wicked. "Wish you luck, Arch," he said. "I've been watching your charitable efforts to cut me out and be a father to my little friend, Agatha Fifth, with great admiration—but I forgot to tell you"—he lowered his voice, for we could see Agatha Second on the veranda talking to Agatha Fifth—"I forgot to tell you that what Agatha Fifth told me isn't true!"

"Isn't true?" I repeated in consternation.

"No; she confessed to me about a week ago that she only said she was the real Honorable Agatha to make me marry her. She thought, the foolish little girl, that she only had to tell me she was the heiress to make me love her. And she said she was sorry and wouldn't do it again and cried like a child, and I forgave her and comforted her. She'll get over it all right!" and laughing hilariously the young rascal ran upstairs.

I was really vexed with Wilfred about this. I thought it was very unkind of him to keep me in the dark for so long about Agatha Fifth's confession. What a lot of time I'd been wasting! I resolved that I would return to Agatha Sixth at the first opportunity, and I felt glad, even justified, that I had not told him about that album which had betrayed the secret to me. At this moment Agatha Second appeared in the doorway.

"Hullo, Mr. Terhune," she said, "where's Lord Wilfred?"

"He went upstairs," I said; "I don't know for what." I could hear him in the distance singing at the top of his lusty young voice—

"Gentlemen rankers all are we-e-e—" till an ear-splitting shout from Agatha Second drowned the song completely.

"O-h-h-h, Freddy," shrieked the young lady, with a lung power that equaled Vincent's.

I shivered with indignation at the liberty. "Freddy!" indeed!

At the third shout he heard her and stopped singing to rend the air with an answering cry.

"For f—ness' sake, what are you so long about?" she called. "Do hurry up!"

"Coming!" roared Vincent, clattering down the two flights of stairs like a wild horse, and I hurried out to join Agatha Fifth, my hands over my ears. Young people are so noisy nowadays.

Several evenings later Agatha Fourth had arranged to give a progressive dinner party. She was to be the hostess and the rest of us were her guests. It was an evening-dress affair, and I must say as we sat down to dinner I never saw a prettier group of girls.

Then the fun began. Agatha Fourth's idea in having a progressive dinner party was for each of the girls to move up one place with each course so that they could all have turns sitting by us. It was delightful; really, I don't know that I ever attended a jollier dinner party. Vincent kept quoting from the Mad Tea Party in "Alice in Wonderland," and the girls laughed at every single thing he said. Mrs. Armistead, I am ashamed to say, was not present; her head ached and she had dined in her room. I am not naturally noisy or riotous, but the laughter and jokes of those six girls were so infectious that I was obliged to join in with them. Vincent sat at one end of the table and I at the other, with three girls on each side of us. The secretary, of course, was not present.

Agatha Fourth had decorated the table with some of the yellow roses and wild fern that grew near the castle. Agatha Sixth and I had found them many times in our wanderings and, by the way, she was looking especially lovely that evening. The girls all wore shimmering white gowns, similar in design, with silver ornaments, but Agatha Sixth's gown was cream-color with ornaments of gold, and well did it become her dark beauty.

We had reached the very end of the dinner, and had just made the last change of places, which left me with my favorite Agatha Sixth on my right and Agatha Third on my left.

Suddenly, as the talk died down and a certain contented silence fell upon us, Vincent rose to his feet, and bowing to us formally, began to speak:

"Ladies and gentleman," he said, making the last word pointedly singular, while the girls all laughed, "I think you are all with me when I propose a vote of thinks to—to—er—our hostess"—(I felt that he had nearly said "Agatha Fourth!")—"our hostess, for giving us so delightful an entertainment." He bowed to Agatha Fourth and went on:

"If all progressive tea parties are termed mad I hope I may attend many such. But as I look around me, gentleman and ladies fair, across the red glow of the candle that turns the roses to redder gold, and as I gaze upon the youth and beauty here assembled, the like of which I have never before looked upon"—he made a courtly inclination of his head that included every maid at the table, and they all sighed—I heard them—"as I look upon this noble room, this exquisite table, and think of the graciousness of such hospitality, I am inspired to propose a toast in which I feel confident you will all join me." At this climax Vincent raised his glass above his head. "To the real Agatha!" he cried—"to the real Honorable Agatha!"

There was an instant of dead silence, and then to my surprise my left-hand neighbor, Agatha Third, rose to her feet, and, with quivering lips, started to say something. But she had hardly time to rise before the other five girls sprang to their feet, and raising their glasses, Agatha Third with the rest, they cried with one voice: "To the Honorable Agatha!" and although it seemed to me that Agatha Third had very nearly let the cat out of the bag by rising, as if to acknowledge the courtesy, yet by the promptness of the other girls the day was partially retrieved, and Vincent and I were still somewhat at a loss as to the identity of our fair and wealthy hostess.

I asked Vincent afterward what he made of Agatha Third's behavior.

"It looked to me," said that young person, "as if those girls had themselves so much in command that they would never betray the secret they're guarding, no matter what you did."

"But didn't you see Agatha Third get up before the others did?" I said, excitedly. "She gave herself away. I tell you, Wilfred, she's the real honorable, without a doubt. There can be no two ways about it!"

"How keen you are!" he said; "and I tell you what it is, Arch'bald"—Vincent always calls me "Ach'bald" with the "i" left out and the emphasis on "bald" when he's particularly affectionate or sleepy; he was the latter just now—"I'm just as keen about marrying this heiress as you are; the only difference is that I insist upon being in love with her into the bargain, and you don't. For I'm hard up, fearfully hard up, you know, and the governor's so awfully good, I hate to ask him for another's month's allowance just now. I'm 'way behind as it is, and I owe Jack Gordon for that prize polo pony of his. I offered him £100 for her the day of the Hurlingham games and he sold her to me on the spot. Jack's as hard up as I am—poor fellow. And then, you know, it's all perfectly fair. If we only had the time, that's all. It's pretty quick work to expect a man to find out the heiress, learn to love her and teach her to love him, all in six weeks, and propose on the last day of—"

"But that's just it," I interrupted, "you're not expected to find out the heiress first. That's just what old Fletcher Boyd wanted to prevent when he made the will."

"Nevertheless, you yourself mean to find out first, don't you, Arch?" was Vincent's facetious response.

I was disgusted and made no answer.

"Of course," he went on, "I wouldn't propose to any girl I didn't love, but I'd like the chance to learn to love this particular lady, the Honorable Agatha. I feel that there would be no trouble about her learning to love me!"

Vincent has few really serious faults, but I don't attempt to deny that he is conceited.

"The trouble is," he said, "they're all so attractive I could love one as well as another. I wish, though, I could just naturally fall in love with one of them, and I'd propose to her on the last day and take my chances. Who knows? I'm sometimes lucky. I might win the prize!"

"So you might," I said, "but as it is, we haven't even discovered the heiress as yet—"

"And I can't fall in love with any of 'em," finished Vincent, "because I'm madly in love with the whole six, and there you are!" and he shook his head hopelessly. "Come, let's to bed," he added.

"Not just yet, Freddy," I said. I never call him that, as I have before stated, but his hair was all rumpled up and his face flushed and I felt warm toward him because he was so dense. "Surely with a rival as unobserving as he is," I thought, "I am not heavily handicapped." For I had made up my mind that Agatha Third was indeed the real and only Agatha. That involuntary rising of hers was proof positive.

"I say, Vincent," I called after him, "was that a master stroke of yours, giving the toast that way? Did you intend to try to surprise one of them into betraying herself?"

Vincent laughed sleepily.

"Good old Arch'bald," he drawled, "you're always looking for master strokes, but 'pon my honor I never thought of such a thing." And I might have known that he wouldn't.

TRAGEDY OF TURF RECALLED.

Owner's Sudden Death Just as His Horse Won a Great Race.

Half an hour before the race for the Two Thousand Guineas of 1883 Prince Batthyany, who bred St. Simon and who was one of the most popular racing men of any time, was talking with Lord Cadogan in the luncheon room of the Jockey club stand at Newmarket when he suddenly reeled and fell, says the Westminster Gazette.

He was carried to Weatherby's office and doctors were summoned; but the prince was beyond all human aid, and just before the bell rang for the race for which his colt Galliard, brother of St. Simon, was first favorite, he breathed his last.

A few minutes later "the clear blue sky rang with cheers and shouts as the horses came thundering along, which rose into a roar as Galliard won by a head;" while behind the drawn blinds of Weatherby's office Galliard's owner, who had been looking forward so eagerly to this moment, was lying dead. It was owing to the death of his owner that Galopin's great son could not run in the Derby of 1884, which he would almost certainly have won.

War Is Evil

War suspends the rules of moral obligation, and what is long suspended is in danger of being totally abrogated. Civil wars strike deepest of all into the manners of the people. They vitiate their politics; they corrupt their morals; they pervert even the natural taste and relish of equity and justice. By teaching us to consider our fellow creatures in a hostile light, the whole body of our nation becomes gradually less dear to us. The very names of affection and kindred, which were the bond of charity while we agreed, become new incentives to hatred and rage when the communion of our country is dissolved.—Edmund Burke.

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right Starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials

Starch, like everything else, is being constantly improved, the patent Starches put on the market 25 years ago are very different and inferior to those of the present day. In the latest discovery—Defiance Starch—all injurious chemicals are omitted, while the addition of another ingredient, invented by us, gives to the Starch a strength and smoothness never approached by other brands.

Married life should be one grand, sweet song, but the divorce courts frequently make a duet of it.

HELPFUL ADVICE

You won't tell your family doctor the whole story about your private illness—you are too modest. You need not be afraid to tell Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., the things you could not explain to the doctor. Your letter will be held in the strictest confidence. From her vast correspondence with sick women during the past thirty years she may have gained the very knowledge that will help your case. Such letters as the following, from grateful women, establish beyond a doubt the power of to conquer all female diseases.

Mrs. Norman R. Barndt, of Allentown, Pa., writes:

"Ever since I was sixteen years of age I had suffered from an organic derangement and female weakness; in consequence I had dreadful headaches and was extremely nervous. My physician said I must go through an operation to get well. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it and wrote you for advice, following your directions carefully, and thanks to you I am today a well woman, and I am telling all my friends of my experience."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

DEMOCRATIC HOPE SIDETRACKED

Taft and Foraker Shoulder to Shoulder for Republican Principles.

Another Democratic hope has been sidetracked. That was that United States Senator Foraker would not support the Taft candidacy, and would thus impair his chances of carrying the State of Ohio.

The two big Ohioans fittingly met at the G. A. R. reunion in Toledo, and publicly and good-naturedly cast what differences may have existed between them to the air.

Mr. Taft's contribution to the treaty of peace was as follows:

"It is a pleasure for me to be here with Senator Foraker, because when governor of Ohio he gave me my first chance and took a good deal of risk in putting a man of 29 on the bench of the Superior Court of Cincinnati. We are about to enter—or rather have entered—a great oratorical campaign. It is a pleasure to think in this presence that we are going to stand in the campaign shoulder to shoulder, with the full strength of the Republican party."

In response Senator Foraker denied that enmity had existed between Mr. Taft and himself, and said:

"Under the circumstances I hope I may be pardoned if I say here in this presence—the first time I have had opportunity to say it—that there is not now and so far as I know there never has been the slightest ill feeling of any kind between Mr. Taft and myself.

"If there is anything I have a right to claim beyond another, it is that I am Republican three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. I have my preferences sometimes as to who should receive the honors of the party, and everybody generally finds out what they are. But I am one of those old-fashioned Republicans who settle every such question at the convention. When the Chicago convention nominated Mr. Taft to be the Republican candidate for the Presidency this year, that instant he became my leader. He has been my leader ever since, and he will be my leader until the polls close on the night of the election."

Mr. Foraker followed with an estimate of Judge Taft's fitness for the office he seeks by repeating what Bishop Fallows had said before him.

"I want to repeat it," he said, "that his experience on the bench, in the Philippines, as Secretary of War, in the construction of the Panama Canal, in all the positions he has filled, has been such as to qualify Mr. Taft almost beyond every other man for the Presidency. We are going to elect him, and if he does not make a success of it, it will be his own fault."

Senator Foraker followed this statement with a review of his early acquaintance with Judge Taft, and the favorable impression he then gained of him.

EDITOR TIMES—

Dear Sir:

While the European railway system seems very unpleasant to an American, since the coaches are divided in compartments, some for women, some smokers, some non-smokers and first, second, third and fourth class. There is one pleasant feature, one seldom has to wait for a train and then only a few minutes. On our whole trip we never were more than 10 minutes late. There are three kinds of passenger trains, one which stops at every station, the fast train which stops at all principal stations and the special which stops only at the large cities. For riding on the latter a special fare is charged, hence they are seldom crowded. Our round-trip ticket which covered nearly 5000 miles, however allowed us to ride on any train. Then they run a great many trains. Between some of the cities there are as many as 36 passanger trains each way, and from 4 to 10 coaches to a train.

Leaving Cologne on Friday morning, we rode on five trains in six hours, reaching Remsfeld, in upper Hessian by 3 o'clock. A pleasant march of half an hour down the hill, thro' the valley, and along a footpath upon the other side brought us to the little hamlet, Schellbach, the birthplace of Mrs. Wessel's father. We were received with out stretched arms and ushered into the house which has stood more than a century. At first we occasionly came in contact with the ceiling joice, but soon learned to walk with a bowed head. The next morning our host hitched cows to the wagon and invited us to a ride in the country. We accepted the invitation, but instead of riding in the wagon we walkeb by the side, picking flowers, pebbles and berries along the way. Really we enjoyed this trip more than riding on the finest trains in Germany. The farmers were in the field, some cutting wheat, others oats, some digging potatoes and others making hay. Thus we visited the people from patch to patch and it would be difficult to say who enjoyed it the most. When we returned by noon, we found a splendid three course dinner ready to match our keen appetite. One after another the neighbors called on us to hear something about America. We found it difficult to get away, but go we must as time is precious. A few hours ride brought us to Cassel a city of 150,000 inhabitants. The most attractive feature of this city is the Emporor's palace and Wilhelm's hights, which serve the Emperor's summer resort. The palace is a massive structure built in a semicircle, on the hill side in a beautiful park. From the palace a number of roads and paths wind up a steep hill, through a heavy grove of tall pine and elm trees. On the summit of the hill a large reservoir has been built, into which the rain waters are led for some distance. From here a sort of cascade has been built some 500 feet down the hill side. Every Sunday and Wednesday afternoon from 3:30 to 4:30 the water is turned on to this cascade from the resevoir above and as it comes roaring, splashing and rushing down these rocky steps, it is watched by thousands of people. From the cascade the water runs under ground about 80 rods, and then rushes down an artificial cataract about 100 feet. Here it is lost sight of again, till farther down the hill it bursts forth out of a small lake, shooting up in the air 50 to 60 feet like an artesian well. In our estimation, there were about 10,000 people present, at the time we were there and we were told it was a small crowd. From Cassel we made a hurried trip to Arolsen, Waldeck and called on relatives of some of our Gladbrcok friends. We should have enjoyed a longer stay among these people, but our plans had been made and time would not permit us to change it. On the way to Hannover we had some very fine people in the same compartment with us, and they kept us busy all the way answering questions about America. Hannover is a city of some 360,000 inhabitants. The streets of the city are clean and unusually straight and wide for a European city. We found the principal business streets crowded with people most of the day. The constant rain made it unadvisable to make any extended tours around the city. The second day we made a trip to Hagen, about 25 miles out and from there walked to the little village Noepke and brought the greetings of our friend Runge to his mother. It really was a pleasure to us to see that mother again and again weep tears of joy as we told her of her children in America and answered her many questions which had burdened her mother-heart concerning her children. In reality our visits among the people in the villages were the most enjoyable and pleasant days of our entire trip. In their humble homes they gave us the best they had and considered it a great honor that they were permitted to entertain us.

Two more days in Bremen, in which we expect to arrange our baggage and we shall bid "farewell" to Europe and start for the home land. Our ship the "Der Grosse Kurfuerst," sails from Brener haven Sept 5, and is due in New York the 15. We expect to make several stops in the eastern states before reaching home. It is needless to say that we can sing with the poet:

"Mid' pleasure and palace tho' we may roam,
Be it ever so humbel, there's no place like home."

Sincerely,
Rev. G. H. Wessel.

Per Capita Debt of Iowa Cities.

Des Moines.—Davenport has the lowest per capita debt of any of the eleven cities of the first class in Iowa, according to the report which Chief Clerk Sheets of the municipal accounting department of the auditor of state is about to promulgate.

Its debt per capita is $6.97. Clinton is next with $8.41. Dubuque has $24.90, Cedar Rapids $24.90, and Sioux City the highest, $34.92. The Sioux City debt, however, includes a large amount of the old warrants of an early day, which, it is said, can hardly be included now in fairness.

The following is Mr. Sheets' statement of the municipal debt of the ten cities from which reports have been received by him:

	Total debt.	Per capita.
Des Moines	$ 919,959	$12.16
Dubuque	1,044,394	24.90
Sioux City	1,429,885	34.92
Davenport	276,219	6.97
Cedar Rapids	716,024	24.90
Burlington	318,685	12.59
Council Bluffs	281,095	11.14
Clinton	191,276	8.41
Ottumwa	206,867	10.25
Muscatine	274,419	18.19

Waterloo has not yet filed its report.

There are ninety-six cities in Iowa, eighty-five second class and eleven first class. Nearly all have reported to the municipal accounting department. Only Cedar Falls, Marion, Charlton, Glenwood, Storm Lake and Mystic are yet out, and reports are expected from them soon.

Of the cities of the second class the per capita indebtedness of LeMars is the smallest, $3.77; Perry has $4.14, Boone $4.87 and Fairfield $6.29.

Blames Great Western.

Freight Commissioner E. G. Wylie is of the opinion that the Great Western railway itself is responsible, to a large extent at least, for the action of the shippers in the various Mississippi river towns, notably Keokuk, Burlington, Davenport and Dubuque, in protesting against the adjustment of freight rates, as asked by the Greater Des Moines committee in its claim against the Great Western recently filed with the interstate commerce commission.

"We had a similar complaint from St. Paul at the hearing of our case against the Rock Island road last February," said Mr. Wylie, "and it afforded us much amusement when we noticed that this was written on the stationery of the Rock Island road. The commission was not influenced in the least by this protest from St. Paul and it will not be, in my opinion, by any protests which the Mississippi river cities may bring up. Our case against the Great Western is clear and we only ask for just and reasonable rates, and as such it cannot be influenced by the protests of these cities."

All Eyes Are on This City.

Inquiries for information in regard to the Des Moines plan of city government continue to come in to the Commercial club and others in increasing numbers. The first two editions of ten thousand each of the booklet "The Des Moines Plan of City Government," were exhausted some time ago and it has been necessary to order another large edition, which is on the press at the present time. The inquiries come from every section of the country. Hundreds of cities, in every state in the union, through commercial organizations, schools and individuals are sending requests for these booklets. There seems to be no special part of the country which is interested in the matter more than another.

Des Moines Professor Finds Comet.

Shooting through the heavens, 107,880,000 miles from the earth is a blazing comet, the first one discovered this year. The honor of revealing the presence of this comet belongs to Professor D. W. Morehouse the Drake university and to Professor Morehouse is the honor of having a blazing comet bear his name. The comet is officially known to astronomers all over the world as Comet B.—Morehouse.

State Medical Board.

The next regular meeting of the state board of health and the state board of medical examiners will be held at the office of the secretary, capitol building, Des Moines, October 13 and 14, commencing at 9:30 a. m. The next examination for physicians and osteopaths will be held at the office of the secretary, capitol building, Des Moines, on Sept. 16, 17 and 18, 1908, commencing at 9 a. m.

Apply Steam Road Rules.

Passengers on the Interurban road between Des Moines and Herrold will continue to pay fare to and from the regularly established pay stations instead of the stations on the line where they may elect to get on or off the cars. Pay stations have been established by the company every two miles between Sixth avenue in this city and the station of Herrold. This is declared by the state railroad commission to be a sufficient number, and that the company may not be required to establish additional ones at this time. Decision was made in the case of J. H. Chandler against the Inter-Urban Railway Company. The petition and the decision applies, specifically, to the section of the line described. How many stations there are west of Herrold and whether th etwo-mile limit between pay stations would be held by he commission to apply to all parts of the interurban lines is not known. These matters may be developed on a new case on which further hearing may be held.

Fight Sunday Amusement.

The Des Moines Ministerial association will begin immediately to bring pressure to bear upon the next general assembly to assure the passage of the Sunday bill, prohibiting all forms of public amusement and baseball on Sunday. The Des Moines association will ask that a general state committee be appointed that shall be representative from all of the church denominations in the state. The ministers believe that a strong lobby should be maintained during the session of the legislature to watch the interests of this bill. The committee on public morals was appointed at the ministerial association and in view of the recent crusades the committee will have much to do this winter with this movement. The committee is composed of the Revs. Howland Hanson, O. W. Fifer, J. W. Day, J. H. Burling and Finis Idleman.

Postal Receipts Grow.

Des Moines is one of the few larger cities in the United States which had an increase in postoffice receipts in August over August, 1907. Reports from fifty large cities in the United States show a net decrease of 3.11 per cent in postoffice receipts for August as compared with the same month last year. At the Des Moines postoffice, however, business increased .52 per cent. Last month the total receipts amounted to $45,009.15, while in August, 1907, they were $44,771.87, an increase of $237.28. While the gain was not as large as usual it shows Des Moines has not suffered from the business depression in comparison with the other cities. Post office receipts are regarded as one of the best indications of a city's prosperity.

Fraternals Oppose Legislation.

The Iowa Fraternal congress, at its annual session just closed, went on record as bitterly opposed to any insurance rate legislation by the next legislature. The members are especially determined that the proposed minimum rate bill shall not go thru. The discussions at the meeting were largely on the subject of legislation, and it developed that the entire body was in full accord with the sentiments expressed by President Koch in his annual address, when he stated that it should be the policy of the congress to work against any attempt to change the existing laws or to add new ones.

Beer and Starch Rates.

The state board of railway commissioners has issued amendment No. 1 to the commodity rates recently promulgated by it, in which a commodity rate is established on beer and starch. The starch and starcose rate runs from 4.9 for five miles straight or mixed carloads, minimum weight of 30,000 pounds, to 19 for 500 miles. HURLED TO DEATH

LIEUT. SELFRIDGE KILLED BY FALL OF AEROPLANE.

ORVILLE WRIGHT INJURED

Breaking of Propeller Blade Causes Tragic Accident at Fort Myer in the Presence of Thousands.

Washington.—After having drawn the attention of the world to his aeroplane flights at Fort Myer and having established new world's records for heavier-than-air flying machines, Orville Wright Thursday met with a tragical mishap while making a two-man flight. The aeroplanist was accompanied by Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge of the signal corps of the army. Lieut. Selfridge was fatally injured and died at 8:10 o'clock at night. Mr. Wright was seriously injured, but is expected to recover.

While the machine was encircling the drill grounds a propeller blade snapped off and, hitting some other part of the intricate mechanism, caused the machine to overturn in the air and fall to the ground, enveloping the two occupants in the debris.

Wright Not Dangerously Hurt.

After a hurried surgical examination it was announced that Mr. Wright was not dangerously injured. He is suffering from a fracture of his left thigh and several ribs on the left side are broken. Both men received deep cuts about the head. Mr. Wright regained consciousness at the hospital and dictated a cablegram to his brother at Le Mans, France, and requested that the same message be sent to his sister and father at Dayton, O., assuring them that he was all right.

Mr. Wright Wednesday replaced the propellers which he had been using with another pair, the blades of which are six inches longer. They were used for the first time in Thursday's disastrious flight, and many who have witnessed Mr. Wright's flights at Fort Myer believe the change of propellers caused the accident. An examination of the broken blade showed that it had been snapped off at a point one-fourth of the distance from the hub. A deep indentation of the broken piece indicated that it had struck some other part of the aeroplane.

Fully 2,000 persons, including many army officers and scientists, were at Fort Myer and witnessed the tragedy.

Selfridge an Enthusiast.

Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge was one of the most enthusiastic believers in aeronautics among the officers in the military service and through his own efforts succeeded in securing a detail with the aeronautical division of the signal corps. He was born in San Francisco 26 years ago and was appointed to the military academy at West Point from that state. He was appointed a second lieutenant in the artillery corps in 1903 and commissioned a first lieutenant four years later.

Military Funeral for Selfridge.

Lieut. Selfridge's body was removed from the hospital to an undertaker's, where it will remain until the arrival of the young officer's father, who wired from San Francisco that he would like to have his son buried either at Arlington or West Point.

Cause of Disaster Explained.

Speaking for Mr. Wright, Mr. Taylor later said:

"The accident was caused by an extraordinary vibration of one of the wires running from the main planes to the upper steel fitting of the rudder. This vibration was so great that the wire got in range of the propeller and was struck by the blade, cutting a deep gash in the edge of the propeller blade about four inches from the end. This caused the blade to break. The other blade of the propeller flew around and in turn struck the same wire, breaking it. This made Mr. Wright lose control of his rudder entirely, and the loss of both blades of the propeller and the breaking of the wire caused him to lose control of the planes."

GOV. HUGHES RENOMINATED

NEW YORK EXECUTIVE NAMED ON FIRST BALLOT.

Democrats Select Chanler to Contest for Place—Rest of the State Tickets.

Saratoga, N. Y.—Charles Evans Hughes was nominated Tuesday by the Republican state convention by an overwhelming majority and on the first ballot to succeed himself as governor of the state of New York. He received 827 out of a possible 1,009 votes, as against 151 for James W. Wadsworth, Jr., of Livingston county, speaker of the state assembly, and 31 for former Congressman John K. Stewart of Montgomery.

The nomination was made unanimous upon motion of State Committeeman William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, who has been perhaps the bitterest and most outspoken opponent of the governor's renomination.

The governor's renomination followed the utter failure of a desperate struggle on the part of a number of the county leaders who for four days spared no effort to discover a candidate upon whom they could unite to defeat him. The rest of the ticket was made up in the "good old-fashioned way," as an organization "slate" announced an hour or more before the session of the convention began by Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the state committee, after a conference of the local leaders.

Horace White of Onandaga was nominated for lieutenant governor, Samuel S. Koenig for secretary of state and Edward R. O'Malley for attorney general.

Rochester, N. Y.—As the culminating feature of the Democratic state convention, which closed Wednesday, there was a notable demonstration here Wednesday night in honor of the party's national standard bearer, William Jennings Bryan, who reached the city shortly before seven o'clock and addressed a mass meeting in convention hall and overflow gatherings outside.

Mr. Bryan expressed his gratitude for the nomination of Lieut. Gov. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler as head of the state ticket and paid a personal tribute to him. The ticket in full is:

Governor, Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler of Dutchess; lieutenant governor, John A. Dix of Washington; secretary of state, John C. Whalen of Monroe; attorney general, George M. Palmer of Schoharie; controller, Martin H. Glynn of Albany; state engineer and surveyor, Phillip P. Farley of Brooklyn; treasurer, Julius Hauser of Suffolk.

BIG ST. LOUIS FIRM ATTACKED.

Receiver Is Asked for the State Trust Company.

St. Louis.—Minority stockholders Thursday afternoon filed a petition in the circuit court asking that a receiver be appointed for the State Trust Company, a St. Louis real estate firm capitalized at $1,000,000.

The petition says that on May 20, 1907, the directors voted to increase the capital of the concern from $500,000 to $1,000,000, representing that $750,000 had already been paid in. At another meeting, it is alleged, the directors voted to pay back to the stockholders the $250,000 that they paid into the company to increase its capital to $1,000,000, but the money has not yet been paid back. It is also stated that the principal assets of the company are $499,500 in real estate. This was subscribed by H. A. Vrooman, president. It is understood that the company has been planning the erection of a large business block in St. Louis.

G. P. MOROSINI DIES SUDDENLY.

Banker and Noted Philanthropist Passes Away in New York.

New York.—Giovanni P. Morosini, banker and noted philanthropist, died suddenly Tuesday of heart failure at his country place, Riverdale, in the upper section of the city.

Mr. Morosini, who was 74 years old, is survived by a son and two daughters. His wife died in 1893. Mrs. Victoria Morosini Schilling, his youngest daughter, created a sensation a few years ago by eloping with the family coachman, and the aged banker disinherited her. Miss Giulia Morosini, the other daughter, is a noted horsewoman. Otillio P. Morosini, the son, married Mary Bond, a Virginia belle.

Fire in an Insane Asylum.

Amityville, L. I.—Not realizing their danger, 90 insane patients in the Long Island Home, one of the largest insane asylums in the state, fought against being removed from a section of the main building Wednesday when that structure caught fire.

The flames spread so rapidly that a great portion of the big building was ablaze in a few minutes and the inmates were almost cut off from escape. Sixty keepers were compelled to use force to get the unfortunate men and women to safety and for several minutes there was a scene of the wildest excitement.

CHOLERA IN RUSSIA

THOUSANDS OF CASES AND GOVERNMENT ALARMED.

SITUATION BEYOND CONTROL

Every Effort Made to Check the Spread of the Fearful Disease Among the Russians.

St. Petersburg Sept. 21.—St. Petersburg is in the grasp of Asiatic cholera, which already has exceeded in severity and numbers that of 1893. The disease is icnreasing rapidly at an alarming rate, and there is every reason to fear that the situation will get out of hand, The government has threatened to apply the provisions of martial law, and this threat has driven the municipality officials to bend their energies to the campaign of clearing the city of the scourge. The aldermanic council voted a preliminary sum amounting to $250,000 for preliminary work, and to expedite the interment of bodies, which has been notoriously slow. The dead houses are overcrowded and many corpes lie unburied. Thousands of cases are being treated.

Under his authority as perfect of St. Petersburg, General Dracheffsky on Saturday prohibited the sale of liquor throughout the city, including the government vodka shops, and has further ordered that after that the sale of liquor shall be suspended at 2 p. m. on Saturday un... 10 a. m. Monday. This action has been taken in order to diminish alcoholic excesses, which very materially increases the liability to cholera infection and the general spread of the disease.

A beginning was made when public schools were transformed into hospital wards. A number of the grammer schools were closed and 4,000 of the students sent to their homes.

The situation, which has always been serious since the very first case was reported, assumes a graver aspect from the appearance of a very virulent type of the disease.

The cholera was first reported this year about the end of July. It was of a virulent type and the percentage of mortality was high. The disease spread rapidly into the provinces along the Volga, down both coasts of the Caspian and in the territory of the Don Cossacks. By the end of August there was an average of 1,200 cases reported each week, with a mortality of upward of 50 per cent.

On Aug. 14, it was announced that St. Petersburg was threatened with the scourge and on Sept. 8 it was definitely established that the disease was in the capital.

STEIN SECURES SON'S BODY.

Father Wins and Interment Will Be in Jewish Cemetery.

Des Moines.—The body of Morris Stein, who was killed in the unsolved double shooting in Loudenville, O., will be interred in the Jewish cemetery with Jewish funeral rites. Mae Bayard Stein, wife of the dead man, has waived all right to the body of her husband, the injunction suit brought by Jacob Stein has been dismissed, all matters of estate settled, and Judge Brennan has ordered the body turned over to the father. By the terms of the agreement, Mr. Stein gets the possession of his son's body, pays all costs that have accrued since the instituting of the injunction proceedings and waives all right in the homestead at 1715 Clark street, where Morris Stein and his young wife lived. Mrs. Bayard Stein will be permitted to remain as administratrix of the estate of her husband, Jacob Stein agreeing to withdraw his motion to have her ousted. This gives her custody of the personal property of Mr. Stein as well as the home at 1715 Clark steet, which has been purchased on a contract and upon which several hundred dollars have been paid. The question of who gets the $5,000 insurance has not as yet been settled.

Cholera in Manila.

Manila, Sept. 21.—Fifty-eight new cases and nineteen deaths are reported for the twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock this (Monday) morning. The infected areas in the city and suburbs are spreading somewhat, but the health authorities are still confident that they will be able to speedily gain control of the situation.

Sheer white goods, in fact, any fine wash goods when new, owe much of their attractiveness to the way they are laundered, this being done in a manner to enhance their textile beauty. Home laundering would be equally satisfactory if proper attention was given to starching, the first essential being good Starch, which has sufficient strength to stiffen, without thickening the goods. Try Defiance Starch and you will be pleasantly surprised at the improved appearance of your work.

THE ISSUE AND PARTY RECORD.

Will the People Trust Experimentalists and Theorists?

(From Sherman's Speech of Acceptance.)

The overshadowing issue of the campaign really is: Shall the administration of President Roosevelt be approved, shall a party of demonstrated capacity in administrative affairs be continued in power, shall the reins of government be placed in experienced hands, or do the people prefer to trust their destinies to an aggregation of experimental malcontents and theorists, whose only claim to a history is a party name they pilfered?

With a record of four decades of wise legislation; two score years of faithful administration; offering its fulfilled pledges as a guaranty of its promises for the future, the Republican party appeals to the people and, with full confidence in their wisdom and patriotism, awaits the rendition of the November verdict.

DENIES THAT BRYAN "COULD DO NO HARM."

Congressman Burke Says Office of President Is Infinitely More Powerful Than Congress.

Congressman James Francis Burke, of Pittsburg, in an address on "The Powers of the President," says:

"The American people can make no greater mistake than to elect Mr. Bryan on the assumption that he can do no harm in the face of an adverse Senate. As between the executive and legislative departments of the government, the former has infinitely greater power to rule and ruin than the latter.

"Mr. Taft and Mr. Bryan are wholly different types of men. Each possesses a strong individual character, which would certainly assert itself in the White House. What either of these men would do during a four years' term in the White House is causing as much anxiety among thoughtful Americans as the mere matter of election alone.

"As a disturber of moneys the President is without a rival in the world. Through the agencies under his control he will this year disburse a billion dollars, showing the great things we are doing in adding to the unparalleled list of the world's achievements.

"In view of the fact that during the fifteen years of Bryan leadership the States controlled by his party have decreased from 23 to 12, the number of Senators from 48 to 31, the number of Representatives in Congress from 220 to 164, and in that time the Democratic party was in control of the ground, whereas it is now, as a consequence of his teachings, a hopelessly heterogeneous mass of Populistic elements, the American people can see little prospects of a constructive policy if Mr. Bryan should succeed."

LABOR WORLD FOR TAFT.

Characterizes Him as True Friend of the Workingman.

(From the Concord (N. H.) Monitor.)

The Labor World comes out strongly in its advocacy of Mr. Taft. It characterizes him a true friend of labor and declares that the unfair attacks of Mr. Gompers will have little or no effect in alienating from him the labor world. It says: "That Secretary Taft is a true friend of labor is certain, and all the untrue, ungenerous, vicious attacks that President Gompers or any one else may make on him cannot prevent him from continuing to be the friend of the wage worker. Organized labor cannot afford to have itself split up into factions on this political issue. That President Gompers is wrong in forcing this most ominous fight is certain, and intelligent wage workers will certainly come to this conclusion."

Campaign Funds.

"We welcome Mr. Taft to this advanced ground," said Mr. Bryan in one of his numerous interviews since the Denver convention. The ground referred to is Mr. Taft's statement that no campaign contributions would be received from corporations. Mr. Bryan intended to convey the impression that Mr. Taft had come to that determination after the Denver convention. In that the Democratic "peerless one" is not honest. Mr. Taft is a law abiding citizen. Such contributions are unlawful, made so by a law passed by a Republican congress at the instance of a Republican administration of which Judge Taft was a part six months before the Denver convention. Be honest, Mr. Bryan, if you can!

HIT IN $30,800 SWINDLE

FIVE ARE INDICTED IN THE PATTEN CASE.

True Bills Prepared—J. M. McFarland Is One of the Accused Men.

Chicago. — Two indictments naming five persons involved in the operations by which Mrs. James A. Patten was induced to pay out $30,800 for editions de luxe, were prepared Thursday in the office of the state's attorney. The indictments were based on true bills voted by the grand jury, were submitted again to the jurors and the investigating body returned them in court.

J. M. McFarland, who testified as a state's witness before the grand jury in the Patten case, was named in the indictments as a codefendant. The other four persons against whom the indictments are named are said to have been McFarland's associates in his book deals.

Two separate transactions are taken cognizance of by the indictments. The first of these was the one of December 4, 1907, by which Mrs. Patten was induced to pay out $8,800. The second transaction is the one of April 30, 1908, by which she was induced to part with $22,000. In each of the indictments the charge was conspiracy to operate a confidence game.

McFarland appeared before the grand jury and there told the story of his own part in the alleged fleecing of rich people by means of the book scheme. At the same time he exposed the persons who, he says, worked the plot with him, and whom he accuses of having pocketed most of the profits.

Mrs. Patten was also a witness. She told of the large sums of money that she turned over to the alleged ring of book swindlers with whom, at the introduction of McFarland, she did business. She told of the notes she signed and furnished documents in support of her testimony.

Since the discovery that McFarland has turned state's evidence and that his own testimony as a co-conspirator will be used to prosecute former associates, the men caught in the net are reported to have been making overtures of their readiness to return some of the notes and money which they secured.

ARREST BROWN AND PARTNERS.

New York Detectives Nab Members of Failed Brokerage Firm.

New York.—Detectives from police headquarters appeared in the A. O. Brown & Co. case Friday giving it a sensational turn when they arrested five members of the failed stock exchange firm as they emerged from the federal building, where a hearing into the affairs of the firm has been going on for some days before United States Commissioner Gilchrist. A sixth arrest would have been made if sickness had not detained still another member of the firm in a New Jersey hospital, beyond the jurisdiction.

The charge against them was that of grand larceny and it was preferred by a former client of the firm. Miss Helen S. Abernethy of this city, who alleges the loss at their hands of 20 shares of Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway common stock valued at about $600, and 25 shares of United States Steel preferred stock valued at $1,184, on or about August 21 last.

BURIED IN RED-HOT BRICKS.

Tragic Fate of Two Men at Kenmare, North Dakota.

Minot, N. D.—Slowly roasting to death under tons of red-hot bricks, in plain view of their comrades, who were unable to assist them, E. W. Drake, Sr., and Clarence Bailey met a tragic death at Kenmare Wednesday. The big kiln of the Kenmare Brick & Coal Company burst when but ten hours from completion. Drake, who was the manager of the plant, was buried up to his arms in the red-hot pile, and it was not for over 30 minutes that he could be reached by the rescuers. Bailey, the 17-year-old son of a prominent farmer, was completely entombed and was not found for an hour. His body was roasted to a crisp.

Bad Band Is Broken Up.

Winnipeg, Man. — The arrest and conviction Friday at Moose Jaw of Joseph Convery, for horse stealing, of Kid Royal and George Birch in Montana and the sentencing of a fourth, named Hofferson, to the North Dakota penitentiary, breaks up a bad band of horse rustlers who have been operating in southern Saskatchewan and adjoining states for some time. They stole hundreds of horses. These were the leaders.

HORRIBLE COLLISION OCCURS ON NORTHERN PACIFIC.

SMOKING CAR TELESCOPED

Between Thirty and Forty Passengers Killed and Injured—Bodies of the Victims Shockingly Mangled.

Butte, Mont. — Nineteen persons were killed, 11 seriously injured, several fatally, and about 30 more or less hurt in a collision between passenger train No. 16, known as the east-bound Burlington flyer, and a west-bound freight train at 8:10 o'clock Friday morning at a siding known as Young's Point, about 30 miles west of Billings, on the Northern Pacific railroad.

The passenger, running about 50 miles an hour, crashed into the freight just entering on the siding during a blinding snowstorm, the engineer of the passenger failing to see the signal flag of the brakeman of the freight train in time to avert the collision.

Smoker Is Telescoped.

The express car telescoped with the smoker and a majority of the fatalities and injuries were in this car. The express car was raised over the platform of the smoker, the superstructure sweeping the seats and not a passenger in this car escaped death or injury. The other passengers escaped with cuts and bruises.

On the train was the Spokane delegation to the National Irrigation congress at Albuquerque. None of these was injured.

Fireman Ora Babcock jumped and was killed, striking on his head. Milo Halloway, a brakeman of the Billings train, was killed. The scenes around the smoker were horrible, heads, bodies, legs and arms being interwoven with broken seats and equipment. In one place seven bodies were so tightly wedged together that they were only separated with difficulty. It was almost impossible to succor the injured without trampling on the dead.

Partial List of the Dead.

A partial list of the dead follows:

Col. Bonson of Utah, John Cawlan, Billings, Mont.; Lon Anderson, Hardy, Mont.; Lorrenz A. Stewart, Dean, Mont.; H. C. Gomble, Ministon, Ia.; E. L. Eymock, Denver, Col.; D. H. Johnson, Denver, Col., district passenger agent, Nickel Plate railway; George Battlerock, Anaconda, Mont.; John Ryan, Cushing, Okla.; Milo Halloway, Billings, Mont.; —— Sichemram, address unknown; two unidentified coal miners, en route from Anaconda, Mont., to Kirby, Wyo.

ABE RAYMER IS ACQUITTED.

Verdict of Not Guilty in First Springfield Riot Case.

Springfield, Ill.—The case of Abe Raymer was given to the jury at 5:40 p. m. Wednesday and court took a recess. At nine o'clock the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. Raymer was as white as a sheet when the jury filed into court. As soon as the verdict was announced, he grasped the hand of each juror and made a speech thanking them.

As this is the first of the riot cases, involving a total of 117 indictments returned by the grand jury, it is considered quite significant. It was proved that Raymer was a member of the mob and the court held that any member of the mob was guilty in the eyes of the law, but the jury acted on the lack of evidence to prove that Raymer actually had a hand in the lynching.

WASHINGTON LIFE IS SOLD.

Pittsburg Syndicate Gets Morton's Old Insurance Company.

New York.—The control of the Washington Life Insurance Company Thursday passed from the hands of Levi P. Morton, Thomas F. Ryan and Harry Payne Whitney, to a Pittsburg syndicate headed by William C. Baldwin, president of the Pittsburg Life and Trust Company.

The deal was completed late Thursday afternoon, and Mr. Baldwin was elected president of the Washington Life Insurance Company to succeed John Tatlock. In retiring from the Washington Life former Gov. Morton severs a connection with the company which has continued for almost 50 years, he having been one of the charter members of the company, one of the oldest in the country.

Steamer Erik Hits Iceberg.

St. Johns, N. F.—With her hull damaged by collision with an iceberg, the steamer Erik, which accompanied the Peary expedition to the north, is reported on her way to this port. The damage to the vessel is said to be all above the waterline.

FALL STYLES IN COLLEGE STUDENTS.

There will be wide variety in the styles in college boys this fall, says the current issue of a fashion journal. The prevailing college student style, however, will show coats worn to the knees, with five or six vents, and cuffs to the elbows. Cuffs will also be worn on the trousers, the object being to expose the calf of the leg from the knee down, affording a cunning little peek at the garter. Stripes, wriggles and spots will constitute the modest patterns. Green and pale lavender hats, with trimming in the back and floppy brim turning up and down, back and sideways, will be popular to cover the collegiate cranium.

TWO TOWNS IN DISTRESS

COUDERAY, WIS., AND RUSH CITY, MINN., MAY BURN UP.

Both Places Ask Help in Fighting the Flames—California Forest Fire Under Control.

Couderay, Wis.—A terrible forest fire is raging on the outskirts of the town. The frantic people are packing their household goods and preparing to move out.

Minneapolis has been asked to send an engine and appeals will be made to other towns. Unless the wind dies down the town will be burned.

St. Paul, Minn.—Rush City, Minn., is reported burning. The St. Paul fire department has been appealed to for aid and Friday night sent an engine company and seven men to the burning city. Rush City is 54 miles north of here on the Northern Pacific railroad.

Eureka, Cal. — The forest fire which has been raging in the northeastern part of Humboldt county is reported to be under control. A rough estimate places the burned area at 20,000 acres. It is impossible to give any exact estimate of the loss, but it is believed that it will exceed $200,000. Two men are known to have perished in the flames.

Washington.—A telegram was received Thursday from Raymond W. Pullman of the forest service, who is in Minnesota investigating forest fire conditions for the government. He estimates the loss in that state at $5,000,000 to $10,000,000, with the fires still burning. He reports a heavy rainfall lasting five hours, but says 36 hours of rain are necessary to put out all fires.

MANILA SADLY DISAPPOINTED.

Preparations for Entertaining Fleet All Are Wasted.

Manila. — The effect of Secretary of the Navy Metcalf's order that in view of the presence of cholera in Manila no shore leave was to be granted or visitors from shore allowed on the battleships when the Atlantic fleet arrived, has been largely discounted by the realization Thursday that it would be impossible to cleanse the city before the arrival of the fleet about October 1. People fully realize the necessity of the situation but they are bitterly disappointed at the outcome.

Thousands of dollars have been spent in preparation for the reception and entertainment of the officers and men. The decorations have been practically completed. A program elaborate and novel which represents four months' work by 250 active committeemen had been arranged.

Drowned at Military Camp.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The first accidental death at Camp Everett Peabody, where 5,000 regulars are encamped, occurred Thursday when Private John H. McCawl of Baltimore, Md., Troop M, Fifth cavalry, was drowned in Lake Contrary. He drove his horse into the lake, slipped from its back and started to swim. The horse kicked him on the head and he sank.

FRENCH NAVAL DISASTER.

Thirteen Men Killed by Explosion of Big Gun.

Toulon, France.—During gunnery drill Tuesday one of the big turret guns on the French armored cruiser Latouche Treville exploded with terrific violence, completely wrecking the after turret and killing outright the entire gun crew of 13 men. A number of men were seriously injured some of them probably fatally.

The accident was similar to that aboard the gunnery schoolship Couronne off Les Salins d'Hyeres, August 12 last, when by the bursting of the breech of one of the guns six men were killed and 18 injured.

The drill Tuesday had been proceeding for a considerable time when, without warning, the whole turret seemed to blow out. Dismembered bodies were thrown in all directions and several of them were hurled into the sea through the great breach caused by the explosion.

The spectacle was horrible, the dead and wounded, together with shattered arms and legs, littering the decks. A call to quarters was sounded and as speedily as possible the wounded were cared for. The gun that exploded was 7.6 inches bore, of which the cruiser carried two. Happening so soon after the accident on the Couronne, the explosion has caused a sensation in naval circles and doubtless will lead to a most rigid investigation. The Latouche Treville carries a complement of 370 men.

YANKEE IS AGROUND.

Cruiser Caught on Spindle Rock Near Buzzards Bay.

Newport, R. I.—The United States cruiser Yankee struck on Spindle Rock, near the western entrance to Buzzards bay, during a fog Wednesday, breaking several holes in her hull on the port side. She was still hard and fast Wednesday night.

Several tugs attempted to release the cruiser in the afternoon, but without success, and additional help was sent for. The naval collier Lebanon, a wrecking outfit and two tugs, have been started from the New York navy yard to the Yankee's assistance, and the naval collier Nero, which is on her way to Boston, will also be asked to come to the aid of the Yankee.

The fog was still very thick in Buzzards bay at night, but the sea was smooth and the Yankee was apparently in no immediate danger.

Frank Robinson Is Dead.

Mr. Robinson was born in Pittsburg but went to Dubuque, Ia., at an early age. A widow and daughter survive him.

SYNOPSIS.

Wilfred Vincent and Archibald ...e are introduced at the opening of ...ry, in England, the latter relating ...ale. The pair on an outing miss ...train and seeking recreation meet ... Honorable Agatha Wyckhoff," ...e hand is much sought after, be... of her wealth. Five other Agatha ...hoffs are introduced. The deceased ...ther, in an eccentric moment, made ...will so that the real Agatha, heiress ...his fortune and the castle at Wye, ...land, might wed her affinity. Thus ... Armistead, chaperon, was in duty ...d to keep the real Agatha's identity ...own. An attempt by Terhune to ...er a clew from the chaperon fails. ...ine finds old books containing pic... of a former Baroness Wyckhoff, ...h is exactly like Agatha Sixth, whom ...s courting. Agatha Fifth confesses her ...for Vincent and also that she is the ...heiress. He spurns her proposal. ...r clews to identity of the real ...ha prove fruitless.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

...ft to myself, I was thinking out ... plan of campaign as regarded ...tha Third when a slight noise in ... back of the room attracted my ...tion. I looked up, startled, for it ... late, and the large, dimly lighted ...ving room was rather an eerie ..., and saw over the back of my ... the slight form of the secretary ...proaching. Her hair was as neat ...sual and her dress was the same ...ple gray gown she wore when I ... seen her first.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Terhune," ... said, timidly, yet without hesita... "am sorry to disturb you, but ...ld you have the goodness to give ... little of your time?"

"Certainly," I replied, rising, ...ough the hour is late. Won't you ...seated?" and I found her a chair. ...s secretary leaned back against it ...d folded her hands.

"I shall be quick," she said; "but I ...t to ask you something." She ...ke in a low voice, but with perfect ...posure, though she never lifted her ...es. I caught myself wondering ...ether she cast them down habitual... so that people might observe the ...gth of her black eyelashes.

"Yes?" I said, to encourage her.

"Of course, you know Lord Vincent ...y well, don't you?" As she asked ... this direct question she looked me ...ll in the face, and as my eyes met ...rs I mentally thanked her for her ...ncy in not often permitting man to ...se into them.

"Yes," I said, recovering myself, "I ...ow him very well."

"And he tells you things, doesn't ...?"

"Most things," I replied, wondering ... what she was driving.

"Then could you tell me, please, if ...e he accepted Miss Ag.tha—the ...e with the hazel eyes that you call ...atha Fifth—when she told him she ...ed him?"

I was never more astounded in my ... How did she know that Agatha ...th had told Vincent she loved him, ...d how did it concern her? Perhaps, ...wever, she was acting under Mrs. ...rmistead's orders, but if so she ought ... have said so.

"That's a question of a very personal ...ture," I said, and eyed her search...gly; "but I don't think Lord Vincent ...uld mind, as long as you know so ...uch about it, if I tell you that he ...fused the young lady who was indis...eet enough to ask him to marry ...."

The secretary gave a sudden start, ...d then, by what seemed to be con...derable effort, regained control of ...rself.

"He refused her," I continued—for ... girl and her questions and her ...nuine feeling interested me—"al...though she told him she was the real ...norable Agatha." I was so proud ... Vincent for that that I was glad ... be able to tell someone about it.

"She said that—and he refused her?" ...peated the girl in an awed tone. ...How could he do it, how could he?"

"Then it was true? She is really ... daughter of Fletcher Boyd?" I ...ked eagerly. At last I had stumbled ...pon the truth, for I knew the secre...ry was in the secret.

But she only smiled at me. "You ...e a good man," she said, "a good ...an."

The room was growing chilly and ...e fire was getting low, and as she ...oke she slipped down from the high ...air and seated herself on a little ...ool at my feet, stretching out her ...im hands toward the blaze. "I thank ...ou," she said, simply, and gazed into ...e fire a moment, while I gazed at her ...lender young figure, her pink and ...hite skin, straight, little nose, and ...ide, red mouth with its Du Maurier ...ish—and all in a moment I felt my...elf pitying the poor little girl. Vin...ent was such an attractive young ...eamp, he might be playing fast and ...ose with her affections without in... tending it or realizing that he was doing so. Involuntarily I leaned toward her.

"My dear young lady," I said, and as I spoke I caught myself thinking her really good looking. "If she only did her hair decently," I thought, "I'd call her a beauty, I really believe I should." "My dear young lady," I said, "tell me in confidence and perhaps I can help you. Do you—er—are you—er—er—interested in Lord Wilfred? If, so, allow me, I conjure you, nay, I beg of you, to put all thought of him out of your head. He doesn't mean it, but he is a graceless young flirt. He doesn't mean a word he says. Let me warn you—be advised—"

I stopped short. In the midst of my well-meant flow of words, I stopped short, for, could I believe my eyes, the secretary was laughing at me.

"Tell Me In Confidence and Perhaps I Can Help You."

"My dear old man," she said—she did, actually—"my dear old man, your warnings are superfluous, for I am a married woman," and, still laughing, she left the room.

CHAPTER V.

Alone, I sat for a moment speechless with astonishment, as the secretary left the room, and, as I took my way slowly and thoughtfully upstairs, I resolved that this was another thing that I would not tell Vincent; he would be far more likely to ridicule me than to thank me for my effort in his behalf.

Some time after this, on a perfect day, Agatha Third and I—I had spent almost every hour since the dinner in her company, I may remark—had planned a little excursion which would keep us outdoors all day. We were going on a picnic up the little river. Have you ever tried a picnic for two? Given the right companion and a day like that, I'd warrant it to cure any attack of the blues. Agatha Third had assured me that the prettiest spot for our luncheon was a little island in the center of the stream where the current ran broad and deep, about three miles below the castle.

The day was fair, the girl was fairer, and the moments were full of joy to me. We had crossed a little bridge about a mile from the castle and were proceeding up the left bank of the river when a sudden turn of the stream brought two others of our house party into view. On the opposite bank was Vincent in high boots, knickerbockers, white shirt with sleeves rolled up, and a farmer's broad-brimmed hat of straw. He was busy over a broken fishing rod which he was trying to mend. In the center of the stream, where the current ran swift and dangerously deep, a girl stood on a large bowlder, fishing. Other bowlders at intervals between the one she was standing on and the shore where Vincent was indicated the means by which she had attained her precarious position. I recognized the girl as Agatha Second, and smiled pityingly as I thought of poor Vincent, invariably wasting his time with the wrong Agatha.

"Hullo!" they cried, cheerfully, and we waved our hands and asked them what luck they'd had. This isn't always a safe question to ask a fisherman, but I notice that people who are not fishing themselves invariably find great satisfaction in asking it. Vincent said he hadn't caught any fish, and asked if I'd landed mine yet. Just like his impudence! He'd say anything if he thought it was funny, no matter how it might annoy other people.

Just as I was thinking of some retort polite enough to utter aloud, Agatha Second's rod began to bend and jerk, and immediately there was so much action going on that in my excitement I forgot what I was about to say. I am a fisherman of some skill myself. Well, the pole began to bend and the Agatha on the rock began to scream, and Vincent shouted directions from the bank—"Easy there, easy," he entreated her; "give him more line, Aggie, more line."

"I can't!" she screamed at the top of her voice; "something's caught, and he pulls so."

"The reel!" I shouted, jumping up and down. "The reel! Press the knob and let her go!"

I knew in a moment the sort she had. It was just like mine, a patent one with a spring reel—mine often stuck that way. All this time the fish was leaping about, sometimes jumping out of the water so that we could see him, and he was a big fellow.

"Let me alone; I can do it myself," cried the girl, as Vincent started to help her, but even as she spoke her trim little foot slipped on the wet stone, and, losing her balance completely, she fell backward into the deep water, while the rod disappeared upstream.

In a moment Vincent was running at top speed along the bank till he came to a little point of land near which the drowning girl must pass. As she approached he leaped into the water, and, striking diagonally upstream, seized her by her clothing, and, fighting his way back, safely gained the point of land. Meantime I had run up the river toward a boat that I had observed near the bank. Jumping in I soon reached the spot where lay the unconscious form of Agatha Second. All this time I was dimly aware of the fact that Agatha Third had never stopped screaming and was now running up and down on the opposite bank sobbing and wringing her hands. When I reached Wilfred he was anxiously bending over the girl, but apparently without the slightest idea what to do.

I immediately fell to chafing her hands and resorting to the other well-known expedients for reviving the drowned, and to enable her to breathe more freely I removed the tight-fitting dickey of her sailor suit. It was not long before she began to regain consciousness, and it was at this moment that I made a most amazing discovery, for around the neck of the girl I saw a little silver chain, and on it was strung a heavy gold ring set with a large cross of old-fashioned emeralds.

I called to Vincent, and as I pointed at the magnificent and telltale piece of jewelry we both gazed at it, speechless with surprise at discovering in such a manner the secret of the Honorable Agatha's identity. Before she had quite regained her consciousness I readjusted her dickey, and when she was able to stand we wrapped her in our coats and carried her to the boat. There wasn't room in it for more than two, so I made Vincent get in with her and row back to the castle. So they left us, and Agatha Third and I, too thoroughly upset by the accident to wish to carry through our picnic, followed them back, walking one on each side of the stream until we reached the bridge, where we joined forces.

As we returned I did a great deal of thinking. So it was Agatha Second, after all, who was the real Honorable Agatha. For certainly her possession of the Wyckhoff ring, mentioned in the will, was proof positive. Now that I thought of it, the suspicious circumstance of Agatha Third's seemingly involuntary rising when Vincent toasted the Honorable Agatha, admitted of many explanations. At any rate, whatever her reason for her action, the presence of the Wyckhoff ring on the neck of Agatha Second had proved to me the falsity of that other clew and the identity of our fair but mysterious hostess.

HEART BEATS GIVE WARNING.

Irregular Action That Presages Attack of Scarlet Fever.

The scarlet fever heart is a peculiarity lately noticed for the first time, by a German medical man. With the stethoscope it is recognized by a reduplication of the first heart sound, followed by a rough rasping or scraping, and this appears at the onset of many cases of scarlet fever, often when no other symptoms are to be detected. In some epidemics these sounds may be heard in the majority of cases, while at other times they may be quite regularly absent. Their presence is of great value in diagnosis and may be the only warning signal to guard against the spread of infection. A boy who was pale, languid and anaemic had no other symptoms except the irregular heart sounds. From these his case was decided to be scarlet fever and subsequent peeling of the skin proved the correctness of the diagnosis. Certain children in the chickenpox ward of a hospital were restless and obviously ill. The heart sounds indicated scarlet fevor, and in these cases, too, desquamation followed, although there had been no eruption or other sign. Directly afterward this ward had an outbreak of scarlet fever in its usual form.

WHEN "CUB" SHOWED UP LATE.

His Excuse Was One That Few of the Tribe Could Make.

The average newspaper reporter is a young man generally not possessed of too much money and who considers himself lucky if he is able to square accounts from week to week. But there is one newspaper reporter in New York who does not have to bother about financial problems. He rides down to the office of his paper every day in his own automobile. The young man is the son of a wealthy iron manufacturer. He is a reporter of the common or garden variety on an afternoon newspaper and so far has managed to hold on to his job.

He showed up so late at his office the other morning that his city editor inquired, somewhat sarcastically, whether he thought he was working on a morning newspaper.

The cub tapped his highly polished tan shoes with his slender cane, flecked a bit of dust from his clothes and struck the city city editor dumb by replying:

"Well, you see, my man failed to wake me up on time."

AWFUL GRAVEL ATTACKS.

Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills After Years of Suffering.

F. A. Rippy, Depot Ave., Gallatin, Tenn., says: "Fifteen years ago kidney disease attacked me. The pain in my back was so agonizing I finally had to give up work. Then came terrible attacks of gravel with acute pain and passages of blood. In all I passed 25 stones, some as large as a bean. Nine years of this ran me down to a state of continual weakness and I thought I never would be better until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The improvement was rapid, and since using four boxes I am cured and have never had any return of the trouble."

The French abhorrence of the bath a la nature is shared by many people, particularly one old woman up in an east Tennessee town. The town had just had a water system installed and the natives were "pinting with pride" at their bathrooms and equipment where one could perform his ablutions at will without waiting and longing for Saturday night.

This old woman was an exception to the rule. She made her home with her son, and his wife, according to the mother-in-law, was "allus a-hankerin' after somepin' newfangled."

A neighbor, who had been in to inspect the improvements in the house, remarked to the old woman:

"Well, Mrs. X——, this will be a pleasure for you—bath any time, night or day. You will certainly enjoy it—"

"That I won't," said the old woman, tartly. "I been a member of the church 50 year an' always lived honest an' upright. Git inter one er them tubs? Me? Why, Sary Ellen, them things ain't decent!"

AT HOME SEPT. 29.

Though the clouds hung heavy and the rain was continuous, our last days in Germany passed very pleasantly. The vast turf fields, which otherwise present a dreary desert, were all a bloom and covered with a coat of pink and green. In Bremen we were the guests of Rev. Burchardt's family, where the hours passed only too fast. Since the German Lloyd office is in Bremen and the railroad fare to Bremen haven is included in our steamship ticket, all passengers start from Bremen. So there was not a little crowding done, when about 1850 passangers and perhaps 500 friends who accompanied them tried to get through the entrance to the trains on the morning of our departure. After a ride of one hour and 20 minutes we reached the harbor and boarded a small steamer, which carried us out to the big steamer 17½ miles out. As the waters are usually low at this time, the large ocean steamships load their supplies in the harbor and then anchor near the Rothsand light house, where passangers are taken on board. Seven small steamers were necessary to carry the passangers to the large ship It was nearly 12 o'clock Saturday noon Sept. 5 when we got settled in our cabin. Then there was a great scramble to get tickets for the places at the first tables. All seemed to have a keen appetite and ate a hearty dinner. A strong west wind was blowing and the water was rough. Soon our ship put into the north sea. Now it began to rock as if it were a duck playing on the waves. Then the "fun" began. One after another ran for the railing, but many were over taken on the way and lost their dinner, not even getting it to the fish. Oh, it was a regular "Sedan" even many of the sailors and stewards joined in the performance. But, as all pleasures are usually of short duration, this also lasted only a few hours. Sunday was a pleasant day. It was dusk as our ship put into the harbor at Cherburg, France. Here about 150 more passangers boarded our ship. Monday noon we bid "Farewell" to land as we passed a few small islands near the coast of England. Tuesday the ocean was quite rough and it was almost impossible to be on deck. The next three days was cold and foggy and the foghorn sounded forth its song of warning much of the time. Saturday was a most beautiful day, the ocean was calm and the sky so clear. We stood for hours on deck, gazing out over the broad expanse of waters.

Thoughts came to us like billows rolling over the sea. Our mind seemed so clear and the world had never before seemed so large, no history so impressive. The sunset that evening was so beautiful that no pen can describe it. Like a huge ball of molten gold sinking lower and lower, turning darker and darker. When it came near the horizen, the ocean seemed to meet it to kiss it "good-night." Lower and lower it sank till it seemed to be wrapped in the busom of the ocean and lost to sight. Sunday was a very foggy day but Monday dawned bright and clear. A strong north-west wind was blowing and the ocean was covered with white-caps which looked like thousands of flocks of geese floating on the water. It was amusing to watch the waves splash and roll. The next morning we awoke at two o'clock and noticed the engines were working very slow. Inquisitive as to what it meant we went upon deck and found we were nearing Cony island. It was a pretty sight to see the lights along the shore. Slowly we pulled into the harbor and then dropped anchor. About six o'lock a number of doctors and officers boarded our ship and while these examined the the passangers in first and second cabin, our ship slowly moved on toward the pier. It was 8 o'clock when we once more set foot on American soil. Leaving New York at 12:40 P. M we reached Buffalo about 10 o'clock that night. The next day we went to Niagara Falls crossing the upper bridge into Canada up to Horseshoe Falls, then down to Queenstown, Canada, across the bridge to Lewiston, N. Y. and back to Niagara Falls and Buffalo. The next day we went to Cleveland and after a short stop wegt on to Berea, O. where we visited Wallace College and the orphan asylum, reaching Oberlin that evening.

How restful it felt in the home of W. Stork and family after having been among strangers for months. The next day brot us to Chicago where we spent Saturday visiting at the stock yards and a number of the large stores. Taking a limited train over the I C. R'y at 6 o'clock we reached Dyersville shortly after eleven. The next morning the writer's brother took us to Colesburg where parents were anxiously waiting to greet us. After a few days we went on to McGregor to Mrs. Wessel's parents who were happy to see us return hale and hearty.

In conclusion we have a thousand reasons to be greatful to the Almighty God for His protecting providence during this long journey. We covered about 15,300 miles on land and sea without the slightest accident. We are glad to be home once more, which after all is the dearest spot on earth. Rev. G. H. Wessel.

All those that have contracted for season tickets for the lecture course here will please call at the State Savings Bank and secure their tickets and also select their seat which will be reserved for them.

Albert Riemer and Charles Bredlow who live near Garner on route 3, were Klemme callers this Thursday. The Times office also received a pleasant call and had us place their names on our subscription list as new subscribers.

Rev Wessel and family returned to Klemme Tuesday. Every one is giving them the glad hand-shake. They are looking well and hearty, especially Mrs. Wessel who is improved in health very much. His numerous articles which we published for him was appreciated by all and we also have an article in this weeks issue. We are anxiously waiting for illustrated lectures from him, which if he should produce, would certainly be interesting.

MODEL SCHOOLS OF IOWA

One Rural District Shows World What Can be Done.

Waterloo.—The rural schools of Iowa probably display their greatest perfection in organization in Amsterdam township, Hancock county. Each year for the last four years a modern school house has been built in the township, and this policy will be pursued until each of the districts is equipped with a modern and beautiful building. All schools are equipped with slate blackboards, dustless chalk and modern desks.

Free text book and writing materials are furnished to all pupils, individual dictionaries are also provided, and magazines and other supplementary reading may be found in each school.

The salary of teachers is determined by the average per cent of the certificates. For second and third grade certificates the average is divided by two. Thus, if a teacher's certificate shows an average of 80 per cent, she receives 40 per month; if an average of 70, she receives $35. First grade teachers are paid $3 a month additional. Thus if her average was 94 per cent, she would receive a half of 94 plus three, or $50 a month. Contracts with first grade teachers are made for a full year, the same as in city schools, and four holidays are allowed.

As a result of these liberal offers in salary for high class intructors, all of the schools for the past two years have been provided with first grade teachers.

The residents of the township are largely of foreign extraction, such as Bohemians, Norwegians, Swedes, Holland Dutch and German. Of course, there are some Americans.

The enthusiasm worked up in the schools of this township is due in a large measure to the energy of Ole T. Rikansrud, the secretary, and A. M. Deyoe, the county superintendent.

FLAG RAISED BY GUARDSMEN.

Fort Madison Celebrates Stockade's Centennial.

Fort Madison.—In memory of a government stockade, the building of which was begun here exactly 100 years ago by Lieutenant Kingsley of the United State army, a flag was raised by Company R. Fifty-first regimest, I. N. G. Sept. 26. The ceremonies marked the opening of the Fort Madison centennial celebration, which will continue to include Oct. 1. The event was doubly interesting from the fact that this is the home of descendants of Betsy Ross, maker of the first American flag. Old Fort Madison was erected under the direction of the United States government by Lieut. Alpha Kingsley, who, with a company of United States troops, landed at that point on the banks of the Mississippi river on the 26th day of September, 1808, and proceeded at once to erect temporary quarters and a stockade fort. The fort, however, was not completed until early in the following spring. This was the first occupancy by the United States government, in any manner, of what is now known as the great state of Iowa. It was always maintained by the Sac chief, Black Hawk, that the building of this fort was in violation of the treaty entered into a few years previous, between the Indian tribes and the government, and was one of the causes that led to the Black Hawk war. It was a regular stockade fort, with block houses on the corners from which any side and angle could be profected by firearms.

RUSSELL DEPOSITORS PAID.

Heirs of Thomas Brandon Are Giving 100 Cents Per Dollar.

Chariton.—The heirs of Thomas Brandon, who was a partner with Frank R. Crocker in the Russell bank, which closed its doors when Mr. Crocker, who was cashier of the First National bank here, suicided October 20 last, are buying all the outstanding certificates held by depositors, and are paying the balance due on them. Receiver Anderson has already paid about $47,000 to the depositors, which leaves $57,000 to be paid by the Brandon heirs, in order to settle all claims in full. Mr. Brandon has secured permission from the district court to sell part of the property which he listed last year for the benefit of the creditors, and the money is already being paid to the depositors, who will receive 100 cents on the dollar for all they had in the bank, in less than a year after the bank failed. No immediate dividend is in sight for the depositors of the defunct First National bank here.

$100,000 FIRE AT KELLOGG.

Business District of Prosperous Town Almost Gone.

Kellogg.—Fire, starting from a burning rubbish pile, inflicted a damage of at least $100,000 upon the town of Kellogg and destroyed practically an entire business block on the east side of Main street and one residence adjoining. The buildings burned include the frame hardware implement and furniture establishment of Bobzin & Son, valued at $20,000 or more; the Bobzin Bros. general merchandise store and opera house, a drug store, the large two story veneered brick bank building of the Burton & Co. State bank, a fine new residence of Carl Bobzin, just completed, and the Alex Fisher livery stable. The brick block withstood the flames for a long time, but finally succumbed, and is probably a complete loss, as are the office and plant of the Kellogg Tribune on the second floor. While the volunteer department was struggling bravely with its limited equipment, the water pressure began to fail and in the very midst of the fight against the fire the reservoir was completely emptied. An alarm was sent to Newton and Grinnell. From Newton came many volunteers with ladders and other equipment; from Grinnell came the steamer, both on special trains. The Grinnel steamer alone saved the entire business district from destruction. Telephone communication was entirely cut off early, both exchanges being burned.

ROBBED OF HIS DRUG STORE

Creston Man Accuses Missing Men of Gross Fraud.

Creston.—Allegations charging the grossest fraud are outlined in an action started in the district court here by John Kees, until recently a well known druggist of this city.. Kees asserts that in August B. H. Merrifield and L. N. Merrifield approached him to trade an Arkansas farm valued at $7,000, for his drug store and residence homestead, each of which he valued at $2,500, the deal to be subject to his approval of the farm. The Merrifields conducted the drug store while Kees visited the land, and during his absence they sold the store and furnished deeds to a third party Allen F. Bock. The farm had been grossly misrepresented, and Kees had no intention of concluding the deal But upon his return he found himself ousted and a third party in possession. His only recourse now is to have the courts set aside the transaction. The Merrifields have disappeared.

IOWA MILLIONAIRE HONORED

English People Honor Memory of James Woodward.

Dubuque.—James Woodward, who settled in Dubuque when a young man and became a millionaire in the cabinet business, died on August 29. He was born in England and in his youth lived at Kirby Stephen, Westmoreland. After his death the people of Kirby Stephen held a memorial service in his honor. "In recent years he established several scholarships in the town where he was born, and last year added to his benefactions by contributing a sum of money to establish an old age pension scheme for needy local preachers and their widows."

Want County High School

Corning.—The necessary 1,000 names to the petition to request that the establishment of a county high school here be submitted to the voters have been secured by the Rev. T. B. Turner, who was appointed some time ago by the Commercial club of this city and the supervisors have ordered that the question be submitted to the voters at the coming election. For the erection of new buildings a tax of 4 mills will be asked.

1,200 Fire at Bancroft.

Bancroft.—The large farm barn of Adam Ditsworth, a farmer living four miles west of here, burned to the ground together with thirty tons of hay and 300 bushels of oats. The total loss is $1,200 with $550 insurance in the County Mutual. The farm had just been sold to E. M. Johnson, but final papers had not yet been filed for record.

$50,000 Fire at Waverly.

Waverly.—Fire completely destroyed the municipally owned water and lighting plants in this city, inflicting a loss of nearly $50,000, with insurance of only $8,000. The city is practically without fire protection and in complete darkness.

State Capital Gossip

Many Items of Interest from Our Correspondent at Des Moines.

Iowa Mothers' Day.

Des Moines.—The following is the communication the Iowa Congress of Mothers has issued, supplementary to the governor' proclamation for Parents' day:

Believing there is an increasing demand for a sustained effort on the part of parents and educators, ministers and philanthropists to crystalize into actuality, the aroused sentiment for the betterment of our children, and having full faith in the power of concerted action, the Iowa Congress of Mothers desire to supplement the proclamation of the governor of our state with the express wish that this parents' day shall receive universal recognition with appropriate services emphasizing the need of each community, and that a report of such meeting be sent to Mrs. Walter Brown, 2141 West Grand avenue Des Moines, president of the Iowa Congress of Mothers, with further suggestions as how best to safeguard the child and youth of our state from physical, mental and morel disease. To throw around them better home and legal protection, more of love and helpful influence, consequently less of law and punishment.—Mrs. Walter Brown, President of Iowa Congress of Mothers.

Iowa War Horses.

Major. H. Broughton, who attended the national guard camps in Iowa on behalf of the War department, being an officer in the regular army, has recommended that twenty-five war horses be kept by the state at the agricultural college to furnish mounts for the guard officers in time of camp maneuvers, etc. Major Broughton was the officer in charge of the famous maneuvers at Des Moines two years ago. He is an expert on military affairs. In addition to recommending that there be suitable mounts for the guard officers, he urges the formation of a brigade organization within the national guard of Iowa. He also recommends that the period of encampment be extended to twelve days; that a brigade organization be adopted, and that the state "should select places for encampments and maneuvers which, while affording reasonable advantages, from a military standpoint, would also give the soldiers, when not engaged in military work, an opportunity for enjoyable recreation."

Purchases Lot for New Home.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. a contract was closed with L. H. Bush for the purchase of the corner lot at Fourth and Chestnut streets on which the new Y. M. C. A. building will be erected as soon as possible. The lot is just north of the auditorium and has a frontage of 156 feet on Fourth street and 132 feet on Chestnut. It is separated from the Auditorium by a 10-foot alley, thus giving light and ventilation on all sides to the building. The directors of the Association will institute a short term building campaign next spring some time and it is thought that the building will be started some time in he fall of 1909. The transfer of the property does not become effective until July 1, 1909 at which time the directors hope to have all the funds necessary for the building subscribed.

Will Invite League Here.

Des Moines is a candidate for the convention of the American League of Municipalities in 1910. Its candidacy will be announced at the meeting of the league in Omaha next month. Secretary Botsford of the Commercial Club will write a letter inviting the league to Des Moines two years hence, and Councilman John MacVicar and the other Des Moines representatives will do the missionary work among the delegates.

School District Refuses.

The Woodlawn school district has refused to come into the Des Moines consolidated school district.. Rather than give up the two school houses, the Woodlawn board threatens to go into court. The Woodlawn district places a valuation upon its school property of $4,891, while the special adjuster, A. E. Noble, gives the district credit for half of that amount.

Black Walnut Lumber Market.

Des Moines is now the largest black walnut lumber market in the world. This has been brought about by the securing of enormous contracts for gunstocks by the Langton Gunstock company of this city. It is estimated that 3,000 feet of black walnut lumber will be required to fill existing orders.

Educate Incorrigibles.

At the meeting of the state institution superintendents with the state board of control, it was decided to discuss at the December conference, the education of the boys and girls at the industrial schools at Eldora and Mitchellville. This problem is one which has given the board of control and the institution superintendents much concern. Superintendent Fitzgerald of the school at Mitchellville has consented to make an address on the subject at the next conference, which will be held in December. His subject will be, "What Should the Boys and Girls of Our Industrial Schools be Taught from a Literary and Practical Standpoint and the Number of Years Required for the Training?" Other subjects on the programme are as follows:

"Rewards and Punishments," by J. C. Sanders, warden state penitentiary, Fort Madison. "Some Thoughts on Paresis," Max E. Witte, M. D., superintendent Clarinda state hospital. "Agriculture—Selection, propagation of and Care of Live Stock on State Farms," John Cownie, chairman state board of control. "Preparation and Serving of Foods in State Institutions," C. F. Applegate, M. D., superintendent Mount Pleasant state hospital. Round Table Topics—"Clothing for Wards of the State", "Disinfection and Sanitation at Our State Institutions."

To Care for Tuberculosis Patients.

An organization, representative of all the benevolent associations of Des Moines, has been formed to provide some way of caring for the advanced cases of tuberculosis in Des Moines. Dr. E. Luther Stevens was elected a permanent chairman and Dr. Nelle Noble secretary. To care for the immediate cases among the poor, the newly organized association may utilize part of the city hospital grounds near the detention hospital as a tubercular colony. Until some provisions can be made for the advanced cases, by the county or state, the association will be continued as a charitable institution with the sole purpose of caring for tubercular patients. It may ask later that the county erect suitable outdoor dwellings or tents on the grounds near the county farm and that the county physician be given special supervision over all of the tubercular patients in the county. The Rev. Monsignor Flavin, Rabbi Mannheimer and Dr. E. E. Dorr were appointed to name committees and draft the constitution for the association, which may be known as the tuberculosis institute.

Harlan to Furnish Names.

Indian names which have been applied to counties, towns and streams in Iowa will be given the preference in renaming 200 Des Moines streets This suggestion from E. R. Harlan, acting curator of the Iowa historical department has been approved by Councilman MacVicar and Mr. Harlan has been asked to furnish a list of available names. Because of their more familiar pronunciation and greater popularity both within and without the state he preferred names already applied to Iowa towns, counties and streams, such as Mahaska, Winneshiek, Pottawattamie and Wapello. A soon as Mr. Harlan sends in his list the names will be applied to the various streets and an ordinance will be passed making them official.

Road Earnings show Decrease.

The first railroad to file its report with the railroad commission of Iowa concerning its earnings and expenses for the year 1907-1903 is the Chicago Great Western. It is shown by the sworn statements that the gross earnings of the entire system have materially fallen off. The report indicates that the total gross earnings including interest and dividends on stock held in other roads, amounted to $24,477,406.79, while the net income was $13,638,691.47. In the year ending June 30, 1907, the gross earnings from operation were $26,236,056.86, while the net income was $15,740,565.66.

Delegates Are Appointed.

Four more delegate committees to attend the Lakes to the Gulf Deep Waterways convention at Chicago next month, have been named in addition to the list of twenty which was named by ..ayor Mathis. In addition, Secretary Wrightman of the Iowa State Manufacturers' association is to name a committee to represent that body.

TAFT IS GIVEN ROYAL WELCOME

FIVE ENTHUSIASTIC MEETINGS HELD IN DES MOINES.

SPEAKS TO MANY THOUSANDS

Judge Taft Discusses the Leading Political Questions of the Day.

Des Moines, Sept. 26.—The reception given to William Howard Taft, the republican candidate for president in Des Moines last night was never equalled in this city, unless it was by the one given Roosevelt four years ago. It was a fitting climax to the day, spent traveling through Iowa, seeing and talking to more than 200,000 people in twenty or more speeches. Secretary Taft retired to his train last night at 11 o'clock, much gratified by the demonstration which marked his first day in this state and which those who are traveling with him say never has been surpassed in the history of politics in this country.

The most inspiring meeting that ever greeted a candidate for high office was that into which Judge Taft was introduced immediately upon his arrival, that of the women held at Plymouth Congregational church.

Judge Taft said in part: "When we took these people, we found them a Christian people, that is 7,000,000 of them, and the thing that is now left with us to do is to put them on their feet and make them a self-governing people. This we can do, because being a Christian people, and really under occidental influence, their ideals and attributes are the same as ours and thus we can deal with them and make them self-respecting, patriotic citizens. We can do it by working with them and giving them time. This realization of facts I should like to awaken in the hearts of all Americans. The democratic party is opposed to the idea, and says let them go; but I ask you if it is not better to protect them and encourage them during thenext sivty or eighty year to continue the work of the churches and schools, where 500,000 Filipino children are now learning to read and write the English language, and to become good citizens, to give them a fair chance, than it would be to cast them off in their national infancy to return to the condition from which they are now being raised? I wish you could all see the Philippines and the Filipinos as I have, and as your townsmen Mr. Young, has, and see what is being done, and then I know your interest would be aroused by these people.

From this meeting the guest of the evening was escorted to the Auditorium, where he made his principal speech.

The audience rose to its feet, and amid enthusiastic cheering, cries of welcome and the waving of handkerchiefs the presidental candidate walked to the front of the stage. Smiling his appreciation of the royal welcome, Mr. Taft raised his hand for silence, and the cheering finally subsided. Governor Cummins then introduced Major Lacey, saying that Mr. Taft wished to rest a few minutes before begining his address.

Another ovation followed when the governor introduced the candidate for president as "a man after the heart and after the fashion of Theodore Roosevelt.' The cheering again continued for several minutes.

He then took up at some length the record of the republican party for the past twelve years. Among its greatest achievements he mentioned the putting to death of the free silver fallacy, the enactment of the Dingley tariff law, the successful conduct of the Spanish war, the taking over of Cuba and Porto Rico, the establishment of a government in the Philippines, the building of the Panama canal and the development of the army and navy.

"But these are not the greatest achievements of the republican party during the last twelve years it has been in power," he continued. "During this time there arose a moral awakening of the people and the chief exponent of this awakening is Theodore Roosevelt. They ask what has Roosevelt accomplished? I say he has accomplished a great deal more than mere denunciation of wrong-doing."

Mr. Taft then entered upon an extended discussion of the trust question . He spoke of the abuses that have resulted from the formation of great corporations.

"While on the federal bench I tried the Addiston pipe case and at that time made a careful study of the whole matter of combinations in restraint of trade. The evidence showed that when a contract for pipe was to be awarded the agents of the different companies in the combination would meet in secret and submit bids. The concern having the lowest bid would then be permitted to submit the lowest bid to the city purchasing the supplies. The government brought suit against these firms under the anti-trust law. We held that we could enjoin it from entering into such an agreement in restraint of trade. We did enjoin it and the combination was broken up. In that case I had to go very carefully into the question of what constitutes an unlawful trust and I made that study long before I ever thought of being a candidate for president.

"Illegal combinations are of two kinds. One is where different corporations enter into an agreement to divide up the business of a certain territory. The other is where different companies are merged for the purpose of controlling their particular business. Rebates and undselling of small competitors are usually indications of an attempt to monopolize.

"As a matter of fact it is possible to bring many different concerns together into one big corporation for the purpose of reducing the cost of production without attempting to monopolize the business. But when a corporation is used not alone to lessen the cost of production but to stifle competition then it is illegal. Such corporations can be controlled. All that is needed is the proper administrative machinery to make possible a complete investigation of the workings of every large corporation. If I am elected it will be my chief duty to study these questions and point out a way to end the abuses growing out of the great combinations of capital.

"If elected to the presidency I will use all my efforts towards clinching the standards of morality instituted by Theodore Roosevelt. I don't mean to say we will reach perfection and I am not guaranteeing a millennium. But I will do all in my power to carry out the policies of Theodore Roosevelt."

"The normal operation of a protective tariff and the proper competition among those who enjoy its benefits is the reduction of the cost of production. The encouragement which the industry receives leads to the investment of capital in it, to the training of labor, to the exercise of the inventive faculty of which the American has so much, and in practically every case in which adequate protection has been given, the price of the article has fallen, the difference in the cost of producing the article abroad and here has been reduced, and the necessity for maintaining the tariff at the former rate has ceased.

"The Dingley tariff has been in operation now more than ten years. That is a period longer, I think, than the operation of any protective tariff that we have had. It is intended under the protective system by judicious encouragement to build up industries as the natural conditions of the country justify to a point where they can stand alone and fight their own battles in the competition of the world. Improved machinery and training due to our inventive genius together with an extending home market, certainly reduces the cost of production. Treasury and court decisions have given constructions to the tariff different from those intended by its authors. There are many articles in common use today which were unknown when the Dingley tariff bill was enacted. Conditions with respect to the cost of articles abroad have changed just as they have changed in this country, so that the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad ten years ago was in many instances different and less than it is today.

"The party is pledged to a genuine revision, and as the temporary head of that party and president of the United States, if it be successful in November, I expect to use all the influence that I have by calling immediately a special session and by recommendations to congress, to secure a genuine and honest revision of the tariff in accordance with the principle of protection laid down in the platform, based upon the examination of appropriate evidence and impartial as between the consumer and the manufacturer.

It is my judgment that a revision of the tariff in acordance with the pledge of the republican party will be on the whole a substantial revision downward, though there probably will be a few exceptions in this regard. As the temporary leader of the party, I do not hesitate to say with all the emphasis of which I am capable that if the party is given the mandate of power in November, it will perform its promises in good faith."

He denied emphatically that the protected interests have contributed to the campaign found and endangered the carrying out of the pledge of the party for revision.

Judge Taft said that the only thing lacking for complete restoration of business conditions is inspiration of confidence of those who control capital, so that they will lend it to the industrial development of the country, to the building of new enterprises, etc. One-third of the demand for the manufactured products of the country comes from their railroads. If they have not the money to buy the effect is plain. Once confidence is restored and the wheels will again begin to turn.

The election in November will have a marked effect on the question of whether confidence will be restored or not. Certainty of the future is a prime element in restoration of confidence.

The full dinner pail has as much application now as it did four, eight and twelve years ago. Mr. Bryan is sensitive about the full dinner pail and suggests that it is being worked overtime, but the speaker submitted that the full dinner pail cannot be worked overtime. Mr. Bryan says consideration of it bribes the working man. His view and that of the speaker did not coincide as to this, for Judge Taft insisted that the working man has the right to estimate the effect upon his welfare of the policies of the parties.

In closing the speaker congratulated the people of Iowa on their honesty and their intelligence

The Three Grades of Milk.

A city man took a house in the country for the summer. He sought out a farmer at once, looked over the cows on the farm, found them to his liking, and said:

"My servant will come to you every morning for a quart of milk."

"All right," said the farmer; "it will be eight cents."

"But it must be pure milk, mind," said the city man, "absolutely pure."

"In that case it will cost you ten cents."

"Very good. And you will milk the quart from the cow in my servant's presence?"

"Yes—for 15 cents."—Washington Star.

Many a woman has won and held the adoration of man by means of a clear, fresh, velvety skin. Even among women it is easier to be prominent socially if your complexion is good. SHOWING THE WEDDING GIFTS.

Charming Exhibitions Made at French Bridals.

In Paris most charming conceits are devised to enhance the effect of an exhibition of wedding gifts in the bride's home. Sometimes the furniture is removed from one or two rooms to give space to show cases, where is made a tasteful array of the most delicate parts of the trousseau, and numberless bivelots. The heavier articles are suspended from screens or round the walls from hanging ribbons, pictures, or even dados of crinkled papier velours in some subdued shade. One of the most telling arrangements is dispersal against the walls of small tables covered with mignonette-green silk, and on which are artistically displayed the bridal treasures, to each of which is attached with a pink ribbon the card of the giver. The contents of every table are partly veiled by vaporous tulle held up to the wall by some bracket lamp, high statuette, and draped at the sides with large choux in pink satin. The coloring depends evidently on the prevailing tones of the house decoration. Such a treatment is light, tasteful and not too expensive. A scheme which involves larger reception rooms and a greater outlay of time and money consists of a triumphal arch in bamboo at the entrance to every door, often covered with climbers, whilst through the whole suite of rooms are distributed in profusion palm trees, jardinieres, tall vases and corbeilles full of flowers, giving the impression of a bower of flowers and foilage, in which are nestled the marvels of the bride's outfit and of her friends' generosity and taste.

SUES FOR A MILLION

Sumuel Bute's claim against Geo. Well's Estate Sustained.

Webster City.—Buried in the announcement from the Grundy county court at Grundy Center, over which Judge Ransien of Independence is presiding that "the claim of Samuel Bute against the Wells estate was sustained," lies a "human interest" story such as is seldom revealed in a court anywhere without raising a fervor of interest which sweeps the nation. The estate of the late George Wells is worth several millions of dollars, and the claim of Bute, who lives at Stanhope, in this county, where he is a rural mail carrier, was for a cool million—or rather property which is worth practically that amount.

Nothing was ever known of the Bute claim by the public—until the death of Wells about a year and a half ago, when, soon after the death of Wells, who was an old bachelor, Bute filed his claim, the whole state was astounded. Despite the fact that it was looked upon with suspicion, Bute kept his own counsel and has now been vindicated by the court sustaining it.

The claim of Bute runs back over forty years. In the early sixties he was employed as a farm hand on the Wells farm in Grundy county. He had a speculative nature and now and then took a chance in the Louisiana lotteries, then in the height of their popularity as speculative ventures. He was lucky enough to win $15,000 at this, and Wells invested it for the young man. A contract was entered into whereby Bute was to pay Wells a stipulated sum per year for looking after his property. Iowa land was selling for almost nothin in those days. Wells bought up section after section in Grundy, Kossuth and Emmet counties. The land advanced as the years pased and when Wells died was worth nearly a million of dollars For some reason Bute was never able to get a settlement out of Wells during the latter's life. He had lost the written contract and probably feared he could not prove his claim. Upon the death of Wells, however, the claim was filed. As yet Mr. Bute has received no official announcement from his attorneys, but is expecting details of the decision at once. He is a man past sixty years of age and well deserves the good fortune that has come to him in his declining years.

BYERS ARGUES THE CASE.

Would Remove County Attorney Kuhlemeier of Burlington.

Burlington.—Attorney General Byers appeared in the district court here Oct. 3, and argued the demurrer filed by County Attorney Kuhlemeier in the case to remove him from office instituted by the Rev. C. K. Lennat for the Burlington Civic federation. Kuhlemeier's demurrer was based on the claim that the law did not instruct him to see that the mulct law was enforced, but to see that the taxes were collected. Attorney General Byers pointed out the intent of the law which he held made the county attorney responsible for the observance of the law. He made a strong argument and declared that the law of the state regarding the saloons will be enforced to the letter. Judge Smyth, presided and took the matter under advisement; with regard to the present situation in Burlington concerning the mulct law, Mr. Byers intimated that all saloon keepers who were not now under the law would be prosecuted by the state.

MORE GOULD CASE BRIBERY

HOTEL EMPLOYE TOLD PRIEST OF BEING OFFERED $2,000.

Wife Submits Affidavit Defending Herself Against Charge of Drunkenness Made by Husband.

New York. — That $2,000 had been offered an employe of the Hotel St. Regis to give false testimony against Mrs. Howard Gould was the substance of an affidavit, purporting to have been made by Rev. Father Joseph G. Murray, which was presented to Justice Giegerich in the supreme court Friday.

The case came up before the justice on a motion to strike out certain allegations in Mrs. Gould's complaint in her suit for a separation from her husband, as scandalous and irrelevant. Mrs. Gould's counsel opposed the motion and presented several affidavits in which it was charged that certain witnesses had been hired to testify in favor of Mr. Gould. The affidavit of Father Murray was one of the papers presented. It declares that Michael H. Doody had told the priest that while he was employed at the Hotel St. Regis where Mrs. Gould lived, a detective went to him with the proposition that he "give a proper report of Mrs. Gould's comings and goings at the hotel, the amount of wine she drank and the names of her visitors, notably those of them that were men."

Another affidavit, made by Maurice Molloy, alleges that Molloy was under contract, while custodian of Castle Gould at Port Washington, to treat Mrs. Gould in a contemptuous fashion. The lawyer for Mrs. Gould recited how it was alleged that Molloy had gone into the house, sat on divans and puffed cigarette smoke in Mrs. Gould's face when she ordered him out of the house.

An affidavit submitted by Mrs. Gould in reply to allegations of her husband that she is addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, says:

"When living in the country and spending most of my time in the open air, I have drunk a cocktail on sitting down to luncheon, and generally a glass of white wine with luncheon. At dinner, whenever I felt like it, I drank a cocktail and a glass of champagne. We were always accustomed to have wine served at these meals, but that was the extent of my drinking."

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

The next morning when she came to breakfast I inquired with concern as to the effects of the ent of the day previous. She ied most kindly that she felt very well as ever and thanked earnestly for my share in her res- In fact, her gratitude was so ise as to make me uncomfortable, I protested volubly that what I done was nothing. Nevertheless, that day on Agatha Second clung me in a manner that was almost thing. Vincent, to my surpise, in- of taking advantage of his part hero, seemed rather anxious to the girl, whereas, before our inal discovery, he had seemed to be e taken with her. Although his duct was a puzzle to me, yet I could rejoice that it was so, for it left field absolutely free to me, and I as each day passed that now, in- I was hotter on the trail of that nty millions than I had yet been.

It was the first Sunday after the ac- ent and the fourth of our stay. We breakfasted at eight and were ing around aimlessly waiting until was time to go to church.

When it was finally time to get dy my head ached from the sun, I had been sitting without my hat, I decided that I would not go that rning, though there was a flattering orus of protests when I made this nouncement.

"I shall go," said Vincent, positive- just as if anyone had disputed it. always go, don't I, Miss Marsh?" ap- ling to the secretary, who was pres- , but who, of course, had been rath- left out of the conversation.

"Yes," she answered, smiling at him ntly. "You always do—ever since 've known you, that it. You're a ful, Lord Wilferd." But she laughed she said it, and Vincent, for no rea- at all, looked pleased.

Then the girls all went into the use to change their frocks, and Vin- nt, too, had to go and get himself gged out in all the swellness of his nd street afternoon things.

"Are you going to ride or walk?" I ked him as he came downstairs head of the young ladies.

"Walk," he said. "It's such a rip- ng day the girls thought they'd like . The phaeton is coming for us after urch. What's the matter with you? e shall miss you."

"Oh, just a bit off my feed this orning. But, Vincent, my boy, do you realize that you're going to church all alone by yourself with six girls, the prettiest in England?"

"Seven," corrected Vincent, un- oved. "The secretary is going with this morning."

I shook my head at him admiringly. "You're a wonderful fellow," I told him; "I couldn't manage seven of them for once to save my skin. It keeps me busy enough when I take 'em one at a time."

At this moment the girls trooped downstairs. They had their prettiest gowns on and were fully aware of the admiration in the eyes of Vincent and myself. And that admiration was per- fectly excusable, for the six Agathas were looking unusually lovely in their flowered frocks, big white hats, and the dainty parasols to match the wide sashes, and I should have been hard put to it to say which was the hand- somest. But as they filed out of the big door I saw Vincent look longest at the secretary, who walked a little behind the others, her plain, dark blue silk gown and little rough straw hat with the pink roses being a conspicu- ous contrast to the frills and furbe- lows of the six Agathas. I thought I had never seen her look so well, and she passed us men without so much as glancing in our direction, though Vin- cent's gaze, I thought, was a trifle rude.

They had been gone some 15 minutes when it occurred to me that it might do my head good to go out and get some fresh air. Besides which I had begun to regret that I had permitted Vincent to go to church the only esquire of such a galaxy of beauty. So I put on my hat and strolled out over the lawn and down the long drive, and before I knew it I had reached the bottom of the hilly road and had set out over the fields. The church party had gone by the way of the path over the fields, for that was a shorter route than the main road.

As I walked quickly along the well-beaten path between the thickets I stopped suddenly and stooped to pick up a small dust-covered object which proved to be a prayer book. "One of those careless girls has dropped it," I said to myself, for they had all carried them. Opening it to find the owner's name, I was much agitated to read on the flyleaf this inscription: "To my daughter Agatha, from her father, Fletcher Boyd," and the date, 1900. It was, then, a gift which Fletcher Boyd had made to his daughter only two years before his death.

I was wild with excitement in a minute. I would keep the book, and some time when all the girls were gathered together I would announce that I had it in my possession and see if one of them did not betray herself by asking me for it. But Fate decreed that I should make my test of the prayer book more speedily, for I spied in the distance the white figure of a girl hastening back. The path was dusty and the sun was shining right in her face, so I trusted she had not seen me, and, putting the little volume down just where I had found it, I jumped behind the bushes. The owner of the book was looking for her property. On she came, running slowly and glancing eagerly from side to side of the pathway. As she came opposite me she stopped and snatched up the book, and when she had run back again the conviction that the Honorable Agatha was no other than Agatha Fourth was forced in upon me.

So roused was I by this event that I turned my steps homeward at once. Suspicion had now fallen on every one of the six Agathas, but this—this was the most convincing of proofs! That night I could hardly wait for the end of the evening, so that I could drag Vincent into my room and disclose to him my final and greatest discovery. I was so full of excitement over it, besides feeling a certain pride in my wit and sagacity which had led to the discovery of so many important clews, that I was rather disappointed when Vincent received my disclosure with indifference.

"At it again, Arch," he said, rather gloomily, as he sat cross-legged before my fire in extreme deshabille, and smoking his vile pipe. "What is the use? I should think you'd get tired of pursuing the elusive gold. I admire your patience, my boy, but I don't take any more stock in this 'clew' than I did in your others. When you think that you have now fastened suspicion upon each one of the six fair ladies who have been christened Agatha I marvel at the sanguine temperament which permits you to place so much importance on this last find of yours." He stopped, and I answered him rather sarcastically, as I didn't like the gentle ridicule of his tone or his lack of enthusiasm.

"It seems to me," I said, "that considering how you've spent your time, my dear boy, you are a very poor person to look down upon my efforts to turn this adventure of ours to some account. The fact that I have kept my eyes open and used those faculties of penetration and observation of which I am the natural possessor to discover a piece of information which might prove of great value, not only to myself, but also to you—this fact, I say, Vincent, ought hardly to bring upon me your derision as well as your lack of sympathy." I don't mind admitting that I really felt hurt, and Vincent saw that I did.

He took his pipe out of his mouth and looked at me with those big, truthful eyes of his so penitently that I smiled inwardly; then he gathered up his long limbs from my hearthrug and came and ensconced himself at my feet as I sat in my easy chair.

"Well there, then," he said, patting my hand as if I'd been an old woman or a small child. "Poor old Arch'bald, did I make it cross? Well, it was a shame!" And he smiled at me with such a mixture of contrition and fun that I was obliged after a short struggle to laugh unconstrainedly.

"Well, I suppose you will begin operations according to your latest clew to-morrow?" he laughed at me.

I did not answer him, and silence fell upon us. I was pondering over the problem and did not look at Vincent for a long while, but when I did I saw that his face wore a troubled, hopeless look, and that his whole attitude indicated profound dejection.

"Vincent," I said, leaning over him, "what's the trouble?" I had been noticing of late that he had been subject to fits of melancholy altogether out of keeping with his character, and I had come to the conclusion that he had some trouble on his mind. I wanted to know what it was, so that I could help him. When I spoke he turned his head slowly and looked at me a moment solemnly, then smiled faintly, the very ghost of that splendid, boyish smile of his, so that it went to my heart.

"Oh, Arch," he burst out, "everything's wrong! But it's not my fault; how could I help loving her?"

I was amazed. What was the boy talking about, and who was it that he loved?

"Yes, sir," he went on; "I met her four miles from town carrying an old beggar-woman's bundle because the poor old thing had hurt her foot. And when I drew up the dogcart and asked her to get in and take the bundle too, she shook her head, and, by Jove, she wouldn't get in till I let the old beggar-woman get in, too!" Vincent turned to me positively radiant. "Ah, Terhune!" he cried, "you don't know what it is. I love her so!"

And as he stood there, his face transfigured, I grasped in a moment the meaning of the whole thing and the understanding struck like a blow at my heart and I knew how dear the welfare of this boy was to me. Somehow, Vincent represents to me the things I might have been, and am not, the things I might have won, and have lost; he represents the first flush of my own youth. And now that I had wasted those opportunities to lead the selfish existence of the average bachelor, I found a certain joy in again experiencing those first throbs of living that had been mine, in the person and life of young Vincent.

As he stood before me, glowing with feeling, I felt that it was for me to wipe that look from his face, cruel as it seemed, and my anger at the woman who had so deceived the boy by withholding from him the knowledge that she was married helped me to do the deed.

"Vincent," I said, slowly, "do you mean—do I gather from your ravings that you honestly—er—care for this person?" I had risen to my feet, and as I spoke Vincent's whole expression changed in a flash.

"Your inference is perfectly correct," he said. His face went white and there was war in his tone, for he perceived that I meant trouble.

The necessity of saving the boy I loved from the consequences of his own folly took possession of me, and I was full of rage at Vincent and at that conscienceless woman in the gray gown who had entrapped him.

"You fool," I said, putting my face close to his square, cleft chin, "why do you throw away your chance in life like that? What do you want to let yourself get entangled with an adventuress for? Don't you know the woman's married? She confessed to having one husband; she may have a dozen, for all I know!"

GUARD FOR GEN. WASHINGTON.

Soldiers So Honored Chose for Their Motto "Conquer or Die."

By general order 11 dated at Valley Forge, March 17, 1778, 100 men were selected from the army to be annexed to the guard of the commander-in-chief. The guard then existing numbered 80 Virginians and for that reason it was ordered that the new members be taken from the troops of other states. It was further prescribed that the men must be Americans born, 20 to 30 years, five feet eight to five feet ten, of "robust constitution; well limbed and men of established characters for sobriety and fidelity." The official designation of this force was the commander-in-chief's guard, but it was commonly known as the life guard and Washington's body guard. Its first commondant was Capt. Caleb Gibbs of Rhode Island. He was in turn succeeded by William Colfax of New Jersey, who had been made lieutenant of the corps when it was first brought into being. The motto of the life guard was "Conquer or Die." Capt. Colfax eventually attained the rank of general. His grandson was Schuyler Colfax.

HISTORIAN AN IRRITABLE MAN.

Freeman's Temper Flared Up Over Intellectual Differences.

Freeman, the historian, it was said, was apt to grow irritable over matters of intellectual difference. One day he was at the Macmillans, when the conversation turned upon the subject of Ireland. Mr. Macmillan said that, for his part, he was in favor of granting autonomy.

Whereupon Freeman began to growl at the use of a Greek word.

"Why can't you speak English?" demanded he, "and say home rule, instead of speaking Greek, which you don't know?"

One of the guests flushed with anger and ventured to reprove Freeman, calling his attention to the respect due their host, and at the same time paying tribute to Mr. Macmillan's remarkable abilities. But although Freeman did not apologize in so many words, he smoothed the matter over by a humorous repetition of his criticism. Later, some one mentioned gout. "There you go again!" exclaimed Freeman. "Why can't we call it toe-woe?"

Equal Rights in Nature.

A woman writer wants to know why it is that a man is beautiful only in his youth, and some one remarks that nature intended him to have equal rights with women to grow ugly as he grows older. It is not often, however, that men realize the fact.

"YOUR FACE YOUR FORTUNE."

An attractive face may not actually be worth money to one, but it does have much to do with success and happiness in life. The chief charm of an attractive face is a good skin, which is easiest acquired and preserved by the use of a standard face cream like Pompeian Massage Cream. Pompeian is not a cosmetic or rouge, but a household preparation for cleansing and soothing the skin through aiding nature in nature's own way. Pompeian is rubbed in and then rubbed out and off. Nothing is left on or in the skin. And herein lies the harmlessness of Pompeian. The action of the Cream and the massaging brings the natural glow to the cheeks. Also, wrinkles and crow's feet are driven away, sallowness vanishes, angles are rounded out and double chins reduced by its use. Pompeian Massage Cream is the largest selling face cream in the world, 10,000 jars being made and sold daily. This fact indicates both its wide popularity and its perfect harmlessness, for several million women would not use Pompeian if it were not an exceptionally pure and safe product. To keep young-looking and good-looking use Pompeian. Your druggist is most likely one of the 40,000 dealers who sell it; 50c and $1.00 per jar. But to prove to you the merits of Pompeian we will send a quarter ounce jar, free. This affords an ample supply to show how Pompeian works for good looks. This sample jar is not sold by druggists. Send 10c in stamps or coin to cover cost of postage and packing. Write today to The Pompeian Mfg. Co., 159 Prospect St., Cleveland, O.

NAME WAS A COMPROMISE.

Explanation of Remarkable Cognomen of Nevada Town.

A Nevada man having extensive mining claims in the goldfield region tells of a lucky strike that was made last year near Carson City, a strike that proved to be of such promise that a goodly sized camp immediately sprang up around it.

The two principal mine owners were, respectively, an Irishman and a Jew, and as a compliment to these leading citizens the camp decided to leave to them the bestowal of a suitable name upon the new community.

There followed many conferences between the two, none of which resulted in an agreement. The Irishman stood out for a name that would suggest his native isle, while the Jew was just as insistent, on his part, for a name that should be suggestive of the chosen people. This deadlock continued so long that the rest of the camp grew restless, and finally insisted that there should be a compromise. So the new camp was called "Tipperusalem."—Lippincott's.

HE REMEMBERED.

"And did your uncle remember you in his will?"

But Tells Facts About Postum.

"We have used Postum for the past eight years," writes a Wis. lady, "and drink it three times a day. We never tire of it.

"For several years I could scarcely eat anything on account of dyspepsia, bloating after meals, palpitation, sick headache—in fact was in such misery and distress I tried living on hot water and toast for nearly a year.

"I had quit coffee, the cause of my trouble, and was using hot water, but this was not nourishing.

"Hearing of Postum I began drinking it and my ailments disappeared, and now I can eat anything I want without trouble.

"My parents and husband had about the same experience. Mother would often suffer after eating, while yet drinking coffee. My husband was a great coffee drinker and suffered from indigestion and headache.

"After he stopped coffee and began Postum both ailments left him. He will not drink anything else now and we have it three times a day. I could write more but am no gusher—only state plain facts."

OF INTEREST TO MOTHERS.

There is one subject which always interests the mothers of young children and that is how to treat their coughs and colds or to ward off a threatened attack of croup. For this purpose we can recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It always proves beneficial. In case of croup it should be given as soon as the croupy cough appears so as to prevent the attack. Keep it at hand ready for instant use. Many mothers do so and it saves them much uneasiness. For sale by G A Pabst & Co.

Mrs. M M Davidson of No. 379 Gifford Ave. San Jose, Cal. says: The worth of Electric Bitters as a general family remedy for headache, biliousness and torpor of the liver and bowels is so pronounced that I am prompted to say a word in its favor for the benefit of those seeking relief from such afflictions. There is more health for the digestive organs in a bottle of Electric Bitters than in any other remedy I know of. Sold under guarantee at G A Pabst & Co. drug store. 50c.

White Swan Flour made as it is from the choicest wheat i nesota, milled by an intelligent, conciencous and experienc ler is so good we couldn't improve it.

SO WE IMPROVED OUR FLOUR-HOUSE.

Our flour house has always been dry and well ventilated and mouse-proof, but we found this experience that where flour was piled on the floor, the bottom sacks would absorb sufficient moisture through the boards to somewhat injure the baking qualities of those sacks. Therefore we made several strong wooden benches, which we place in the flour room and pile the sacks upon them The benches do not touch each other, neither do they touch the wall. This allows a circulation of air all around and under the floor and keeps it absolutely dry. A flood of sunshine which enters the flour house thru' a large window, keeps the whole room sweet and pure. If you will try a sack of White Swan Flour you will know the joy of baking bread from a flour which is always good and always uniform in quality.

It means good bread every time.

Battle on White Plague.

Des Moines.—Nearly $500 in cash, clothing, bedding and other necessities has been contributed to the Des Moines Tuberculosis institute, recently formed for the protection of the poor against the dread "white plague". As soon as sufficient funds are raised, the institute will construct a $1,000 open air hospital on the grounds in the northwest part of the city loaned for an indefinite period by Superintendent of Public Safety John L. Hamery. Those interested in the movement are enthusiastic as a result of the encouragement they have received. At a recent meeting at the Chamberlain the institute changed its name and adopted the official title of the "Des Moines Health League." Hereafter it will be known by this name. A board of twenty-seven directors will be named soon and a committee on finances also will be appointed. Many of the most prominent, wealthy and influential citizens have associated themselves with the movement.

Street Cars for Institution.

The state board of control was gratified when the state railroad commission ordered a grade crossing of the traction line from Council Bluffs over the Wabash railroad tracks south of that city, so that the street cars may run to the school for the deaf. The board of control has been trying to get this service established for several years. It started in fact soon after it took charge of the institution more than ten years ago. Repeted promises turned out to be futile. There was a question of a viaduct and the railroad companies and the traction lines could not agree about it.

Finally, the Burlington and the traction company got together on an equitable basis and when the commission went to Council Bluffs Monday they had been preceded by the railroad officials of the two companies who had agreed on the grade crossing of the traction line and the Burlington tracks. The order it made, therefore, covered the Wabash, and no longer is there any obstacle in the way of the extension of the line to the school for the deaf.

Board of Control Winner

The state railroad commission has ordered track connection to be made by the Rock Island and the Iowa City-Cedar Rapids Interurban company at Iowa City. This service the state board of control asked for some time ago because of the desirability of hauling coal directly to the sanitarium for the treatment of persons affected with tuberculosis about six miles north of Iowa City on the interurban. The interurban company professed willingness to make the connecting freight traffic arrangement, but there was objection on the part of the Rock Island to making the track connection. The matter was taken up before the railroad commission. The result was the order of the board, which was hailed by the board of control with much satisfaction.

Schools and Libraries.

The state library commission has arranged for a second hearing before the legislative commission created to revise and codify the school laws of Iowa. It is the purpose of the commissions to bring the libraries and schools of the state closer together and to utilize to the best advantage the libraries which have been established in the schools themselves under the Trewin law. A state policy affecting the relation of the schools and the library work of the state will be established in the law through the report of the legislative commission, it is now thought.

Will Invite League Here.

Des Moines is a candidate for the convention of the American League of Municipalities in 1910. Its candidacy will be announced at the meeting of the league in Omaha next month. Secretary Botsford of the Commercial Club will write a letter inviting the league to Des Moines two years hence, and Councilman John MacVicar and the other Des Moines representatives will do the missionary work among the delegates.

Black Walnut Lumber Market.

Des Moines is now the largest black walnut lumber market in the world. This has been brought about by the securing of enormous contracts for gunstocks by the Langton Gunstock company of this city. It is estimated that 3,000,000 feet of black walnut lumber will be required to fill existing orders.

Want Doctors Back Again.

While apparently nothing is being done by the board of directors of the Grant club in regard to the resignations handed it by twelve of the most prominent physicians of the city, every effort is being made to bring the members back into the club and end the matter amicably. Pressure is being brought to bear on the resigning members both collectively and individually, but the doctors are firm in the step they have taken and say they will not re-enter the club as long as the two "advertising doctors" are members of the organization. The club is divided into two factions, one claiming that the resignation of the resigning doctors be accepted immediately, while the other faction is strong in its demand for the resignation of the two men whose election to membership caused the trouble. The board of directors are loathe to act on the matter yet, as they wish to keep both the doctors who have resigned and the others in the club. The physicianis claim that as long as the two "advertising physicians" are members of the club they will stay out. A prominent member of the board of directors said, however, that it was very probable that the two doctors would be asked to hand in their resignations and themembers who had resigned would go back into the organization.

"Silo Bulletin."

Prof. C. F. Curtiss, director of the experiment station at Ames college, has announced a "silo bulletin" No. 100, which he will be glad to send to all farmers free. This bulletin gives, in condensed form, the advantages and disadvantages of all the various types of silos, together with practical hints on their construction. Profuse illustrations aid in making the meaning clear. It is a pamphlet that will be invaluable to any farmer or dairyman who is contemplating the erection of a silo. The farmers of the corn belt are coming to realize more and more the value of silage as a cheap, succulent feed. For dairy cows it is almost indispensable if the best results are to be obtained. Experiments at various stations show that it may also be used successfully for fattening steers, sheep andl even hogs. To aid farmers in selecting the type of silo best adapted to their conditions the Iowa experiment station has made a thorough investigation of the subject.

High School Gets War Records.

By a unanimous vote of Kinsman post, G. A. R., the war records of the post, consisting of soms 200 volumes, containing the names, regiments and war history of the members of the great armies of the United States and the Confederacy during the Civil war, together with about the same number of war maps and plans of battles, were presented to the historical department of the East Des Moines High school. These records are immensely valuable from a historical standpoint and will prove a rare addition to the already notable historical library of the school. The plans of the great battles of the four years' war between the states will give the students an idea of the tactics employed by the different generals of both armies, which could not be obtained from printed descriptions of these conflicts. These plans are accurate to the smallest deail, the positions of the various regiments and brigades being carefully worked out An elegant walnut case for the books and plans was included in the gift.

No Bible In Iowa Library.

With all of the commentaries, glossaries, maps, and concordances that are in the state library to assist in the study of the scriptures, the statement has been made, and so far not refuted that there is not a single copy of the commonly known King James version of the Holy Bible.

"We could not find a single copy in the state library," said Miss Seevers bill clerk for the house. "Of course I knew the wording of the commandment and I believe that it was the second one that Mr. Miller wanted At any rate he wanted the book to copy it from and there was not a single copy of the Book of Books in the library. It was rather amusing when one considers how much valuable material there is on the shelves for use with the scriptures and to be used as a key. There is a Dewey Bible, or Catholic Bible, but not an English Bible such as we know and commonly use.'

EVANS' SON ACCUSED

HE WILL BE TRIED BY COURT MARTIAL AT MANILA.

CHARGES VERY SERIOUS

Philippine Capital Greets the Atlantic Fleet—Great Water Parade Is Followed by Formal Calls.

Manila.—Lieut. Frank Taylor Evans of the battleship Louisiana and Lieut. Charles Burt of the battleship Georgia, will be tried before a special court-martial board which will assemble on the battleship Wisconsin Monday.

The charges against Lieut. Evans are for being absent from his station while acting as chief of the deck, using profane and disrespectful language to a superior officer and intoxication. The charges against Lieut. Burt are for "conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman."

Lieut. Evans denies the charge of intoxication and says that he will offer the testimony of a number of witnesses to prove that he has been sober and quite fit for duty.

Rear Admiral as Chairman.

Rear Admiral Seton Schroeder of the battleship Wisconsin will act as president of the court.

Lieut. Frank Taylor Evans, is the son of Admiral Robley Evans, who took the battleship fleet from Hampton Roads to the Pacific coast.

Midshipman Richard Bernard of the battleship Louisiana was tried before a court-martial board at Albany, Australia, and the sentence was dismissal from the service. Bernard was found guilty of being under the influence of liquor while on parade in Melbourne.

Midshipman Edward H. Connor of the battleship Minnesota will be tried on the charge of being under the influence of liquor while at Albany, Australia. Capt. Hugo Osterhause of the battleship Connecticut acted as president of the court which sentenced Midshipman Bernard.

Fleet in Double Column.

Fresh from a triumphant reception in Australian ports, and with their cruise around the world two-thirds accomplished, the 16 battleships of the American fleet, which started from Hampton Roads last December, were anchored in double column Saturday off the breakwater close to the Luneta, whence a splendid view of the warships was obtainable Friday night.

After the fleet had come to anchor, thousands of residents of the islands crowded every available spot commanding a view of the anchorage and the general air of expectancy and excitement added to the eager interest that has attended the fleet's coming.

Noisy Welcome for Fleet.

Thousands of persons Saturday thronged the Luneta, or public square which was brilliantly illuminated. A band concert with a spirited program and selections by the bugle corps of the Ninth cavalry were features of the entertainment provided for the crowds. From the harbor the long line of lights, marking the berths of the warships, twinkled in response to the blaze of electric illumination on shore, and as it grew later the buzz and hum of clattering crowds settled into the stillness of the tropical night.

There were no exchanges of formal calls with the shore until Saturday. After the water parade in the morning, in which all Manila participated, Gov. Smith called upon Admiral Sperry, who later landed and returned the call, also paying his respects to Maj. Gen. Weston, commanding the troops stationed in Manila.

Rear Admiral Sperry has finally decided not to land any men here and to maintain a practical quarantine of the ships during their stay. The officers will be allowed brief shore liberty under close restrictions.

Lively Day in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Over a score of men, women and children were injured, some of them so painfully that treatment at the various hospitals was necessary, during the great historical and industrial pageant Thursday in celebration of Pittsburg's sesqui-centennial anniversary. It is estimated that over 300,000 persons lined the route of the parade. At night the streets of the city were crowded with gay masqueraders.

Minnesota Town Burned.

St. Cloud, Minn.—Foley, the county seat of Benson county, Minn., a village of 1,000 people, was practically destroyed by fire. The place has little fire protection, only a gasoline engine. Owing to strong winds, the fire spread rapidly. St. Cloud was appealed to for aid, but could do nothing. The loss is estimated at $75,000

Cloudburst Drowns Eight.

Manila.—A belated official telegram has just been received here which reports that a cloudburst struck the penal colony at Iwahig and that eight persons were drowned, including Harold MacKnight, the superintendent of the farm.

REYNOLDS ELECTED HEAD

CHICAGOAN MADE PRESIDENT BY BANKERS AT DENVER.

Proposition to Establish Postal Savings Banks Condemned in Resolutions Adopted by Financiers.

Denver, Col.—The thirty-fourth annual convention of the American Bankers' association came to an end Thursday afternoon with the election of George M. Reynolds of Chicago, president, and Lewis E. Pierson of New York, first vice-president.

Thirty-eight new members were announced and a vice-president representing each of the states having representatives in the association was named.

The convention also placed itself squarely on record as against both the proposition to guarantee bank deposits and that to establish postal savings banks.

A lively discussion occurred over the report of the federal legislative committee opposing these plans. The resolution offered by the committee, however, contained a condemnation of the guarantee law only, making no mention of the postal savings banks. A fight led by Clifton R. Breckenridge of Arkansas was made to include condemnation of postal savings banks in the same resolutions.

An amendment to the resolution was offered substituting the words "it is a delusion that the tax upon the strong will prevent the failure of the weak," for section 8 as reported, which read: "It unjustly weakens the strong and unfairly strengthens the weak banks." The amendment was adopted and the report of the committee with its resolution was then carried without a dissenting voice.

Mr. Breckenridge then offered the following resolution, which was also adopted with only two or three dissenting votes:

"That the American Banking association condemns as unwise and hurtful all proposals to establish postal savings banks."

Nearly two hours were consumed with the reports of vice-presidents from the several states, the consensus of which was that the effects of the recent panic are rapidly passing away throughout the country.

FUTILE ATTEMPT TO ROB BANK.

Yeggmen Use Dynamite in Cogswell, N. D., and Then Flee.

Cogswell, N. D.—Citizens, aroused at 1:15 a. m. Wednesday by three distinct explosions, poured out from their homes to find that yeggmen had blown off the front door of the safe in the Sargent County State bank, but had fled before they secured any loot. The robbers stole a handcar at Nicholsen on the Soo road and came here upon it. They transferred the car to the Milwaukee line and used it to make their escape. They abandoned the car near Newark, S. D., and attempted to conceal it in a cornfield. The authorities have sent to Bismarck for hounds to track the fugitives and posses are out after them.

MICHIGAN OFFICIALS OUSTED.

Collector and Special Agent at Port Huron Removed.

Washington.—As the result of a report made by the civil service commission, President Roosevelt late Friday removed Lincoln Avery, collector of the port at Port Huron, Mich., and also directed the removal of Charles H. Dailey, special agent of the treasury at that place. The civil service committee found proof of charges of serious violations of the rules and regulations in regard to campaign assessments, which also involved, on the part of Special Agent Dailey, "pernicious activity in politics."

Big Strike Has Collapsed.

Winnipeg, Man.—Indications are that the Canadian Pacific railroad mechanics' strike has collapsed. Bell Hardy, who has been conducting the strike from Montreal, arrived in this city Tuesday to confer with Vice-President Whyte, and if possible arrange for the men to be taken back. It is understood that a message was received from the International Labor Federation at Washington advising the men to approach the company immediately with a view to going back.

Can't Take Liquor from Depot.

Lawton, Okla. — It is a violation of the prohibition law for a transfer man or any other person to convey liquor from the railroad depot. Liquor shipped from without the state ceases to be interstate commerce after it leaves the carrier's hands. This is the opinion of Judge J. H. Wolverton of the county court, announced in a liquor case here Wednesday.

Powder House Blows Up.

Spencer, N. C.—Two lives were lost and 20 or more persons were injured in Spencer Thursday night by the explosion of a powder storage house on the yards of the Southern Railway Company, and most of the buildings near by were damaged by the shock and the fire which followed.

GROWTH OF PIGS.

Difference Observed in the Development Up to Weaning.

Pigs do not grow with the same rapidity from the time they are born till the time they are weaned. Whether this is due to the greater ability some pigs have for digesting food or whether it is due to the fact that some pigs get more food than others is a matter for conjecture.

The average weight of Poland-China pigs is in the neighborhood of three pounds at birth. In one case on record, a pig that weighed 3.6 pounds at birth, weighed at time of weaning, 70 days after birth, 46.9 pounds. Another pig of the same litter weighed 3.2 pounds at birth and in 70 days weighed 57.3 pounds. Another pig of the same litter weighed 3.2 pounds at birth and only 21.8 pounds at time of weaning, 70 days later; and a pig that weighed only 1.9 pounds at birth, weighed 35.6 at time of weaning.

This latter started out as a runt, but outstripped another pig that was of normal size at birth. His pre-natal development was against him, but he had a supply of energy that enabled him to develop vigorously after birth.

In the 50 days after weaning, this pig, that started out as a runt gained 44.5 pounds in weight, while the heavier pig of the litter of eight—a pig weighing at birth 3.6 pounds—gained 35 pounds in the 50 days after weaning.

At the end of the 120 days from birth, the pig that was the runt at birth weighed 80.1 pounds, while the other pig weighed 81.9 pounds. He was just 1.8 pounds heavier than the one developed from the runt. It is interesting to note that the heavier pig was at birth heavier by 1.7 pounds and that after 120 days he was 1.8 pound heavier. The one-tenth pound might be due to error in weighings. So these two pigs held their relative weights from birth to the age of 120 days, but not the percentage of difference.

This goes to show that a very little pig at birth may be just as valuable for the feeder as a big one.

However, it would take a great many examples of this kind to indicate a law. We have not much data of this kind on which to base conclusions.

BREED GOOD HORSES.

Perfect Horse Should Have Form, Action and Good Disposition.

Every civilized nation, and some of the uncivilized ones, for that matter, recognize the value of the horse. The perfect horse is the noblest of all animals, and yet perfect horses are scarce. To be perfect the horse should not only possess form and action, but shouid have a good disposition. He should be courageous and free from hereditary diseases.

At the fairs and horse shows may be seen all the best types of the horse. They have been carefully and scientifically bred and properly cared for. Out of the 20,000,000 horses in the United States, countless numbers suffer from cataract, sidebones, ringbones, spavins, fistulas, springhalt or navicular disease. If we want sound, perfect horses we must breed to the best type of horse and mare, says the Journal of Agriculture. In France the government insists on veterinary inspection and the use of unsound stallions is not permitted. Perfect foals can be spoiled by neglect or abuse. The youngsters should be managed carefully, fed generously and not be subject to hard work before maturity. The most remunerative branches of breeding are the heavy drafter and the light harness classes. With care in the selection of sound stallions and a liberal system of raising the foals the perfect horse can be produced that will command top prices when offered for sale in the open market.

Hinged or Sliding Windows.

Some poultrymen have sliding windows and seem satisfied with them. The men that have the hinged windows say they prefer that style over the other kind chiefly because in wet and stormy weather the wind does not beat in to wet the birds, as it does when the windows slide in grooves. In the hinged windows the hinges are at the top and the window is opened at the bottom. The windows can easily be held open at various distances and the rain falls down. All the air comes in at the bottom of the opening, and this keeps the poultry house dry.

Shock Corn for Stock.

There is no better feed for any kind of stock than shock corn cut just as the ears begin to dent, and well cured. It can be fed whole. This is probably the most wasteful method. It can be shredded and fed in feed lots and mangers. This is probably the most economical. Of course, corn is such a common feed in the middle west that its great value is often underestimated. It is very palatable, and all kinds of stock, except hogs, like it.—Orange Judd Farmer.

RAISED FROM SICK BED.

After All Hope Had Vanished.

Mrs. J. H. Bennett, 59 Fountain St., Gardiner, Me., says: "My back used to trouble me so severely that at last I had to give up. I took to my bed and stayed there four months, suffering intense pain, dizziness, headache and inflammation of the bladder. Though without hope, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and in three months was completely cured. The trouble has never returned."

MINISTER A TRIFLE MIXED UP.

Consequently There Was an Awkward Perhaps in Funeral Oration.

It was at the funeral of a man who had left his young and attractive helpmeet a widow for the third time. At the time of his death their clergyman was away on a European trip, and in this emergency the Rev. Dr. Blank was called upon.

A neighbor instructed him hastily as to the admirable qualities of the deceased, his benevolence, piety and kind disposition, and gave him various points as to his family relations. During the funeral discourse no outsider would have suspected that the clergyman had not been a lifelong friend of the dead man. When, however, he came to mention the widow in his prayer, it was evident that his data in regard to her had become a trifle confused. He said:

"And now we commend to thy care this widowed handmaid, who has been bereaved again and again and again.' Then hesitating an instant, he added: "And perhaps again."

SKIN TROUBLES CURED.

First Had Itching Rash—Threatened Later With Blood-Poison in Leg—Relied on Cuticura Remedies.

"About twelve or fifteen years ago I had a breaking-out, and it itched, and stung so badly that I could not have any peace because of it. Three doctors did not help me. Then I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent and began to get better right away. They cured me and I have not been bothered with the itching since, to amount to anything. About two years ago I had la grippe and pneumonia which left me with a pain in my side. Treatment ran it into my leg, which then swelled and began to break out. The doctor was afraid it would turn to blood-poison. I used his medicine but it did no good, then I used the Cuticura Remedies three times and cured the breaking-out on my leg. J. F. Hennen, Milan, Mo., May 13, 1907."

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right Starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

People who were present smiled at the little passage of arms which took place between two young ladies at a luncheon recently. One of them, a bride, shaking hands in her characteristically cordial way, said to the other:

"I'm so glad to meet you! You have afforded me so very much amusement just lately."

"Amusement?" said the other.

"Oh, yes," went on the bride. "I've been through my husband's desk, and I've read all his old love letters. I found several very affectionate letters from you, and I enjoyed reading them, really, ever so much."

"I'm so glad you enjoyed them," purred the other. "But do come and see me very soon. Here is my card. I have the answers to all those letters and you might like to read them as well. Mr. X——'s letters are so much more affectionate than those I wrote to him. I know you'll enjoy reading them ever so much more than you did mine."

Some time after his host heard a distant report of a gun. A few minutes later he heard some one shouting. From a window he spied, in the distance, his friend, hot-footing it for home, and behind him a bear, gaining at every step. Nearly spent, the pursued reached the door just in time to cry out:

The Colonel's Leg in History.

Col. Blank, who later called himself general, received, in a little skirmish of the Civil war, a slight scratch on the leg. In the days afterward he nursed his glorious wound with loving care and grew lamer year by year that the memory of his bravery might be ever fresh.

When grown old, as he sat one day caring for his leg and musing on the glorious past, a young man, a stranger visiting the family for a few days, approached him and inquired, sympathetically:

"Lame, general?"

"Yes, young man, I am lame."

"Been riding, sir?"

"No, sir," sternly and rebukingly, "I have not been riding."

"Ah, slipped on the ice, general?"

"No, sir!" with actual ferocity.

"Then, perhaps, sir, you have sprained your ankle?"

The old man slowly and carefully lifted his pet leg in both hands and tenderly set his foot upon the floor. Then he slowly rose from his seat and stood looking down with scornful pity at the unlucky youth. At last, in the sublimity of rage, he burst out:

"Go and read the history of your country, you puppy!"

IOWA'S CORN CROP.

Government Report Shows an Immense Crop this Year.

Des Moines.—The government report, which was issued at noon, Oct. 7, shows that corn is the king of all grains and the value of the crop raised in the United States totals the enormous amount of $1,941,896,600, while wheat will only bring in the neighborhood of $658,000,000. These estimates are based upon a price of 78 cents for corn at Chicago and $1.00 for wheat.

The government's figures for the yield of corn are 2,489,600,000 in 1907 with a crop of 2,450,000,000 bushels, and figuring at 64 cents, which was the price for contract corn a year ago, the value of the 1907 crop was $1,568,000,000. In the bumper year of 1906, when we raised 2,927,416,000 bushels the market price for the same day two years ago, was 45 cents and the value of the crop was $1,317,336,000.

The crop of Iowa for this year is estimated at 290,000,000 bushels, and based upon the Chicago price of 78 cents, is worth to the farmers of Iowa the sum of $219,200,000. In 1907, Iowa raised 267,000,000 bushels and was worth $170,880,000. In 1906, with a crop of 373,000,000 bushels, it was worth but $167,850,000. Corn is certainly king this year.

COLLINS TO BE RETURNED.

Requisition Issued by the Governor On Pennsylvania.

Des Moines.—Governor Cummins has issued a requisition on Pennsylvania for the return to Iowa of Edward L. Collins, wanted at Green Mountain on a charge of bank wrecking. The Green Mountain Savings bank was closed in February by the auditor of state. A shortage of $8,000 developed. Three men were indicted by the March grand jury. Collins for embezzlement, MacDiarmid for embezzlement, perjury and fraud in conducting a savings bank, and Johnson was indicted on three counts embezzlement, fraud and receiving deposits or an insolvent bank. At present attorneys for McDiarmid and Johnson are attempting to raise the amount of the shortage and have succeeded in getting $6,000 of the $8,000. When secured the money will be turned over to the receiver, A. A. Moore.

TAGS FOR CHARITY.

Home for Friendless Children Profits From "Tag Day."

Des Moines.—Nearly $3,000 was lured from the pockets of Des Moines people by fifty young women armed with red tags and red coin boxes. The results of "Tag day" exceeded all expectations. So enthusiastic were the directors of the Home for Friendless Children with the success of the first venture of the kind in Des Moines that they decided to repeat it next year. Nearly all of the laundries, the department stores and most of the big groceries and transfer companies had their wagons covered with tags, for which they paid from $5 to $10. Miss Gertrude Hewitt carried off the honors for raising the largest amount of money, bringing in $163.32 during the day. A number of other young women did almost as well.

OPPOSE SUNDAY SHOWS.

Cedar Rapids Church People Start Agitation.

Cedar Rapids.—For some months there has been an agitation among church people looking toward the closing of the Sunday theaters. The opponents of the Sunday theaters appointed a committee of twenty-five, among which are some of the best known citizens and business men of the city. This committee has been laboring with the council in the endeavor to secure the passage of an anti-Sunday theater ordinance. Several meeting have been held with the members of the city council as audience, in which representatives of the committee of twenty-five and representatives of the theaters presented their sides of the case.

Mrs Nash remarked that Iowa as more of these federated clubs than any state in the union, not even excepting Massachusetts.

GETS TWENTY YEARS.

Earl Nizert Sentenced to Anamosa Penitentiary.

Des Moines.— Six minutes after the jury had retired to consider the evidence against Earl Nizert, alias Richard White, a verdict was returned in Judge McHenry's court finding the negro guilty of attempted criminal assault upon Lizzie Agea. Nizert waived time and was at once sentenced to serve an indeterminate term, with a maximum of twenty years in the penitentiary at Anamosa. Although Nizert denied his guilt when asked by the court if he had anything to say for himself, Judge McHenry did not hesitate to give the negro one of the most scathing lectures ever heard in the criminal court room.

He Admits All.

During the trial of the case Nizert, alias White, has stoutly denied that he has ever been in Springfield or Jacksonville. He even entered a denial when Chief of Police Smith of Jacksonville, Ill., pointed his finger at him accusingly in the criminal court Thursday, and declared he knew him well. But after Judge McHenry had pronounced sentence upon him and he saw that his protestations of innocence would do no good, he changed his mind and admitted it all. He made no effort whatever to conceal his connection with numerous crimes in Jacksonville, and chatted with Chief Smith about the various stunts credited to him in the Jacksonville police records.

IT WAS TRICHINOSIS.

Prof. Albert Finds It in an Examination of Patient's Blood.

Iowa City.—That many cases diagnosed as typhoid fever, rheumatism, ptomaine poisoning, cholera morbus, etc., are simply trichinosis, a disease caused by eating boiled ham, smoked pork or sausage, was the discovery revealed in an interesting article by Dr. Henry Albert, state bacteriologist, in a recent medical bulletin. H. W. Norris, professor of zoology in Grinnell college, is a co-author of the noted bacteriologist. The article is based upon the remarkable epidemic in Grinnell, Ia., in October, 1907, when fourteen persons were stricken by eating ham sandwiches. These cases were called typhoid, rheumatism, etc., until the blood was examined in the local laboratories. "Trichina infection is by no means rare," says the article. Trichinosis usually results from the eating of uncooked, seasoned or smoked pork or sausage, but may result from the eating of boiled ham which has not been exposed to a sufficient temperature for a sufficient length of time to kill all the parasites." In speaking of precautions, the statement is made, "Every means should be adopted to prevent infection of hogs by removing, if possible, the possibility of their eating dead rats."

BRIDE SHOT AND KLLED.

Bullet From Gun Accidentally Discharged by Husband.

Grant.—Mrs. Lee Long, a bride of a few months, was accidentally shot and killed by her husband. Mr. Long had been hunting during the morning. His gun failed to work properly. When he returned he attempted to extract the shells from the gun. Mrs. Long was in the adjoining room. In some manner the gun was discharged and the bullet tore through the left leg, striking an artery. Before medical aid could be secured she bled to death. Mrs. Long was 20 years of age. She was married last February. The Longs live on a farm three miles from Grant.

Iowa Central Strike Ended.

Marshalltown.—The strike of shop employes of the Iowa Central road, which has been on since the twenty-second of April, was settled here on the 8th, the men getting the best of the argument. All union men are to return to work here and at division points. In the future the shops will have union men only. A general advance of one per cent over the amount offered the men when they first went out was secured.

From St. Paul to Cuba.

Davenport.—The steamer, J. M. passed Davenport on its way from St. Paul for Cuba via New Orleans. It is towing a barge of 115 tons of hay. Local river men point to the fact that the six foot channel for which they are fighting would enable this large to carry 500 tons. The trip is the largest ever attempted by a Mississippi river freighter.

CHICAGO WINS PENNANT IN THE NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New York Out-Played—Tremendous Crowd at the Polo Grounds—Westerners Play Perfect Ball.

New York.—"Chicago 4, New York 2"—this was the tale in a phrase told at the end of the most decisive baseball game played in this country in many years; played at the Polo grounds in this city Thursday to decide the National league championship for the season of 1908.

In the presence of a record-breaking crowd, which swamped the grounds and left many thousands outside long before the game began, a game was played in deadly earnest, "straight baseball with no frills," to settle as tensely dramatic a situation as the most ardent lover of sport could imagine. Chicago won and New York lost.

It was great baseball, witnessed by the greatest of great baseball crowds. Spectators who know the game, however bitter they may feel over the tie decision which made the game compulsory, seemed to concede that the work of the Chicago team was practically perfect.

The Giants, well though they played, were outplayed. They lacked, among other things, that certain indefinable something, absence of which is probably in this instance explained by the results of the great and steady strain they have been under the past week.

Chicago, fresh from rest and well-judged practice and coaching, was superb in form. Brilliant, errorless fielding, snappy base-running and opportune hitting in the third innning, which made effective in scores a double by Chance, won the game. New York could not hit at critical times.

The two great innings of the game were the third and the seventh. In the former Chicago made all its runs. In the latter, opening with tremendous enthusiasm following the loud-shouted slogan, "The Giants' lucky seventh," hopes were renewed, but died after one run, which kept company with that made in the first inning on the mammoth bulletin board far out afield.

But he had disarmed my suspicions and I had never med that anything so serious was ot. That was a restless night for and it was dawn before I fell into ht sleep.

CHAPTER VI.

When we met at breakfast the next ning there were no signs of the ch between Vincent and myself ept his unusual pallor, which sug- ed to me that he, too, had spent a less night.

The girls were inclined to joke our own faces, but so long as the meal ed off without disclosing that ething was amiss between us I did care. All day we saw nothing of other, but this was not unusual, we always pursued different rses. I spent most of my time Agatha Fourth, the only honor- e, whom I found to be a really de- ful girl and certainly the posses- of remarkable musical talent.

In the evening the others went out row on the lake and left Agatha rth alone with me. She sat at the o and played everything she ld think of, while I lay on a broad n where I could watch her and en to the soft music.

I suppose that my bad night had ething to do with the fact that was boor enough to fall asleep while beautiful Agatha Fourth was play- for me. Certainly I know that I guilty of that appalling rudeness, I was suddenly brought to a state consciousness by the sound of a ck striking. I counted the strokes chanically—there were 12. I must e slept for hours, and, sure enough, room was dark except for the fire- t, and my slighted hostess was e from the piano stool. As I was t to rise I heard voices, and, turn- I saw on the other side of the o a man and a girl. The man was cent, of course, and I thought, as looked at him sitting full in the ht firelight, that he had never ked so handsome. His evening dress wed off his superb athletic form the best advantage, and his face s fresh and strong, with the bronze his tan extending to the roots of his r, which was cut close to conceal wave in the gold of it. It occurred me at once that his face had lost h of its boyishness and he looked ry inch a man. But it took me e time to realize that the girl who with him was none other than the cretary.

At first I could not tell what it was t had so changed her, whether it s her shimmering white evening n, or the gleaming bracelets, until last it came to me in a flash that it s nothing more nor less than the ry of her hair that had wrought the transformation. I had never seen the secretary with her hair done any way but plainly and unbecomingly, but now it was dressed as I knew it should have been dressed long ago. She wore it low on her long, slender neck, rolled at the sides and rippling loosely back from her forehead, in shining waves and little willful rings held in place with big shell combs.

And when at last it dawned upon me that it was really the secretary who was Vincent's companion, so breathless was I with amaze that at first I hardly realized that I could hear perfectly what they were saying. And when I did realize it, I wanted to rise and let them know that I was there, but on second thought I saw that I must have been there for so long that they would never believe that I had not heard the whole of their conversation. Furthermore, it occurred to me that it might be well if I stayed to hear what Miss Marsh had to say for herself.

"And so I calmly took the dress and put it on, just to amuse myself," I heard the secretary saying, "and did my hair the way the others do theirs, you know. And it was so late I thought no one would find me here."

"And if I hadn't left my pipe on the table no one would have found you, and I—think what I should have missed!" Vincent's voice was eloquent.

"Of course, it was very vain of me, very vain," she went on; "but you know when a girl has to earn her own living she gets a little tired of all work and no play, and sometimes the impulse to pretend she's fortunate and happy and—and pretty"—the secretary flushed under Vincent's gaze as she faltered the last word, and hurried on—"and like the others—is so strong that it tempts her to deck herself out in borrowed plumes and sit in an empty drawing room at 12 o'clock at night enjoying the illusion for a brief hour."

"No," said Vincent, softly, "I don't think it was vain; I think it was the most natural thing in the world, and—and I'm glad you did it," he ended, rather lamely.

The secretary laughed, and I wondered what there was about the sound that made Vincent rave over it. Then, as his eyes wandered to her hair, he sighed.

"Why sighest thou, oh, furnace?" she smiled at him.

"I was just thinking about something."

"About what?"

"You don't want to hear?"

"Ah! But I do!"

"All right, then." He turned on her swiftly. "I was just looking," he said, "at your hair. I'll bet the angels have halos like that."

The secretary blushed. "It's horrid hair," she said, giving it a vindictive little pull that only brought it to a more charming disarray. "I hate the color of it. Why, when I was a child I never could bear to have the heroines of the fairy tales have a shining head of golden hair, and I used to think mine was gold, and one day when I said so and was told, 'No, your hair is red, not gold,' I cried for days afterward."

"You poor little thing!" he said, his face as full of sympathy as if those tears had just been shed. And for the life of her the secretary couldn't help her lip trembling, though she knew it was absurd and was very much ashamed of herself. Vincent broke the silence first. "We might do a little on the 'Dead Barons of Wyckhoff,'" he suggested. It was evident that our affair of last night was uppermost in his mind, for his air was very abstracted.

"No, thank you, my lord. This is my evening off. I am no longer Miss Marsh, the secretary, but Miss Marsh, the lady of leisure."

"I didn't think of it as work, and I thought perhaps you didn't, either, when we did it together."

"Little boys shouldn't think; it's a bad habit," she said, severely; "besides, you talk like 'I' in the 'Dolly Dialogues.'"

At this Vincent's face grew desperate, and I saw that she had goaded him into asking her the question that had been on his mind all day, and I nearly fell off the sofa in my efforts to hear without being seen.

"Do I?" he said. "Well, that's because I've something I've been wanting to ask you all day long. It's something very personal, and, of course, I've no right—that is, you won't think so," the boy was stumbling pitifully, "but I've got to know; it's so hard to believe that you would do it deliberately. Is it true?"

"Lord Wilfred," said the girl, straightening up, "you must speak more clearly if you want me to understand what you have been saying."

"It's this," said Lord Wilfred, facing her abruptly and terribly in earnest. "Someone told me last night that you were a married woman. Is it true?"

I could not see the face of the secretary, but I could not help perceiving the ring of truth in her voice.

"I'm not married," she said, simply. "I told Mr. Terhune so because I wanted to disabuse him of a false impression he was laboring under. But what is it to you?"

"This," said Wilfred, and he leaned toward her suddenly and grasped her hands and put his face within an inch of her—I could see by the firelight its look of determination and ineffable relief. The secretary gave a little cry and drew back. I conjectured that Wilfred was on the point of making an irretrievable ass of himself, so I interrupted proceedings by knocking a book off the sofa and rising to my feet. At the first sound of the book falling the two had jumped to their feet and stood, the girl shrinking close to Wilfred and Wilfred with his arm thrown around her.

"Who goes there?" he said, sternly, as he discovered my figure in the gloom, and "Ah!—it's you, Terhune," as I came into the circle of light, in a tone I hope I may never hear from him again.

As the secretary saw who it was she sprang away and was gone from the room in a second.

"Well," he said, with a sneer, as the curtains closed behind her, "eavesdropper, meddling as usual. What can I do for you?"

I sat down on the stool. "Sit down," I said, with quiet authority, "and we'll talk it over." He sat down. In moments like this he forgets his independence and remembers that at one time he used to obey me habitually. I wanted to comfort him, but I knew my duty better. "Vincent," I said, appealingly, "don't you see it won't do? She's no match for you—a girl with no family and no money, and of her station in life. Give it up, I implore you. Think of your father. There has never been a mesalliance in the family; it would break his heart."

Vincent raised his head. "Mrs. Armistead says her family is perfectly respectable," he said. "I asked her."

"Perfectly respectable!" I repeated, contemptuously. "Think of a Vincent marrying a girl who has nothing in her favor but the fact that her family was 'perfectly respectable!'"

Vincent sighed pathetically and I delivered one more blow. "Think," I said; "your brother Edmund is over 40, unmarried, and a sufferer from rheumatism of the heart, as you know. Suppose he should die—wouldn't you make a more creditable heir to the title if you hadn't tied yourself up to a wife of obscure origin—a penniless American girl? And if you don't come into the title you're only a younger son, and you know yourself your propensity for getting into debt, and the foreign office for a boy of your age is not a paying business. No, Vincent, you're not cut out for making money, and it's certain you can't depend on your father forever. Can't you see how rash and foolish you are to consider such a thing?"

I leaned over and put my hand on Vincent's shoulder. He turned his head, and when I felt his smooth cheek against my hand I knew that the battle was won.

"I'm Not Married," She Said, Simply.

WEAKNESS OF GREAT STRENGTH.

Perfect Health Not Consistent with High Muscular Development.

It is a curious fact that perfect health is not consistent with high muscular development. Professional athletes and all men who acquire phenomenal strength seem to lose in length of life and activity what they gain for a few years of record-breaking powers. I was privileged to see, on several occasions, Louis Cyr, the Canadian giant, who broke all weight-lifting records. He weighed 320 pounds, and was all solid bone and muscle. I saw him hold his wife out at arm's length with one hand. I saw him raise a 300-pound barrel from the floor to his shoulder, using only one hand and arm. I saw him get down on all fours under a platform bearing 4,000 pounds of big men selected from the audience, and he raised the platform with his mighty back. Yet this remarkable man was muscle-bound and crippled at 37, when he should have been at the height of his wonderful powers.

Kennedy, the oarsman, who won a diamond belt for lifting with his hands from the floor, absolutely without apparatus, a 1,000-pound weight, was used up and crippled before he was 40. Dowd, professional strong man and teacher of athletics, wore himself out and died at 47.—Metropolitan Magazine.

Reasonable to Hope So.

Lady Mary Glyn, the wife of the bishop of Peterborough, Eng., was a day or so ago sitting in Peterborough infirmary by the bedside of a maid servant who had been taken from the palace suffering from burns, says the London Globe. At a neighboring bed an evangelist was speaking to another patient. Mistaking Lady Mary for the girl's mother, he approached her with a handful of tracts, and the words "Are you saved, madame; are you sure you're saved?" "As nearly as a bishop's wife can expect to be," was Lady Mary's reply.

Cyclone and Tornado.

The cyclone is formed by the rushing of air at a high pressure into or toward a center of less pressure, in constantly narrowing circles or spirals, and, through much of the area covered, at a constantly increasing velocity. A tornado has been fitly named a "secondary cyclone." Its extent is less, but its energy is more intense than that of the cyclone.

Backache and Kidney Trouble Slowly Wear One Out.

Mrs. R. Crouse, Fayette St., Manchester, Ia., says: "For two years my back was weak and rheumatic. Pains ran through my back, hips and limbs. I could hardly get about and lost much sleep. The action of the kidneys was much disordered. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and the result was remarkable. The kidney action became normal, the backache ceased, and my health is now unusually good."

MANY NEW HOMES FOR MASON CITY.

"Hard Times" Not Experienced There Last Year.

Work for Every One.

Twenty-one Modern Homes Placed on the Market at One Time.

Mason City, Oct. 7.—

During the hard times so much talked about recently, there was one town in Iowa that knew nothing about it and during that period advertised for mechanics and laboring men to come to Mason City to take the positions which were vacant and waiting to be filled.

Manufacturing has been seeking this growing town on account of its excellent railroad facilities, it having six railroads at present with prospects for more, its proximity and easy access to coal fields and its unsurpassed territory. The locating of the cement mill employing 400 men and other smaller manufacturing concerns has made houses almost impossible to rent and to help the situation the North End Building company has constructed twenty-one houses within easy walking distance to some of the largest of the factories. The houses are built on honor from the ground up, having cemented cellars and solid concrete walls to level of the ground with cement block foundations.

Yellow pine, finished in natural color, has been used throughout and each house is equipped with screens, window curtains, bath room, city water, sewerage, furnace heat electric or gas light fixtures gas range gas water heater, gas laundry stove in the basement and gas radiators with connections both upstairs and down.

Each house has a large lot properly graded and seeded, cement walks and is attractively painted with three coats of best paint.

These houses will be sold to investors on a small cash payment and the balance in monthly installments at 6 per cent and the houses can be rented for a sufficient sum to take care of these installments and make a payment on the principal, each payment, reducing the interest charges.

The North End Building company of this city are selling their homes on a most reasonable cash payment. You ought to talk with them if you want a modern Mason City home.

OF INTEREST TO MOTHERS.

There is one subject which always interests the mothers of young children and that is how to treat their coughs and colds or to ward off a threatened attack of croup. For this purpose we can recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It always proves beneficial. In case of croup it should be given as soon as the croupy cough appears so as to prevent the attack. Keep it at hand ready for instant use. Many mothers do so and it saves them much uneasiness. For sale by G A Pabst & Co.

BULGARIANS CAST OFF THE YOKE OF TURKEY

Independence Proclaimed with Ferdinand as Their Czar--Austria Annexes Bosnia and Herzegovina --Two Events May Provoke Sultan to War.

London.—In the ancient capital of Tirnovo the independence of Bulgaria was proclaimed Monday, with the czar of the Bulgarians as a ruler. Czar of the Bulgarians is recognized to mean more than czar of Bulgaria, because it is a distinct intimation that he regards his country as having sovereignty over a' the people of that blood in the east.

Within a day or two Austria-Hungary, which has been working with Prince Ferdinand in this preconcerted plan, will proclaim the new status of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The question, which has been stirring the whole of Europe more deeply than any similar question in the memory of the present generation is, does it mean war? From all the capitals come reports indicating that it means, first of all, another European congress of the signers of the treaty of Berlin to consider the situation and probably to revise the treaty.

Turkey May Avoid War.

Turkey, caught in a moment of weakness, is the victim of this situation, and while some internal animosities have been stirred up, probably no power is willing to make war. Reports from the emancipated Turkish press to London indicate that the "Young Turks" will swallow this bitter pill as best they can and, if they do, naturally the Bulgarians, while willing and eager for war, will have no cause on which to base the beginning of hostilities.

Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

From the British standpoint the whole affair has been a surprise, and more than a surprise, because for the first time in years the British government felt itself with apparently a perfect understanding with France and Russia and complete friendship with Italy, to be in a position where it dominated European politics, reserving out of this consideration the almost open enmity between itself and Germany.

France Also for Peace.

The chances of war between Bulgaria and Turkey are being minimized by Great Britain and France, who are working together and who have advised Turkey against it. Turkey apparently is disposed to follow this advice, and it is believed that if hasty action on the part of Turkey can be prevented, Bulgaria will have difficulty in finding an excuse to begin war.

The action of Prince Ferdinand in proclaiming the independence of Bulgaria is condemned alike by the governments and press of Europe, but in some quarters this is considered a matter of minor importance, so long as it does not eventuate in war, as compared with the threatened annexation of the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria-Hungary. Reports from Belgrade indicate that Servia has been aroused to the danger point, bands of Servians marching the streets of Belgrade and shouting for war with Austria.

Turkey Refuses to Yield.

Constantinople.—The council of ministers met early Monday evening and were still sitting at midnight, preparing a protest which will be submitted to Bulgaria and the powers against the violation of the treaty of Berlin.

Prince Ferdinand has telegraphed to the Turkish government that he was compelled to respect the voice of the nation, and hoped that the friendly relations between the two countries would continue. Turkey's reply, which is being prepared, refuses to recognize Bulgaria's independence.

A committee of the "Young Turks" party also is holding a session at which the situation is being reviewed.

Turkey to Appeal to Powers.

Constantinople.—The council of ministers held a long session Tuesday morning to consider the action of Bulgaria in declaring her independence of Turkey at Tirnova Monday. It was decided that it was impossible to accept any proceedings that violated existing treaties, and that Turkey should address a circular note to the powers pointing out the necessity of taking measures to enforce respect for the treaty of Berlin.

Replying to the telegram sent to the Turkish government by Prince Ferdinand, in which he said that in declaring the independence of Bulgaria he had been compelled to respect the voice of the nation and expressed the hope that the friendly relations between the two countries would continue, Turkey says she has invited the powers to confer on the situation, and as her rights are guaranteed by the powers, she will look to them for their defense.

Servians Are Enraged.

Belgrade, Servia.—The news of Austria-Hungary's action with regard to the annexation of the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina has aroused Servia to the danger point. The streets are thronged with a wild mob, many of the rioters discharging their revolvers and demanding war with Austria rather than annexation.

Mediation by France.

Paris.—France has essayed the role of mediator with the object of preventing war between Turkey and Bulgaria, and as a result of Foreign Minister Pichon's series of conferences Monday with the representatives of the powers, including M. Iswolsky, the Russian foreign minister; Naoum Pasha, the Turkish ambassador to France; the Austro-Hungarian, the British, the American and the Italian ambassadors, and of active exchanges which have been going on between the various cabinets. It was announced that France, Great Britain, Russia and possibly Italy were prepared to act in unison to preserve peace and to call a conference of the signatories of the Berlin treaty to deal diplomatically with the situation that has arisen between Turkey and Bulgaria and to harmonize conflicting interests so that fresh complications may be avoided.

Bulgaria Declares Independence.

Sofia, Bulgaria.—Bulgaria, a tributary principality under the suzerainty of the sultan of Turkey, Monday proclaimed her independence of Turkey.

This action was taken at Tirnovo by Prince Ferdinand, who was elected prince of Bulgaria in 1887. The Bulgarian cabinet was present with the prince, having met Sunday at the frontier and journeyed with him to Tirnovo.

The proclamation was made at the cathedral of Tinovo at 11 o'clock Monday. It was a dramatic scene, accompanied by much enthusiasm. A manifesto of independence addressed to the nation was subsequently issued by the prince.

Tirnovo is the ancient capital of the kingdom of Bulgaria, and it was there in the olden days that the kings of Bulgaria were crowned.

OUTLOOK GLOOMY

SERVIA'S LACK OF AMMUNITION PREVENTS OUTBREAK.

MEETING TODAY WILL TELL

British Atlantic Fleet Sails—Turkey Waits Till European Powers Have Acted On the Case.

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 12.—After a secret session, lasting for more than twenty-four hours, the naroda-skupshtina, or national assembly, adjourned yesterday without having made any decision with regard to its action against Austria-Hungary. The assembly will meet again today and will be open to the public. The vote was taken on the question at issue. The meeting was very stormy and was interrupted by various recesses. War was demanded with Austria-Hungary, but the leaders of the war faction cooled down after Foreign Minister Milovanovics had made a lengthy statement in which he explained that one reason why hostilities were impossible was the scarcity of ammunition for the new batteries, which is now being transported here, but has been detained on the Austrian lines. Reports abroad that general mobilization of the Servian army has been ordered are incorrect. Only the first reserves have been called out.

Concert of Powers to Be Held Soon.

Constantinople, Oct. 12.—The Porte has received replies from Great Britain, France, Italy and Russia, all favorable to the assembling of an European conference, and it expected that Germany also will acquiesce in this. Kiamil Pasha, the grand vizier, in a conversation with the Servian minister on Saturday, strongly advised prudence and moderation on the part of Servia. Demonstrations in protestations against the Austro-Bulgarian movement continue to be held in large towns throughout Turkey, 20,000 people gathering at Adrainople for this purpose.

London Sees No Change.

London, Oct. 12.—The near eastern situation, so far as the Anglo-Russian negotiations are concerned, remains where it did forty-eight hours ago. There was unusual activity at Buckingham palace yesterday, to which the king returned, and at the British foreign office and the Russian embassy, where M. Iswolsky, the Russian foreign minister, is staying, the officials were busily engaged in an exchange of telegrams with the European capitals.

Cretans are Insistent.

Caca, Island of Crete, Oct. 12.—The Cretan assembly will hold an extraordinary session today. The official programme says that the president of the assembly will open the session in the name of the king of Greece. All the consuls and military officers have been invited to attend. Resolutions have been adopted by the municipalities declaring union with Greece.

Austria on The Qui Vive.

Vienna, Oct. 12.—Although the official view is held that war has been averted, the military authorities have not ceased their precautionary preparations. The Austrian government seems to fear that the Servian ministers may not be able to control the situation, and also anticipate a possible revolutionary movement in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Austria to Make a Move.

London, Oct. 12.—The Daily Mail's Belgrade correspondent says that the fall of the Servian ministry is imminent and that a coalition cabinet will be formed. He also states that the Austrians are preparing to seize two plants on the Dwina river on the Servo-Bosnian frontier. Rumors of war, he says, have caused a run on the Belgrade banks.

"Czar" Takes Title Today.

Paris, Oct. 12.—Prince Ferdinand, who today will assume the title of "czar" of the Bulgarians in an interview with the correspondent of the Temps at Philippopolis, expressed astonishment at Great Britain's attitude toward Bulgaria's independence. "What as become of the liberal traditions of Gladstone?" he asked.

British Fleet To Sail.

London, Oct. 12.—A dispatch from Gibraltar to the Daily Mail says that the British Atlantic fleet of six battleships is taking on stores preparatory to sailing for the east.

New Wireless Record.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 12.—A new record in wireless telegraphy is claimed by the United Wireless Telegraph company, which from its station on Russian hill in this city established communication with the Kukuhu station on the island of Oahu, one of the Hawaiian group. The distance to Honolulu is 2,200 miles.

Borax, a Simple, Safe and Sure Method.

How to keep our homes clean, sweet and free from germ influences is a question.

While there is no occasion for alarm, it is always well to be forearmed on the theory that "An Ounce of Prevention Is Better Than a Pound of Cure," and no ounce of prevention has yet been discovered that is more simple, more direct and more effective, yet harmless to the human system, than Borax.

Borax has been known and used for generations as a purifier and preventive against epidemic influences originating from uncleanly conditions resulting from unsanitary sinks and drains, and when used as a hot solution in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls to a gallon of hot water flushed through the offending locations, removes every trace of disease germs and renders the pipes clean and wholesome.

Borax in addition to its hygienic qualities, is a household necessity, and can be used for numberless domestic purposes. It softens the water, makes linen dazzling white, will cleanse every article in the kitchen or dining room and make it bright, will prevent moths, soften and whiten the skin, remove dandruff and cleanse the scalp, and for cleansing and sterilizing baby's milk bottle and nipple has no equal.

Borax, unlike every other cleanser and disinfectant, is absolutely harmless to the system, and is safe, simple, economical, and can be purchased at any druggist or grocery. A dainty book in colors, called the "Jingle Book," will be sent free to any Mother sending name and address of her baby and tops from two one-pound cartons of "20-Mule-Team" Borax, with 5c in stamps. Address Pacific Coast Borax Co., Chicago, Ill.

A QUESTION OF OWNERSHIP.

"Hullo, there goes old Richman! I hear he's got two lovely daughters."

"No, he hasn't, only one. I've got the other."

The Allurements of the City.

Mrs. Perkins and her daughter Mandy from the country were in the city one day, and as they walked along together they came to a window in which was displayed a variety of women's apparel. Mandy glanced wistfully at the different articles of clothing and started into the store. But a sign in the window which read: "Clothing One-Half Off During This Sale," caught Mrs. Perkins' eye. She seized her daughter by the arm, hurried her along down the street, and exclaimed in a loud voice: "W'y, land's sake, Mandy, that ain't no decent place fer a girl to go!"—Judge's Library.

Slight Accident Put Edmonia Out of the Running

Mrs. S.— was in a Richmond hospital, and she was lonely, and with the advent of a very black and languid maid, who came in every morning to wipe up the floor, she was new to talk to, so no time was lost.

GIRL WAS DELIRIOUS

With Fearful Eczema—Face and Tingling Were Excruciating. Cuticura Acted Like Magic.

"An eruption broke out on my daughter's chest. I took her to a doctor, and he pronounced it a bad case of eczema of a very bad form. He treated her, but the disease spread to her face and then the whole of her body was affected, and all her hair had to come off. The pain she suffered was excruciating, and with that and the itching and tingling her life was almost unbearable. Occasionally she became delirious and she did not have a proper night's sleep for many nights. The doctor we tried afforded her very little relief as the first. Then we purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and before the Ointment was three-quarters finished every trace of the disease was gone. It really acted like magic. Mrs. T. W. State Capital Gossip

Many Items of Interest from Our Correspondent at Des Moines.

Iowa is Far in Advance.

Des Moines.—"Iowa occupied a unique position at the international congress on tuberculosis at Washington," said A. E. Kepford, state lecturer for the board of control. "It is the only state which makes an appropriation and employs a lecturer to devote his entire time to the instruction of the people with regard to this plague. It was with considerable gratification that the Iowa delegates made its unique position plan to the 5,000 delegates and the seven sections holding simultaneous meetings during the congress. "It was a great convention and it did immense good. It helped unify the efforts of all of the medical and scientific world. It gave authority to such work as is being done in Iowa today. It disclosed the fact that the disease cannot be eradicated in a day or a year, but it will be the work of a generation to control it. It is a matter of education. "Dr. Koch was deeply chagrined because the congress declined to accept his view and went on record, declaring that bovine tuberculosis may be transmitted to the human family. He acknowledged, however, that he had not made investigation along this line for several years."

Nineteen Under Quarantine.

Nineteen cases of contagious and infectious diseases were quarantined by the Des Moines city health department during the month of September, according to the report of Secretary James M. Morgan, issued Oct. 7. In addition the department cared for ten miscellaneous cases Twelve patients were released from quarantine. There were 143 complaints investigated by the officials of the department and 268 notices served. The city physicians answered 237 calls, made 81 inspections and ten investigations of supposedly contagious diseases. The department was run at an expense of $137.20, including both the city and county expenditures.

School Laws Nearly Ready.

The commission composed of Dr. Frederick Bolton, Iowa City; W. H. Baily, Des Moines, and Arthur Springer, Wapello, appointed by Governor Cummins to prepare a recodification of the school laws of Iowa, will file their report with the governor in a few weeks. A final meeting has been called to be held in Des Moines soon. The proposed laws provide a radical departure in school administration. Instead of a county superintendent, the schools will be under a commission of men, thereby centralizing the power in each county and doing away with the independent districts.

Fifty Applicants for Pharmacy Job.

Governor Cummins announced that he would not declare a vacancy in the state board of pharmacy commissioners because of the disappearance of Fred Russell, the chairman, until after his return from Missouri. Fifty applicants have filed with the governor their credentials and petitions. These the governor has not been able to examine. He said there was no hurry to make the appointment. Russell was last seen in Iowa at Sioux City.

Nineteen New Attorneys.

Nineteen new lawyers were given certificates by the supreme court on the 5th. It is said that one of those who was not given his certificate passed the examination and will receive the document as soon as some legal matters are disposed of. The class was given an oral examination in the hall of the house of representatives.

New Banks are Chartered.

Two banks were given charters by the state department. Oct 7th. The State Savings bank of Lamoni, with a capital stock of $30,000 was authorized to begin a banking business. Luena Savings bank, with a capital stock of $10,000 was also authorized.

Parents' Day in Des Moines.

In accordance with the proclamation by Gov. A. B. Cummins the religious services in the churches in Des Moines Oct. 11, as in other churches in the state, turned toward the children, their temptations, rights, opportunities and development. The day was proclaimed as "parents' day and was instituted as the result of the work of the National Congress of Mothers and auxiliary congresses, one of which is the Iowa Congress of Mothers, which opened its biennial meeting in Des Moines with a massmeeting at the First Methodist church.

Small Iowa Roads Do Well.

What may be termed the smaller railroads of the state have prospered under the 2-cent fare law, according to their reports to the state railway commission. Reference was made a few days ago to the reports of the Northwestern and other larger roads, showing that they had a smaller relative passenger revenue under the 2-cent fare law, during the first year of its operation, than they had had during the last year of the 3-cent law, but also showing that they had been prosperous during the year and had carried a vastly increased number of passengers during the first year under the 2-cent charge. This was in spite of the fact, also that excursions were not run during the past year by the railroads of the state. If popular priced excursions had been run, as in former years, it is believed that the number of passengers carried would have vastly increased even over the increase shown by the reports in the regular course of business. Reports from half a dozen of the smaller lines in the state to the railroad commission disclose the fact that in each case the revenue from carrying passengers increased during the year of the 2-cent charge. Not alone that, but the gross and net earnings of most of the railroads show either an increase or figures about equal to the remarkable record of two years ago.

Raise New Point as to Taxation

Puzzling questions relative to the assessment of corporation stock are as old as assessment laws themselves, but two ice companies of Des Moines and the Kirkwood hotel have sprung a brand new one and Judge Brennan has a knotty problem to solve. The question is whether or not shares of stock in ice or hotel companies shall be assessed at their face value or at their par value. The Independent Ice Company, the Iowa Ice company and the Kirkwood hotel are appealing from the assessment because they say their stock was assessed at $100 per share, when it will not sell for that. The Iowa Ice company has consolidated with other companies and alleges its shares to be worth nothing. The Independent Ice company and Kirkwood hotel say their stock is worth much less than $100. A special section governs ice and coal companies, fixing the assessment on the average valuation. The city contends that a statute relating to the assessment of any corporation should govern in this case. So far as known, the question has never been raised before and in view of a seeming contradiction of the two statutes, Judge Brennan must go entirely without precedent.

Schools Are Crowded.

The Des Moines school board at its last meeting neither accepted nor refused the offer of the city library board to use the vacant rooms in the city library for office quarters. It is probable though that a negative report will be made at the next meeting of the board.

Delegations from both Oakland and Grant Park school districts were heard by the school board in regard to the overcrowded condition of the schools in those districts. The basement room in the North Des Moines High school, which is used for some of the children of the Oakland school and to which the patrons object, was considered by the board to be dry and sanitary. A new school is promised the Grant Park district next year but something will be done immediately to assist in the transportation of the smaller children who live in the outskirts of that large school district.

New Book on Election Laws.

Secretary of State W. S. Hayward and his office force have prepared a new book on the election laws of Iowa. Because of the many changes incident to the installation of the new primary system, the amendments to the law and changes brought about by the biennial election law, the old volume was insufficient. The new book is identical with the old in appearance and binding and will be off the press in a few days. It will then be distributed at once.

Ketchum and Boylan Inspect.

Railroad Commissioner N. S. Ketchum and Chief Clerk Boylan of the board's office went to Gypsum, near Fort Dodge, to inspect an interlocking switching plant of the Ilinois Central in that place. The Central's tracks cross there to such an extent that it erected a plant of its own for the safety of the train crews.

Doctrine that the Poor Are Growing Poorer Shown to Be False.

(From the Los Angeles Times.)

In 1820 the savings banks of the United States held $1,138,576. This was a poor country then compared with now. The amount was only an average of 12 cents for the population of that time. That amount of average economy was very small.

Now the people of this country have $3,690,878,945 in savings banks. This is an average for the whole population of this time of over $42. The actual depositors have an average of $429 to their credit. In 1820 only 8,635 persons in the country were rich enough to have a savings bank account. Now there are 8,588,811.

When James Buchanan, the last Democratic President in a long line, went into office, there was about $100,000,000 in the savings banks of the United States. By 1870, after fighting out the great war, the people, under Republican rule for twenty years, had $550,000,000 in the savings banks. When the next Democratic President took his seat in 1883, the savings of the people had passed the billion point. By 1898 the savings had doubled again.

So there it is. In 1820 there were only about 8,000 people rich enough to have a savings bank account. Now there are over 8,000,000. In 1820 the savings were 12 cents per capita; now they are over $42.

That the poor grow poorer and the rich richer in this country is as true as any other Populistic notion.

He talks when he's wrong and he talks when he's right;
He talks in the office and talks in the hall,
He talks in the church and he talks at the ball.
He talks to the Senate and talks to the House,
He talks to the people as poor common souse;
He talks to the press and he talks to the crowd,
He talks and he talks with a voice long and loud;

Roosevelt on Taft.

I hope and believe that all far sighted citizens who wish to see this country prosperous in material things will support Mr. Taft, but above all I ask for support for him because he stands for the moral uplift of the nation, because his deeds have made good his words, and because the policies to which he is committed are of immeasurable consequence alike to the honor and interest of the whole American people.

Events of Recent Occurrence Throughout the Commonwealth.

LIQUOR ISSUE IS INVOLVED.

Agent of Outside Concern is to Stand Trial for Violating Iowa Law.

Atlantic.—A case which has been started here by the indictment of W. H. Bilderback, a traveling salesman for the Hillier liquor house in Omaha, promises to resolve itself into one of statewide interest, as there is involved in it the right of liquor houses to solicit orders for liquor in "dry" states.

County Attorney Goodspeed of Cass county bases the indictment on the claim that the United States supreme court recently handed down a ruling in a case from South Dakota in which it was held that states had the right to regulate the sale of liquor within their boundaries and that the moment liquor is shipped into a prohibition state it becomes amenable to the laws of that state regarding its handling and sale.

Bilderback in common with others in the same business, have not been molested in taking orders for liquor, under the supposition that the law gave them the right to do business so long as they sold no liquor themselves but confined their business to simply taking orders for future delivery.

But now County Attorney Goodspeed maintains that the United States court's ruling makes all this null and void, and a man is violating the liquor laws when he takes orders in that manner. Bilderback put up a cash bond of $600 for his appearance in court at the next term, and his house proposes to fight the case hard, making it a test case of the law in the matter.

APPLE RAISING PAYS IN IOWA

Made an Income of $50 Per Acre from His Orchard.

Mason City.—Frank Trigg, of Rockford, has a 24-acre apple orchard which has received scientific care. As a result year after year the product is growing better and this year there was very little that would not go on the market demanding the very highest price. It is mostly set out in Wealthy and Patten Greenings and is a ten-year-old orchard. This year he marketed 900 barrels, and the crop brought him in cash $1,200 or $50 an acre.

Test Bulk Sales Law.

Sioux City.—In rendering a decision sustaining the claims of Sioux City creditors against a stock of goods formerly owned by Gilbertson Bros. of Lime Grove, Neb. Judge E. B. Weatherby of Norfolk, Neb., has declared the bulk sales law which received its first test, is constitutional. The ruling is deemed of great importance to Sioux City wholesalers who sell large quantities of goods in Nebraska cities and towns. The new law was put to a test by local jobbers.

Prairie Fires Are Costly.

Nora Springs.—Prairie fires did more than $1,000 worth of damage to corn fields and hay, fences, etc., on the farms of the McAuley Bros., John Andrews and William Frezee, burning some 100 tons of hay for the McAuleys and running through about thirty acres of corn for the other farmers. The corn stalks were licked up clean, the ears of corn dropping to the ground, where all the husk was burned away, though damaging the corn but little, as the wind was very strong. The fire started from the Milwaukee section force, which was burning the right of way.

Not Responsible for Cops.

Des Moines.—A hotel proprietor isn't responsible for the actions of the police. And if the police take a notion to raid a hotel and route out a half dozen or more law abiding citizens, these citizens will have no claim against the hotel man. That was the ruling of Judge James A. Howe when he sustained the demurrer of Phillip Morgan of the Morgan hotel to the petition for $5,000 damages filed by Charles E. Damon. Damon was roused from his sleep when the police raided the hotel, and he sought damages from the proprietor.

Iowa Aggies Win.

In case the team is successful again next year the award trophy will come into permanent possession of the state college. In addition to the team prize three men won individual prizes.

TYPHOID DUE TO MILK

Dr. Albert Reports on Fairfield Epidemic.

Iowa City.—Milk and ice cream probably started the epidemic of typhoid fever at Fairfield recently, according to a statement which State Bacteriologist Henry Albert will make in his twenty-first quarterly report before the state board of health. "The source could not be learned with absolute certainty," said Dr. Albert, "but it appears that the milk and ice cream were probably at fault." There were between sixty and seventy-five cases at Fairfield two weeks ago and Dr. Albert was called to discover the cause. That tuberculosis caused the most investigation in the state bacteriological laboratory during July, August and September is another interesting fact shown by the report. Of the 2,055 examinations, 833 were for tuberculosis, 644 for diphtheria, 357 for typhoid fever and 171 miscellaneous.

TAMA INDIANS WIN

Government Cannot Compel Them to Send Children to School.

Cedar Rapids.—In federal court Judge Reed decided the habeas corpus case brought by Indians of the Tama reservation against the government. He holds that the government has no authority to take the children away from the Indian parents and compel them to attend school at Toledo, nor to arrest and imprison the parents who refuse to send their children to school, as was done in the case before the court. It is held that the Muckwakis own their land in fee simple and that it is not a reservation and the government has no right to build even a jail on the land. It is a complete victory for the Indians and as a precedent will attract much attention wherever there are people of their race.

DAVENPORT $100,000 FIRE.

Thousands of Barrels of Syrup Destroyed.—Lumber Co. Hit.

Davenport.—Fire on the 14th completely destroyed elevator B of the Rothschilds Grain company, located in the western part of the city. The loss on the elevator and grain will amount to $75,000, fully covered by insurance. The warehouse of the Glucose company nearby containing several thousand barrels of syrup was destroyed, entailing a loss of $15,000. The Mueller Lumber company lost a quarter million feet of rough lumber valued at $10,000. The entire loss to the three companies will aggregate over $100,000. The fire started in one of the grain sheds adjoining the elevator, and its origin is unknown.

MILK QUENCHED BIG FARM FIRE

Many Gallons of Fluid Used at Fire on Farm of C. P. Rugg.

Waterloo.—Milk was used to extinguish a fire in the farm buildings owned by C. P. Rugg, south of Waterloo. Many gallons of lacteal fluid was thrown upon the corn cribs, and these buildings and contents were saved. A barn and several sheds were beyond control, the heat therefrom cutting off passage to the wind mill. Nine horses, seven calves and one cow were incinerated and much farm machinery and grain was destroyed. The loss exceeds $3,000 with insurance of $2,000.

Denounce Certain Druggists.

Dubuque.—At a meeting of twenty-five retail druggists held here the practice of selling liquor for beverage was denounced and action was taken refusing to assist when they get in trouble those engaged in the nefarious business. It was decided to assist in the prosecution of such offenders. The association refuses to longer carry the burden of iniquity forced upon it by three or four members.

Reorganize Sioux City Fair.

Sioux City.—Frank L. Wirick, who for the past six years has been secretary of the Interstate live stock fair, has tendered his resignation to the board of directors. Ill health is given by Mr. Wirick as the cause of his retirement. Joe Morton, who has been secretary of the O'Brien county fair at Sheldon for a number of years, is the probable successor of Mr. Wirick.

FLEET DELAYED BY STORM

RAN INTO A TERRIFIC GALE NORTH OF LUZON.

One Man Drowned and Some Damage Done to Vessels—Arrival at Yokohama Sunday.

Tokyo.—The delay of the American battleship fleet arriving at Yokohama was due to a tremendous storm off the north coast of the Island of Luzon of the Philippine group. The storm began on the morning of October 12 and continued until the afternoon of October 13. One man was drowned and some damage resulted to the fleet.

These details were communicated to the Associated Press at Tokyo by wireless telegraph from the battleship Connecticut through the special courtesy of the Japanese government.

The fleet will arrive at Yokohama at nine o'clock on the morning of October 18.

The wireless dispatch from the Connecticut was dated 5:10 a. m. October 17 and was sent by way of Shimonozeki wireless station to this place. It did not give the details of the storm encountered by the fleet, but simply stated that on the morning of October 12 the fleet ran into a terrific gale that assumed the proportions of a typhoon, off the northern coast of Luzon.

Tremendous seas were kicked up and one man was washed overboard. The dispatch did not state from what ship the man was lost. There was some slight damage caused by the heavy seas, but nothing of a serious nature, and the dispatch stated that all was well with the ships at that time.

Vice-Admiral Saito has received a wireless message from Rear Admiral Sperry thanking him for the welcome extended to the fleet by wireless telegraph.

"I'm awfully sorry, Arch," he said, ... I was such a beast last night. ...never forgive myself for trying to ...e you. Only, you see, I lost my ... and I didn't know quite what ...s doing." "Of course," I said, "I ...erstand—" But he would not let ...em the tide of his remorse. "And ..., you know, what you said was ... hard to bear, and you see, after ...t wasn't true. "Oh, yes," agreed my patient, but ...thout enthusiasm; but at any rate ...had gained my point, and Vincent ...d agreed with me that marriage ...th the secretary was too rash and ...olish for him to contemplate.

"By-the-by, Arch," he said, careless... as we still sat before the fire try...g to make believe that the incident ... the secretary was closed, "I have ...mething to tell you. The secretary ...d me outright which one of the ...r girls really is the daughter of ...tcher Boyd."

I looked at him in utter astonish...ent. "What!" I said, excitedly; "do ...u mean to say she deliberately gave ...ay the secret? Which one is it, for ...eaven's sake? And why did she ... it?"

"It's Agatha Sixth. You were right ... along. As for the reason, I don't ...ow what she did it for, unless—un...—" he hesitated. "She's such an ...norable little thing I think she felt ...at the marriage would displease my ...mily, so she wanted to turn me ...om what she saw was coming and ...ed the disclosure of the Honorable ...atha's identity for bait. Come on ... bed," he added, with a little return ... his old spirit; "you'd better get ...sted for your last try for the twen... millions. If you make up for past ...eglect you ought to win Agatha ...ith hands down."

"Then you don't mean to try?"

His face clouded again. "I don't ...ean to try," he said, and we went up ...o our rooms in silence.

And so we came to the last four ...ays of our stay at Castle Wyckhoff, ...d I began subtly and by degrees to ...in back my former place in the re...ard of Agatha Sixth, and with every ...ch of ground I gained in my pursuit ... the Honorable Agatha I thought of ...incent with a fresh pity.

The evening before the last day of ...ur stay we all spent together in the ...usic room. We were very jolly, and ...et underneath it all I think the girls ...ere a little saddened by our ap...proaching departure, and Wilfred and ... felt a certain regret that the end ... our delightful visit had come, ...though of course I had fully deter...ined to propose to Agatha Sixth on ...he morrow. I was rather surprised, ...herefore, when Vincent suddenly ...complained of headache and, excusing ...himself, went up to his room. When ... went up to my own room I rapped ...n his door, but he made no answer ...nd I concluded that he must be ...asleep. The next morning, much to ...my astonishment, he did not saunter ...in and out of my room as he was ac...customed to do of a morning, but ...as it was late I did not stop to inves...tigate. But when ten o'clock came, and still no Vincent, I went up to his room, for I thought he should be up and doing on this, his last day at Castle Wyckhoff, when he was to leave for London on the 4:15 train that afternoon. I say "he" not "we," for I felt more confident of my success with Agatha Sixth that day than I had done the evening before, and although I had not yet had the opportunity to put the great question, I felt that it was very possible that in the guise of accepted lover I might not have to take the 4:15 that afternoon.

When I reached Vincent's room I knocked twice, and, receiving no answer, entered, and was somewhat alarmed to find that he was not there, though his bed had been slept in. Anxious, without knowing why, I tore downstairs and called for Mrs. Armistead. That good lady met me at the foot of the stairs in answer to my summons, with an air as anxious as my own.

"Have you see Lord Vincent?" I asked her.

"Have you seen my secretary?" she replied, without answering my question. "She's not in her room, though her bed has been slept in. But she hasn't had her breakfast, and I can't find her anywhere."

"You don't mean it!" I ejaculated, and a sickening fear turned me cold.

"Perhaps this has something to do with it," said Mrs. Armistead. "I found it on the front hall table underneath the mail bag."

Her anxiety was apparently sincere, and yet somehow it rang false to me. With impatient fingers I seized the folded paper she drew from her reticule. It read as follows:

"Dear Old Arch: Sorry to deceive you so, but I've gone and done it—that rash, foolish thing you told me not to do; at least, by the time you get this note the deed will be done. And I so dreaded your reproaches that I never so much as asked you to be the best man. But I couldn't help it, Arch, honest I couldn't. Not to save my soul. She shouldn't have had eyes like stars and hair like autumn leaves. As for the money, hang the stuffy old millions, I say! Every pound of it is so many glass beads to me in comparison to what I have this day gained. I wish you joy of them and of the Honorable Agatha. Dear old boy, forgive me if you can; and if you want to do me one last favor come down to the station in time to meet the eleven-seventeen for London and hear my last injunctions.

VINCENT."

"When did you find this?" I gasped. But I didn't wait to hear her reply, for a glance at the hall clock told me that it was five minutes of eleven. Bareheaded I rushed around to the stables and fortunately found Christopher just putting the mare into the dogcart. "Get in," I yelled, "and drive like sin!"

"Sin, sir? Where, sir?" asked Christopher.

"The station!" I cried, jumping up beside him; and we flew down the winding drive at a pace that I would not think of attempting in cold blood.

Through Mrs. Armistead's criminal delay in handing me the note many valuable minutes had been wasted, yet I thought I should still be in time perhaps to save Vincent from carrying out the last fatal step of his incredible folly. It might not be too late to part them, for in spite of what he had said in his note I could not believe that the worst had actually happened. As we approached the last strip of woods before we reached the station I caught sight of a puff of white smoke down the track. A moment later, when we drew up at the platform, the great locomotive thundered into the station, and there, at the other end of the platform, I saw them. There was Vincent, clad in the things he had worn on the train when we had first come through the fields of Wye, and with him was a remarkably pretty girl with beautiful wavy red hair, in a gray tailor suit and a smart black hat. Of course it was the secretary.

I waved at them frantically and they waved in return, and I could see Vincent smiling happily at me as they entered one of the carriages. As I came up with their carriage Vincent opened the window wide and thrust his head out. "Oh, Vincent!" was all I said; "am I too late?"

"Not at all," he said, genially; "you're just in time to congratulate me. But what I wanted of you, Arch"—and he leaned toward me and lowered his voice—"was to ask you to break it to my father."

"Then it's true?" I said, not quite able to believe it, even yet.

"Yes, it's true," he said aloud, and with a radiant smile he drew back a little so that I could see the erstwhile Miss Marsh. "It's true that I've married the secretary."

"But it's not," said that lady, much to my surprise, and thrusting out her pretty head. "It's not true a bit. He hasn't married the secretary at all. I was only 'playing' secretary. He's married no one but the Honorable Agatha, the first, last, and only honorable!"

And for proof of her astonishing words she snatched off her glove and displayed to my marveling gaze the big emerald cross of the Wyckhoff ring, winking in the sunshine.

At this moment the train began to move, and I was filled with a sudden and justifiable rage that Vincent should have so deceived me. To think that he had been in the secret all the time and had helped to make a fool of me! But one look at his face proved to me that I had done him an injustice. He was as stricken with amazement as I was, and I knew that then, and not until then, had he become acquainted with the truth. Gathering my wits quickly, for the train was moving faster, I ran after their carriage till I caught up with the window again. "Good-by!" I shouted, and "God bless you!" And Vincent, reaching out his big hand, had just time to catch mine in his strong grasp before I dropped back, outstripped, and he had withdrawn his radiant face from my view.

Afterward I learned many things. First, that they had been married very early that morning, before the rest of us were up, in the little chapel at Wye, with Mrs. Armistead, who was in the secret, as witness. That explained her delay in giving me the note. Dreading my interference, they had not wished me to know until the whole thing was well over and Mrs. Armistead back at Castle Wyckhoff. Second, that it had been the Honorable Agatha's own idea to play the part of secretary to her aunt, thus improving upon her father's plan, and making it still more difficult for the competing suitors to discover her identity. Third, that her reason for telling Vincent that Agatha Sixth was the real Honorable Agatha was only to prove him once more and to the uttermost. And Vincent had stood the trial without faltering and had even proved himself equal to disregarding my wishes. Yet I really think that on that night when he had agreed with me that it was best to give her up he meant to do so, but his love for the girl proved stronger than his love for gold or his feeling for his friend. And it was thus that the boy won—because he had loved truly and faithfully.

And I also learned afterward that the six Agathas, shortly after the elopement of Vincent and the secretary-that-was, had all gone to their homes in America. Later some of them married certain suitors who had once been guests at Castle Wyckhoff. Among these were Agatha First and young Brancepeth, who, I am happy to say, has led a reformed life since his marriage. And it also came to pass that Vincent and his bride took possession of Castle Wyckhoff as their country seat when they came back from their honeymoon. And there I often visited them.

But on that eventful day when the train had pulled out of the station none of these things was known to me, and I stood on the platform dizzy with the unexpected turn events had taken.

And so it was that Vincent got ahead of me, just as he has always done. And so it was, also, that I returned to London, still an eligible bachelor, still the prey of match-making mammas and smiling debutantes.

There was but one comforting thought in the mixture of disappointment and chagrin that made the sum of my feelings as I drove slowly back to the castle. This much had been given me: At least I had not made the fatal mistake of proposing to the wrong Agatha, and I hugged myself as I thought how near I had come to putting the question to Agatha Sixth that very morning. That, at least, I had managed to avoid. From that folly the innate caution and unerring instinct of Archibald Terhune had preserved him. Thank Heaven!

APART FROM THEIR FELLOWS.

Peculiar Beliefs Concerning Those Whose Eyebrows Meet.

The person whose eyebrows meet may rest content in the knowledge that he is the possessor of a vigorous constitution. The growth of hair above the nose is as a rule fairly sound proof of good health. That is what the scientists tell you, but the superstitious have much more to say. In the northern part of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, there is a common belief that a "close broo't" man, or one whose eyebrows meet, is foredoomed to end a wicked career on the scaffold. This may be compared with the view held in parts of the English midlands that the close-browed person is destined for fame and fortune. On the continent there are several superstitions on this subject. The eyebrows of the gypsies are often formed in this way—a fact which they turn to good account, for in many parts it is believed that the owner of meeting eyebrows is also the possessor of what is called the evil eye, and, therefore, a person whose good will must at all costs be retained. The gypsies, especially in Germany and Austria, use this belief to extract money from the credulous peasants.

Privilege of Mankind Alone.

I love the twilight, this growing of day into night, as if one were vanishing into the other. When one lives entirely with the course of nature, every day is fully lived. Light and fire make us human beings. Man alone lives far into the night.—Auerbach.

THREE WEEKS.

Brought About a Remarkable Change

Mrs. A. J. Davis of Murray, Ky., says: "When I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, kidney disease was slowly poisoning me. Dizzy spells almost made me fall, sharp pains like knife thrusts would catch me in the back, and finally an attack of grip left me with a constant agonizing backache. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me quickly and in three weeks' time there was not a symptom of kidney trouble remaining."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Mrs. Henpeck—What foolishness are you thinking about now? Why shouldn't I call you "Leo." That's your name.

Mr. Henpeck—I know, but it makes my friends laugh when you call me that; I was thinking you might call me "Job" just for a pet name.

Insanity.

"You admit having received a $50,000 fee from the trust?" said the lawyer for the state.

"I do," replied the senator, calmly. Besides, I sent it back."

"Sent it back!"

"I did."

"Your honor," said the lawyer, turning to the court, "I cannot prosecute an insane man."

Adjournment was had until some alienists could be rounded up.

Crack or Break.

Edwin and his mother went for a walk Sunday afternoon. Coming to a tree of cherries, the mother bent a low limb so that the little fellow could pick some. Seeing some fine ones higher up, he begged to be allowed to climb the tree. "Oh, no," said his mother, "that would be breaking the Sabbath."

"And we are only cracking the Sabbath now, are we, mamma?" inquired Edwin.—Delineator.

A Discomfiting Witness.

The following colloquy took place between Councilor Sealingwax and a witness who "would talk back:" "You say, sir, the prisoner is a thief?" "Yes, sir. 'Cause why, she has confessed she was." "And you also swear she worked for you after this confession?" "Yes, sir." "Then we are to understand that you employ dishonest people to work for you, even after their rascalities are known?" "Of course. How else would I get assistance from a lawyer?"—Argonaut.

NOT A MIRACLE.

Just Plain Cause and Effect.

There are some quite remarkable things happening every day, which seem almost miraculous.

Some persons would not believe that a man could suffer from coffee drinking so severely as to cause spells of unconsciousness. And to find complete relief in changing from coffee to Postum is well worth recording.

"I used to be a great coffee drinker, so much so that it was killing me by inches. My heart became so weak I would fall and lie unconscious for an hour at a time. The spells caught me sometimes two or three times a day.

"My friends, and even the doctor, told me it was drinking coffee that caused the trouble. I would not believe it, and still drank coffee until I could not leave my room.

"Then my doctor, who drinks Postum himself, persuaded me to stop coffee and try Postum. After much hesitation I concluded to try it. That was eight months ago. Since then I have had but few of those spells, none for more than four months.

"I feel better, sleep better and am better every way. I now drink nothing but Postum and touch no coffee, and as I am seventy years of age all my friends think the improvement quite remarkable."

"There's a Reason."

CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES.

Democratic Party Cannot Claim Unsullied Virtue as to Source of Its Revenues.

(From Gov. Hughes' Youngstown Speech.)

"Mr. Bryan also has much to say with regard to corrupt practices and campaign expenditures. But he omits to give due credit to the Republican party for what it has accomplished with regard to these important reforms, an accomplishment the more noteworthy in the light of Mr. Bryan's reiterated criticisms of contributions to Republican campaign funds. In the State of New York a Republican Legislature in 1906 passed a statute prohibiting corporations from making any political contributions directly or indirectly, and providing that officers, directors or stockholders participating in or consenting to the violation of the law should be guilty of a criminal offense. And I know of no more drastic statute in this country with regard to the publicity of campaign contributions and for the prevention of corrupt practices than that passed in New York under Republican auspices. These were not promises of an opposition party seeking power, but enactments by a party in power securing genuine reforms. Proper recognition must, of course, be given to the patriotic Democrats who supported these reforms, but they were enacted by a Republican administration. Congress has also legislated against political contributions by corporations. Purity of elections and free opportunity for the uncorrupted expression of the popular will lie at the foundation of every reform and cannot be too carefully safeguarded. And there should be federal legislation securing proper publicity of and accounting for campaign contributions in connection with federal elections. But it must fairly be recognized that the skirts of neither party have been clean. If we search Mr. Bryan's following we shall find not a few who have sinned, and also those who, if we may judge from their local activities, are still unrepentant. The Democratic party cannot claim unsullied virtue either with regard to the source of its revenues or its readiness to receive them."

LABOR IN DEMOCRATIC STATES.

Coal Miners in Alabama Subjugated Into Cringing Dependencies.

That there's a "rift within the lute" of the Gompers proposition to deliver the labor vote of the country to Democracy is becoming more apparent. While Mr. Bryan and Mr. Gompers are making special appeals to labor, neither refers to the deplorable condition of laber in the Democratic South. Mr. John P. White, for six years president of the Iowa United Mine Workers, and now one of the national officers of the United Mine Workers' Asoc'ation, who investigated mining labor conditions in the South, is not so reticent. In a recent address to Local Union No. 97 of Albia, Iowa, he told of persecutions of labor in Alabama where a coal miners' strike was in progress. He is reported as saying: "The miners of Alabama have been subjugated until a majority have become cringing dependencies. Almost daily some of the laboring men of that State were mercilessly shot down for daring to assert their rights as American citizens. Ninety-one members of the Mine Workers' Association were thrown into jail without having committed any crime other than becoming members of the organization." Alabama is a State absolutely under control of Bryan Democracy.

He has filled the requirements and we hope to see him re-elected this fall The Times office also received a pleasant call.

This scribe and son had the pleasure of going with Wm. Lau and Herman Thrun on a fishing trip to Clear Lake a few days last week. We were well satisfied with our outing and returned with a nice catch. Our headquarters was at H. Kastner's and we can say that we were royally treated. Mr. Kastner has a full supply of boats on hand and with his restaurant can serve the sportsmen with good accommodations.

Joseph K. Griffis, the Indian, presented the first number of the Klemme lecture course and made a very impressing impression indeed. There were about 250 people present to hear him give his famous lecture and applauded him vociferously. Mr. Griffis certainly made a hit with the people and we candidly believe is trying to lead his people in the right direction. After concluding his lecture he accepted an invitation to speak at the Eng. M. E. Church Sunday morning and at the Ger. M. E Church Sunday evening and at both places the churches were crowded to overflowing. The first number was a grand success for the lecture course and we believe that the people will turn out stronger than ever for the following courses.

The first number of the lecture course started out very promising. The lecture by Tahan was not only interesting as the history of a romantic life but full of literary merit and vivid truths. Mr. Tahan is an artist as a word painter and orator. As a minister he preaches a most effective and convincing gospel in relating his conversion from a wild savage life to a christian experience and the minestry Sunday evening he occupied our pulpit and preached an ernest yet tender sermon which was listened to by a large audience with much interest.

EDITOR TIMES,
Klemme, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—

As I have been a reader of your paper for several years, I take pleasure in writing a few lines to your many readers. I have been in your town some three and one-half years ago and know many of your readers such as the Gruetzmacher Bros. and their families, also the Schaefer, Terhufen, Lenz and Bloom families and others, most of these have once been Wisconsin people and some of them my class mates.

Our county fairs are all over for this fall, having had the opportunity to attend two of them. The Dodge County Fair at Beaver Dam was better than ever before, not only in good races, but also in farm products. This fair is known by many of your readers and it echoes back to your younger days. The Watertown fairs had its 4th year and is much improved by having the street cars coming into that town since Aug. 1st. The exhibits were grand and showed of much interest in raising good crops and fruit.

The weather has been about the same here as it has there. The first part of the season too much rain autumn quite dry. We had a large crop of hay and clover. Winter wheat C. averaged about 30 to 33 bushels per acre test 61, Spring wheat 25 to 30 bushels per acre, barley 32 to 35 bu. per acre, oats varied from 35 to 45 bu. per acre, corn medium, has not been harvested enough to get an average.

The average visitors of Klemme were but three that we know of and they were Mrs. J. Gruetzmacher and her two daughters who were the most pleasant guests at the home of her brother John and wife. They also called on many old friends and neighbors who were glad to welcome them. We still hear the echo of songs sang by Hulda and Esther. While I regret that they had to leave so soon, we say come again and stay longer and bring more friends with you. Best wishes to all friends.

We remain yours,
Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Kath,
Lowell, Wis.

State Capital Gossip

Many Items of Interest from Our Correspondent at Des Moines.

Teachers' Pay Is Raised.

Des Moines.—That the new state certificate law has done much was pointed out by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction John F. Riggs before the Northwestern Iowa Teachers' association in Fort Dodge. It has resulted, he said, in increasing the aggregate wages for Iowa school teachers for the year ending July 1, 1907, in the sum of $398,390.69. It has increased the aggregate wages for the two years ending last July, $780,316.85. This new state law is the one which abolished the custom of county superintendents granting second and third grade certificates. Now the teachers are given examinations in the various counties by the superintendents from questions furnished from the office of the state superintendent The papers are then examined by a board of examiners appointed by the state superintendent and certificates issued from the state department. Superintendent Riggs urges that the raising the standard of efficiency among teachers has had the effect to raise the aggregate salary of teachers. He reports that now country districts that formerly paid but $30 per month for teachers are paying $50 and even more, with prospects for other increases.

Children Put by $50,000.

With 3,890 school children depositig their pennies with the Penny Provident association of Des Moines, a total of over $50,000 has been saved.

"The object of the association is to encourage the saving of small sums of money by the school children with the hope that it will teach economy, thrift, something about banking and business methods. Penny Providence is just what the name implies, providing or preparing for future use. To be provided is to be prudent frugal, economical.

"This system is in operation in 22 of the 51 schools of Greater Des Moines. Plans are now being made for the extension of the work to all schools of the city.

"The Penny Providence association was established in October 1901, at the request of the Congress of Mothers. This association is the savings bank of our schools and has been, during its seven years of existence, a really constructive and uplifting influence in the lives of thousands of Des Moines school children."

The entire cost of the association is borne by the bank with whom the money is deposited. It costs the taxpayers nothing.

On Tour of Investigation.

President Cameron and Secretary Simpson of the State Fair association with architect Smith have gone to Toronto, Canada to inspect the big new steel and concrete grandstand there for the purpose of gaining ideas to be used in the construction of the new grandstand at the fair grounds. It is proposed to build a steel and concrete grandstand here to seat 12,000 people, and to cost in the neighborhood of $150,000, and as the officers of the association have had no previous experience with a building of this nature they desire to first make an investigation of other buildings of this kind of construction. On the return trip the party will stop at Detroit and Columbus, O., to make a general inspection of the fair buildings there.

Vote School is a Big Success.

The first school of instruction for Polk County officials to learn them how to run the new voting machines was a complete success. H. W. Barr and Auditor Burnett presided as the faculty. The board of supervisors will determine soon whether to use the party levers on the machines or lock them as Attorney John Smith asks. The majority of the board have favored leaving the levers open.

Ask for New Buildings.

The board of trustees of Ames college will ask the legislature for two new buildings from the assembly and will build one out of the millage tax. The $150,000 veterinary department structure will come out of the tax. The legislature will be asked for $150,000 for a gymnasium and $150,000 for a new building for women will be asked also.

McClain Back From Europe.

Judge Emil McClain of the supreme court has returned from his European trip, having sailed from New York July 4. He will be in Des Moines in time to sit with the supreme court, which opens its second period on the 20th of this month.

Endorses School Laws.

The preliminary report of the commission appointed to revise the state school laws, has been submitted to several experts on school legislation, and very favorable comments have been received.

Among others who have read the report is Prof. Edward C. Elliott of the University of Wisconsin. Dr. Elliott is recognized as one of the best authorities in the United States on the subject. He has done much investigation for the United States bureau of education at Washington, and is at present engaged in preparing a bulletin on recent educational laws.

Dr. Elliott wrote to one of the members of the commission the following concerning the proposed Iowa code:

"I want to say that my general impression is that your commission is proposing some very progressive modification of your educational organization, which, if adopted by the legislature, will serve as guides of progress for the other states.

"I note in particular the very broad powers that are conferred upon the state board of education, which by its constitution will become the great centralizing and directing force for an educational system.

"The proposal for the organization of county school districts is especially interesting to me in that something of a similar, although considerably less radical nature, will probably be attempted of passage in the next Wisconsin legislature. As far as I am able to judge your plan is decidedly the best one that has yet been put forward for the solution of the problems now existing in the great majority of our rural school districts.

"I like very much your general plan for the certification of teachers, which if I remember correctly, is modified from the plan adopted some two or three years ago. As I read these sections it occurs to me that the time is ripe for making a greater distinction between the state certificate awarded to properly qualified university graduates and the graduates of normal schools. I think something of this kind will be attempted in Wisconsin sooner or later.

"The provisions requiring certain grades of certificates for certain positions seems to me to be very wise and farsighted. In operation it ought to raise the general standard of efficiency. The provision for an indefinite tenure of office for superintendents, teachers, etc., after one year of service is far-reaching.

"The section dealing with secret societies in the public high schools seems to me the most wisely drawn of any that I have read, and I think I have examined all that have been adopted. I think I shall make special mention in my bulletin of your dealing with school houses; the requirements you have set forth and the plan of supervision provided ought to lead to a vast improvement in the school buildings of your state.

"While, as you say, you have proposed a number of radical things, we need radical things before our common school system is taken out of some of the ruts into which it has unfortunately been driven. I sincerely hope that you may be entirely successful in accomplishing with your legislature all that you are anticipating."

War On "Black Plague"

War against the "black plague," or social evil, as earnest as the present war against the "white plague," or consumption, was predicted by Dr. A. M. Linn, president of the state board of health, in his address before 200 physicians and health officers from all parts of the state at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium. Dr. Linn predicted that the rapid increase of disease will make absolutely necessary some radical and united fight against social evils of today. He urged the doctors to return home and so study the subject that next year they can perfect an organization to war against what he believes is an impending menace to the state and country

Requisition Issued.

The governor issued a requisition on Wisconsin for the return to Iowa of E. B. Randall, charged with the larceny by embezzlement of $128 worth of cash registers from the firm of Burdick-Corbin company. Governor Cummins also honored requisition papers for the return of Tom Brown from Cresco to Waukesha, Wis., where he is wanted for seduction.

TURKEY FEARS WAR

DISTURBED BY THE MILITARY ACTIVITY OF BULGARIA.

THREAT FOR MONTENEGRO

Austrian Fleet Anchors Close to Its Seaport — Powers Agree on Program for the Conference.

Constantinople.—Disturbed by the news of Burgaria's military activity; the Porte has instructed the Turkish representatives abroad to call this matter to the attention of the powers and to state also that Turkey will decline to take the responsibility should Bulgaria's persistence in her present attitude result in hostilities.

Austria Threatens Montenegro.

Cettinje, Montenegro.—Six Austrian warships were anchored Thursday off Spinza, in Dalmatia, a crown land of Austria-Hungary. They are no more than ten miles from Antivari, the sole seaport of Montenegro.

Agreement Between Powers.

London.—Great Britain, Russia and France have reached an agreement on a program to be submitted to the other powers as a basis for discussion by the proposed European conference to settle the Balkan situation. The proposals to be laid before the powers are eight in number. The first is to the effect that articles 1 to 22 of the treaty of Berlin, which relate to Bulgaria and eastern Roumelia, should be replaced by stipulations recognizing the independence of Bulgaria as at present constituted and determining the financial obligations of Bulgaria toward Turkey. New clauses probably will settle also the question of the Oriental railway.

The second and third proposals are that the powers shall take note of the annexation by Austria-Hungary of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the return of the sanjak of Novipazar to Turkey.

Provision Regarding Crete.

Article 4 relates to Crete. It replaces article 23 of the treaty of Berlin by clauses recognizing the annexation of Crete to Greece, and determining the financial obligations of Greece in respect to Crete, toward Turkey. It is understood that the four powers charged with the protection of Crete, Russia, Great Britain, France and Italy will settle the Cretan question in concert with Turkey before referring it to the conference. It is proposed that the second part of article 23 of the Berlin treaty, which provides special regulations for the government of other parts of European Turkey, shall cease to have force when the powers are assured that a satisfactory settlement has been effected.

The fifth proposal is to the effect that arrangements similar to the above shall apply to the Armenian provinces of Turkey.

Article 6 deals with Montenegro. The Montenegrin rights of sovereignty are limited by article 29 of the treaty of Berlin. It is proposed that articles 26 to 33, inclusive, of the Berlin treaty, shall be condensed to a single article, abrogating all the restrictions imposed by the treaty under the original article 29, which it is proposed to sweep away.

Plan Compensation to Servia.

The seventh point in the program is the statement that it is desirable to seek and give compensation to Servia and Montenegro by a rectification of the Bosnian and Herzegovinian frontiers, adjoining Novipazar. This is taken to imply that a strip will be taken from the territory annexed by Austria-Hungary.

Proposal 8 concerns the river Danube and declares it is desirable to revise the regulations governing Danube traffic so as to give larger rights to the states bordering on the river.

Will Move Hindus to Honduras.

Vancouver, B. C.—J. B. Harkin of the department of the interior of the Dominion government has solved the Hindu question so far as the province of British Columbia is concerned. The entire Hindu colony, consisting of more than 2,000 persons, is to be moved from British Columbia to British Honduras. The Hindus are anxious to move and the imperial government will assist in the cost of transporting them to their new home. Many of the Hindu colony here are not only out of work but actually starving.

Carriers Head a Thief.

Chicago.—Robert F. Palmer, president of the City Letter Carriers' association of Illinois, was arrested Thursday on a charge of robbing the mail.

He made a written confession to Postmaster Inspectors Elston and Llewellyn that he has been pilfering letters for 16 years, and that the amount of money stolen is large although he kept no account of it. Palmer is a letter carrier of Joliet.

A MEMORY OF WAR.

From time to time bright memories come of scenes passed long ago,
When as boys we marched together,
lounged around the camp fire's glow,
Stood on picket guard at crossroads, or swung out on skirmish line,
Saw flags go down—then rise up to advance, their stars a-shine!
For Freedom's cause we battled, to preserve the Nation's life, Crowded centuries of progress into four fierce years of strife.
And we look back to those old days, and keep their memory green,
When we old boys for solace' sake caressed the old canteen!

Though 'twas filled with turbid water,
how we drank and drank again!
'Twas nectar on our marches, or to lips of dying men!
We fancy now they sing again, upon that distant shore:
"We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more!"
We dream we see them marching, with their long and swinging stride,
To the rhythm of the dipper, tinkling clear at each man's side,
And as they tramp o'er ragged roads,
flags wave and bayonets shine,
And word comes sharp, by galloping aide;
"Form men quick into line!"

Tense-nerved, brave men form lines of blue, with flags held firm between;
The wings of our old regiments from right to left are seen;
Shells shriek and burst above them—bullets sing their fatal song;
The bugle sounds the charge—Hurrah!
the dreadful battle's on!

"We Are Coming, Father Abraham, Three Hundred Thousand More."

Scenes on that field we'll not portray—dead men and mother's boys,
The curse of war—a change to Hell, from peace, with all its joys!
When at sunset came the battle's end,
moans of wounded filled the air;
For North and South the dirge was played: "There'll be one vacant chair."

Comrades, our march grows shorter, as we near that other shore,
But we'll meet our fate as bravely as we did in days of yore;
We'll leave our dented coffee dipper and that precious old canteen
Hanging right above the mantel, with Old Glory in between;
And our famous friend, old hardtack, we'll just nail it to the wall—
'Twould stand a trip, towed by a ship, from here to Donegal!

And in fancy, when we reach the end,
and tread the golden way,
We'll see the men who wore the blue,
and men who wore the gray;
And they'll greet us, when we meet them on that bright and happy day, While all will sing the army songs the old bands used to play,
And that which touches every heart,
wherever men may roam,
The song that always brought the cheers, that sweet song, "Home, Sweet Home!"

—Hugh Young.

More Important Than War.

The American harvesting machine has won its way to usefulness all over the world. Whether drawn by horses, steers or dromedaries, this invaluable device is always in the vanguard of civilization. An incident showing the full significance and importance of the harvester even above an army in war time is related in H. N. Casson's recent book entitled, "The Romance of the Reaper."

During the Russo-Japanese war several troop-trains that were on their way to the front were suddenly sidetracked, to make way for a long freight train loaded with heavy boxes.

The war generals and grand dukes in charge of the troops were furious. Why should their trains be pushed to one side and delayed to expedite a mere shipment of freight? They telegraphed their indignation to St. Petersburg, and received a reply from Count Witte.

"The freight train must pass," he said. "It is loaded with American harvesters. It means bread."

Nothing would be a lesson to us if it did not come too late.—George Eliot.

CHICAGO CHAMPIONS AGAIN

CUBS CAPTURE THE FIFTH GAME FROM DETROIT TIGERS.

Decrease of Interest This Year Shown by Attendance—Teams' Share of Gate Receipts Is $46,115.

Detroit, Mich. — By defeating Detroit Wednesday afternoon, 2 to 0, the Chicago team of the National league retained its title as the champion baseball team of the world. The present series differed but little from that of last year. In the previous series Detroit managed to get one tie game and then went down in four straight defeats. In the present series, Detroit snatched one victory out of the five games played.

The Chicago team, according to the critics, showed superiority in every department of the game in the series as a whole, although this superiority was not so apparent on the day that Detroit won.

Detroit was handicapped by Schmidt's inability to cut down runners at second and by the failure of her heavy hitting outfield to bat at critical moments when hits meant runs. None of the Detroit pitchers seemed able to consistently puzzle the Chicago batsmen, for even Mullin, who pitched Detroit's only victory, was found for seven hits. Throughout the series Chicago's hitting was opportune. The occasions were rare when, with men on bases and runs needed, a Chicago batsman was not there with the needed hit.

The games were singularly free from squabbling and on only two or three occasions were the decisions of the umpires questioned. At no time was it necessary for a player to be sent to the bench to enforce discipline and good order. The series, however, created less interest in the two cities most affected than that of last year, if the attendance may be taken as a guide.

The paid admissions were only 62,232 for the five games and the receipts totaled but $94,976, as compared with $101,000 last year. The attendance at the final game Wednesday afternoon was but 6,210, with gross receipts of $9,577.50.

Of the money taken in the players of Chicago, the winning team, get $27,669, and the Detroit players $18,446. The club owners get $19,681 apiece, and the national commission $9,497.

Jennings was not beaten Wednesday until Schmidt's foul in the ninth had found secure and final lodgment in Kling's capacious mitt. Through the fierce uphill battle he stood on the coaching line off first base, coaching the runners on every move and spurring the batsmen on to make their best efforts. No success of the rival team and no failure of his own club dampened his determined cheerfulness. There was never a faltering note in his well-known cry of "Weeah" and any slight advantage set him to executing his peculiar war dance.

A feature of the game was Schmidt's recovery of his throwing arm. Chicago was not able to steal a base on him for the first time during the series.

EXPLORER HEADED FOR POLE.

First Message Is Received from the Cook Arctic Expedition

New York. — The first message from Dr. Frederick E. Cook, the arctic explorer, since he started for the pole from a point north of Etah February 26, has been received in this city. It was brought here by Rudolph Franke, who accompanied Dr. Cook on the early stage of his journey and who received it from the explorer by messengers whom he sent back to the winter base after he was well on his way to the north. The message was written March 17, about three weeks after Dr. Cook had started on the last stage of his journey. It was dated "Polar Sea, North of Cape Hubbard," and said that up to that point everything had gone well, although the weather was extremely cold. He was making a straight line for the pole at that time, he said, and expected to be back at the base late in May.

"I am making a straight course for the pole," Dr. Cook wrote. "The boys are doing well and I have plenty of dogs. I hope to succeed. At any rate, I shall make a desperate effort. While I expect to get back by the end of May, still I wish you to be ready to go to Acponie, the island off North Star, where the whalers' steamers come, by the 5th of June, and if I am not back, to go home with the whalers. I think, however, we will be back."

SICK MAN WANTED CHANGE.

More Than Willing to Make Transfer with Physician.

A Syracuse business man who, besides being extremely active and ambitious, has much sense of humor, was taken sick with a slight attack of pneumonia. His physician, aware that it would be a task to keep his high-strung patient in bed, sought to impress on him the seriousness of the ailment and the necessity of absolute rest; all of which the sick man listened to in a bored manner. Nevertheless he consented to obey the doctor.

But this enforced inactivity rankled in him; and each succeeding day found the patient importuning the medical man attendant to allow him to get out to business. Then, disgusted, he would lie back to cast imprecations at the inexorable physician.

One morning the physician, after having been up all night on an important case, appeared at his patient's house at the usual hour. He had hardly stuck his haggard face inside the door, however, before the man in the bed gave him a quick glance and sat up.

"Eh? ejaculated the patient. Then shoving out his hand to grasp the doctor's satchel, he added: "Doc, I guess you'd better get into bed here and let me go out with the medicine bag."

CURE AT CITY MISSION.

Awful Case of Scabies—Body a Mass of Sores from Scratching—Her Tortures Yield to Cuticura.

"A young woman came to our city mission in a most awful condition physically. Our doctor examined her and told us that she had scabies (the itch), incipient paresis, rheumatism, etc., brought on from exposure. Her poor body was a mass of sores from scratching and she was not able to retain solid food. We worked hard over her for seven weeks but we could see little improvement. One day I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and we bathed our patient well and gave her a full dose of the Resolvent. She slept better that night and the next day I got a box of Cuticura Ointment. In five weeks this young woman was able to look for a position, and she is now strong and well. Laura Jane Bates, 85 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., Mar. 11, 1907."

Making Sure.

Our Freddy is fully endowed with the inquiring mind of youth. Recently he said: "Mamma, who puts the bottle of milk on our front porch every night when we are all asleep?"

"Isn't that a rather foolish question?" his mother answered. "Whom do you suppose?"

"Well," said the small investigator, thoughtfully, "I suppose God does, but I'd like to know for sure!"—A. M. A.

"YOUR FACE YOUR FORTUNE."

An attractive face may not actually be worth money to one, but it does have much to do with success and happiness in life. The chief charm of an attractive face is a good skin, which is easiest acquired and preserved by the use of a standard face cream like Pompeian Massage Cream. Pompeian is not a cosmetic or rouge, but a household preparation for cleansing and soothing the skin through aiding nature in nature's own way. Pompeian is rubbed in and then rubbed out and off. Nothing is left on or in the skin. And herein lies the harmlessness of Pompeian. The action of the Cream and the massaging brings the natural glow to the cheeks. Also, wrinkles and crow's feet are driven away, sallowness vanishes, angles are rounded out and double chins reduced by its use. Pompeian Massage Cream is the largest selling face cream in the world, 10,000 jars being made and sold daily. This fact indicates both its wide popularity and its perfect harmlessness, for several million women would not use Pompeian if it were not an exceptionally pure and safe product. To keep young-looking and good-looking use Pompeian. Your druggist is most likely one of the 40,000 dealers who sell it; 50c and $1.00 per jar. But to prove to you the merits of Pompeian we will send a quarter ounce jar, free. This affords an ample supply to show how Pompeian works for good looks. This sample jar is not sold by druggists. Send 10c in stamps or coin to cover cost of postage and packing. Write today to The Pompeian Mfg. Co., 159 Prospect St., Cleveland, O.

Mrs. M M Davidson of No. 379 Gifford Ave. San Jose, Cal. says: The worth of Electric Bitters as a general family remedy for headache, biliousness and torpor of the liver and bowels is so pronounced that I am prompted to say a word in its favor for the benefit of those seeking relief from such afflictions. OF INTEREST TO MOTHERS.

There is one subject which always interests the mothers of young children and that is how to treat their coughs and colds or to ward off a threatened attack of croup. For this purpose we can recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It always proves beneficial. In case of croup it should be given as soon as the croupy cough appears so as to prevent the attack. Keep it at hand ready for instant use. Many mothers do so and it saves them much uneasiness. For sale by G A Pabst & Co.

WILLIAM LAU.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I hereby announce myself as an independent candidate for the office of Supervisor of District No. 3, to be voted on at the November general election 1908. Dated July 30, 1908.

To the Voters of Supervisor District No. 3.

I would like to say a few words to the voters of the 3rd Supervisor district, becanse the Signal Editor is trying to run me intc the mire in his issue of Oct. 14th in which he has uo reason. He and his beloved candidate appear to me very much like the old saying: "It does seem queer Signal Editor, and yet it may be true, that you and your candidate be square headed and still be block heads to." In the the first place the Editor should know where the candidates live before he goes finding fault with them. because we have no Andrew Anderson in Avery but we have a candidate in Avery by the name of William Lau who has lived on the northwest quarter of section six for 20 years and has paid taxes in the 3rd dis. for 24 years and have been in the county for 27 years and was born in Clayton county, Iowa. I do not uunderstand how the Signal Editor can find fault against me, it must be simply because I am no subscriber to his paper.

I have called on a good many voters in this district personally with my petition and filed my papers with 270 signers with the County Auditor, so my name will certainly be on the official ballot as an independent candidate for Supervisor for this 3rd district. and I wish that every man that signed my petition will cast his vote for me on election day on Tuesday, Nov. 3, 1908.

I also hope that the independent voters and progressive republicans will unite with the democratic voters a d give me your hearty support which I would very much appreciate.

I have never asked for a county office until this year and I honestly believe that the voters will agree with me that I am not asking for anything unfair. I believe that I am entitled to the office, more so than either of the other two candidates. So dear voters do not hesitate to vote for me for fear that you may throw your vote away, but vote for me and tell your friends and neighbors to do likewise and convince the public that you can elect an independent candidate for supervisor. Should I be elected I guarantee that you will make no mistake and I shall do the right thing to one and all of you to the best of my ability and knowledge. Yours very respectfully,

WILLIAM LAU.

DEATH ENDS LAW SUIT.

Passing Away of Thomas Walker May Terminate Hot Fight.

Iowa Falls.—The recent death of Thomas Walker, a wealthy pioneer resident of this county, will probably terminate one of the most bitterly contested lawsuits in the history of Hardin county. Several years ago John Walker, a son of the deceased, who lives here, sought to have a guardian appointed for his father, setting up the claim that the aged parents was mentaly incapacitated for transacting business. But Mr. Barry, a son-in-law, who lives at Hampton, thought otherwise and resisted the application to the courts for the appointment of a guardian for the old gentleman. As a result of this difference of opinion between the son and son-in-law several bitterly contested suits followed with varying success on both sides. The litigation was still pending in the courts when Mr. Walker died and his decease will probably put a new phase on the case, which involved valuable property rights.

A FIRST VOTER.

Gen. Hoxie, 63 Years Old, Will Cast His First Presidential Vote.

Iowa City.—Gen. Richard Hoxie, who retired this year after the longest record of active service of any man in the United States army, will cast a presidential vote this fall for the first time in his life. General Hoxie is 63 years old and has been a citizen of the United States all his life, but he has never voted in any election. He entered the army at the age of 15 and it was a matter of principle with him that he should not take part in partisan politics while serving the government. In spite of the fact that he has never exercised the right of suffrage, General Hoxie is interested in political matters and has kept abreast of the times in all affairs of public interest. He would prove about the oldest member of a first voters' club in the country, it is thought.

HIT BY FIRE FIEND.

General Store, Barber Shop and Pool Room Burned.

Valeria.—On Oct. 19 flames destroyed the general merchandise store of Calvin Jones and the barber shop and pool room of W. McKeeder. The total loss is $4,000 with but small insurance. The Fre started at 8 o'clock and by 10 o'clock the burned buildings were in ashes. In addition to the Jones store several warehouses in connection with the store were burned. The postoffice in the store of Berg Anderson had a close call and was removed from the building. When the fire alarm was given the crowd listening to Rev. Williams at the revival services at the Methodist church rushed to the scene and did good work in preventing the spread of the flames.

RECEIVER FOR NEWSPAPER.

The Marshalltown Reflector Is in Financial Trouble.

Marshaltown.—A receiver has been asked for the Reflector Printing company, publishers of the Weekly Reflector of this city, by Merritt Greene and Charles E. Hatcher, who own the property. The application, was passed upon by Judge Parker in the district court, who appointed J. L. Williams, a bookkeeper of the First National bank, to take charge of the property. In the application for receivership the owners of the property claim that Henry J. Thompson, who was editor and publisher of the paper until last Thursday, had contracted debts against the company for material and supplies, and the owners ask for a receiver to prevent being held liable for them.

New Dyersville School.

Dyersville.—If plans materialize a large educational institution will be built near this place. The Very Rev Father F. DeLang, superior of St Josephs Technical school of Techny, Ill., has been here looking over the ground. About 200 acres of ground will be required and a branch seminary erected for the education of missionary priests for the Society of the Divine Word, which has headquarters at Steyle, Holland, and Techny, Ill.

MYSTERY IN POISON CASE.

Prominent Man Receives Strychnine Through Mail.

Corning.— Rushing into the Potter drug store on the afternoon of Oct. 23, A. T. Wheeler, a prominent lumber and implement dealer, fell, with the words, "I am poisoned." Help was quickly summoned, and physicians worked over him all afternoon and night. The circumstances connecddanger. Thecircumstances connected with the affair are partly a mystery. During the early afternoon, Mr Wheeler received by mail, a bottle, labeled, "Foley's Honey of Tar," and in the same mail a letter claiming to be from "a friend" and urging him to try the medicine, as it was a sure cure for a cold. As Mr. Wheeler had been suffering from a bad cold, he supposing it to be the joke of some friend, took a large swallow. He soon began to "feel queer" and started home, but his limbs gave away and would not support him. Immediately he bethought him of the medicine, and had only strength left to stagger into the drug store. Upon examination of the bottle it was found to be a solution of strychnine and according to a physician's statement, contained a sufficient quantity to kill a number of men. The package in which the bottle came was mailed at the Chicago stock yards postoffice, but the name of the send-

DR. ENGLE EXONERATED.

Well Known Newton Man Is Cleared of Charges.

Newton.—By a decision of Justice J. W. Allfree, Dr. Perry Engle, accused of adultery by his wife, was declared entirely innocent and Mrs. Engle's prosecution was stigmatized as malicious. With Dr. Engle's exoneration came also the exoneration of the young woman who was arrested with him, Miss Mary McMannus, who was not placed on trial, but it was agreed after the submission of evidence that the two defendants should be adjudged upon the testimony in the Dr. Engle triel. Immediately following the decision of Justice Allfree it was announced by J. C. Hawkins, attorney for the defendants, that suits would be brought at once against Mrs. Engle. He made no further statement, but it is presumed that one will be brought by Dr. Engle for divorce and another by Miss McMannus for damages for defamation of character and malicious prosecution.

TESTING DEMURRAGE LAW.

Council Bluffs Firm Sues the Milwaukee.

Council Bluffs.—A suit has been instituted in the district court in the name of David Bradley & Co., implement dealers, and said to be backed by a number of implement jobbers to prevent the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad company from collecting demurrage on cars held at the instance of the Bradley company because of non-arrival of material over the same road. The railroad company was delaying its incoming material. The case is in the nature of a test of the demurrage law when for any cause the railroad company is at fault.

Medics at Hampton.

Iowa Falls.—November 10 has been chosen by the executive committee of the Austin Flint Medical association for the semi annual meeting and it will be held at Hampton. An excellent programme devoted to surgical and medical subjects has been arranged and the day session will be followed in the evening by a banquet. The association includes in its membership the most of the medical fraternity in a dozen or more counties in this part of the state

MAN SLAIN BESIDE BRIDE

LOUISIANA TEACHER MURDERED BY REJECTED SUITOR.

Grim Tragedy on Train—Persons Concerned All Members of Prominent Families.

New Orleans.—On her bridal tour which had begun scarcely one hour before, and seated in a railroad coach almost between her husband and a suitor for her hand, Mrs. Fred Van Ingen Thursday night saw the flash of the suitor's revolver, felt the sudden grip of her husband's hand as the bullet killed, and then turned and fought for her life. When the girl appeared about to become the victim of the second bullet from the revolver, her uncle, a man with gray hair, but strong and cool under the excitement, rushed up and thrust his thumb beneath the hammer of the revolver, jamming the mechanism and rendering the weapon harmless.

This was the story which the other passengers on the Texas & Pacific "cannonball" told when they reached this city Friday, but the principal actors in the tragedy, most of whom are connected with Louisiana's leading families, have so far refused to discuss the matter.

The former suitor is F. S. Beauve of Plaquemine, La., at which place he was taken from the train and placed under arrest. The unfortunate husband was Prof. Fred Van Ingen, a prominent teacher of Alexandria, La., and a relative of former Gov. Blanchard. The bride is the daughter of James M. Rhorer, one of the leading officials of Iberville parish, residing at Baton Rouge. Beauve is 24 years old, and Van Ingen was 23.

The wedding took place Thursday at Alexandria. Beauve was in town, having arrived there, it is reported, on the same day as Miss Rhorer. When the bridal couple left for New Orleans, he boarded the train also and after a time sat in a seat where he was facing Mr. and Mrs. Van Ingen, with the bride between him and her husband. Other passengers say Beauve talked with the bridal couple just before the shooting, and that his manner appeared cordial.

WARSHIPS FOR ABRUZZI.

Two Will Escort Him and His Bride to Italy.

Rome.—The Italian cruiser Fieramosca has been ordered to await the duke of the Abruzzi at New York, whither the cruiser Etruria also will be dispatched. It is understood that the two warships will escort the duke and his bride to Italy.

The statement is made also that no member of the Elkins family will attend the official ceremony of the transcription of the marriage deed in Rome, and that when Senator Elkins visits Italy later he will be given the title of chevalier of Annunciade.

The chancellor of the empire, Prince von Bulow, as well as the other high state functionaries, the members of the diplomatic corps, including Dr. Hill, the American ambassador, and the members of the embassy staffs with their wives, with about 800 other guests, were present.

Foes of Saloon Disagree.

Enemies of the saloon in Des Moines are divided as to the proper method of using the initiative feature of the Des Moines plan to drive them from the city. J. B. Hammond, chairman of the prohibition state committee, is radically opposed to the plan espoused by Secretary W. C. Barber of the anti-saloon league.

Mr. Hammond points out that there is no provision in the Des Moines plan law giving the people the right to say what resolutions shall be passed by the council. The initiative only applies to ordinances, he declares. And as the saloons are allowed to operate by resolutions of consent Mr. Hammond does not see how the voters could instruct the council not to issue further liquor permits.

Although disagreeing as to methods, the prohibition chairman believes with Mr. Barber that the saloons can be driven from Des Moines. His plan is to allow the people to vote on an ordinance fixing a prohibition saloon tax. In other words, he would require them to pay a license fee and impose other regulations that would make it unprofitable for the liquor dealers to remain in business.

"I am in favor of the initiative movement as suggested by the anti-saloon league, but desire one that can be maintained in the courts," said Mr. Hammond. "The point of difference is that the league proposes to prevent the city council from passing a resolution of consent provided by the state law, and I propose to reach the saloons through an ordinance for which the state law has made provision."

Teachers' Pay Is Raised.

That the new state certificate law has done much was pointed out by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction John F. Riggs before the Northwestern Iowa Teachers' association in Fort Dodge. It has resulted, he said, in increasing the aggregate wages for Iowa school teachers for the year ending July 1, 1907, in the sum of $398,390.69. It has increased the aggregate wages for the two years ending last July, $780,316.85. This new state law is the one which abolished the custom of county superintendents granting second and third grade certificates. Now the teachers are given examinations in the various counties by the superintendents from questions furnished from the office of the state superintendent The papers are then examined by a board of examiners appointed by the state superintendent and certificates issued from the state department. Superintendent Riggs urges that the raising the standard of efficiency among teachers has had the effect to raise the aggregate salary of teachers. He reports that now country districts that formerly paid but $30 per month for teachers are paying $50 and even more, with prospects for other increases.

Health Officers Want New Laws.

Three laws are to be asked of the next legislature by the health officers of the state, viz.:

A law looking toward the eradication of bovine tuberculosis in Iowa.

A law providing sanitary municipal abattoirs, operating under the supervision of state authorities.

More stringent rules governing the granting of milk and dairy licenses in the cities and towns.

Not only do germs of tuberculosis and other diseases lurk in the milk furnished so freely by the Iowa cow, but her flesh is not even free from taint, according to the men engaged in safeguarding the public health.

Kirkwood Library Given to State.

Mrs. Samuel J. Kirkwood, widow of Iowa's war governor, has presented her late husband's splendid library, embracing several thousand volumes, to the State Historical society. Valuable correspondence of Governor Kirkwood, when President Garfield's secretary of the interior, is contained in the collection. A biography of Kirkwood will soon be started by the Historical society.

New Translations.

The state law library of Iowa is becoming more complete daily. A new volume translating the laws of the Sun God from an obelisk found in 1906 by archeologists has been added. These are civil laws extant 1,100 years before Christ. Three volumes of civil laws from the time of the deluge to the death of Jacob, furnish interesting reading.

DEPEND ON CORSET

WHERE NATURAL SLIMNESS IS NOT ATTAINABLE.

Good Lines, Made Necessary by Present Fashion, Must Be Paid for—Well-Chosen Underwear Is Also a Factor.

The first thought which strikes the woman of small income in considering modes for winter raiment is the importance of length and line. Height, real or assumed, she must have. And lines must be the perfection of straightness and slimness.

This means paying for good lines. Gone are the voluptuous curves, swelling hips and rounded bust and shoulders. To look at fashion drawings and fashion figures in smart shop windows, the inexperienced woman may well think that the whole feminine world has gone a-banting. And truly it has grown wondrous thinner!

Brown Satin in Tailored.

But where natural slimness is not attainable in the short time allowed to adjust the figure to incoming fashions, the corsetiere is getting in her golden work, and women are paying from $40 to $60 for corsets whose power lies in reducing the hip an inch or more.

The corset can do wonders in simulating slenderness, and next to that comes well chosen underwear, finely wrought tights for all stout figures, and the new combination garments, two pieces in one with flounces only at the knees, for the naturally slender figure.

The up-to-date figure is practically the same width from shoulders to hips, the narrower the better. At the hips, the line begins to run in, until around the feet, in the case of house, calling and evening gowns, the long train seems to twist around, narrow and snake-like.

The new skirt, long and clinging, or severe and tailored, is known as the mounted skirt. That means it has the appearance of being mounted on a very high girdle which comes close to the bust line. It is a combination of the gored skirt with the shaped high girdle, accomplished by running the gores of the skirt, admirably fitted, to a point just below the bust.

Here it meets a bodice of the same material, or at least a fabric matching the skirt perfectly in tone, with a deep yoke of harmonious coloring in softer fabric or of lace or net. For tailored modes, this mounted skirt is generally finished off with stitching, bias folds or piping or a very fine line of braid. In house gowns or evening frocks, it is often hidden by the draped girdle with long sash ends in softest of fabrics.

The illustration given will be of great use to home dressmakers. A type of the mounted or high-girdled skirt in heavy brown satin, tailored, with a long, straight pointed coat, will give height to the most commonplace figure.

This represents the last cry in tailored raiment which can be utilized for church wear, calling and a multitude of semi-dress occasions. The skirt barely clears the ground, yet can be worn in trolleys or comfortably and easily raised with one hand when walking. The blouse beneath shows little of satin and much of soft creamy lace and braiding on a deeper cream satin.

Few practices are more beneficial to the condition of the eyes than is that of bathing them regularly every night before going to bed. Dust readily accumulates on the lids between the lashes and causes them to smart.

NEW IDEAS IN MILLINERY.

Effective Trimming for Hats of All Sizes and Designs.

Dahlias in velvet and silk and in the most exquisite fancy and natural colorings are a smart novelty.

There is a noticeable tendency toward the simplification of trimming effects, which increases daily.

Smart collars made to correspond with the new plumage-covered hats are the latest thing, and come in all the new shades.

Immensely full flounces and crown pieces made of ostrich in the new kangaroo fringe style are the height of fashion, and are marvelously effective in light and dark green or two shades of stone green.

One of the most attractive models of the season is a dark blue gendarme velvet hat trimmed with a thick garland of deep green orange foliage, and two full-sized velvet oranges in natural color, fastened at the left side of the wide brim.

THE TOILET TABLE.

Orange juice with cracked ice can often be taken by a patient who can retain nothing else.

Orange juice, being laxative, is excellent in most sickrooms; is sometimes even prescribed for typhoid-fever patients.

Very sensible for use in the bath is a mitten crocheted of white darning cotton. The hand slips into it easily, and many people who have used them prefer them to any other kind of wash cloth.

A perfectly flat line is fashionable in conjunction with the slenderest of hips, but given self-assertive hips the extreme flat back achieved by many of the smart skirt models is an absurdity, and good sense must guide one rather than a slavish acceptance of fashion extremes.

ORNAMENT ON WRITING TABLE.

Combined Watch Stand and Memorandum Holder.

Our sketch illustrates a useful and very easily made little article, intended for standing on a writing table. It is always pleasant, while writing, to be able to keep an eye upon the time without turning round, perhaps, to look at the clock, and under those circumstances some kind of watch-stand becomes necessary; it is also very useful to have a holder for unused half-sheets of note-paper, and the little stand shown in our sketch answers both these purposes.

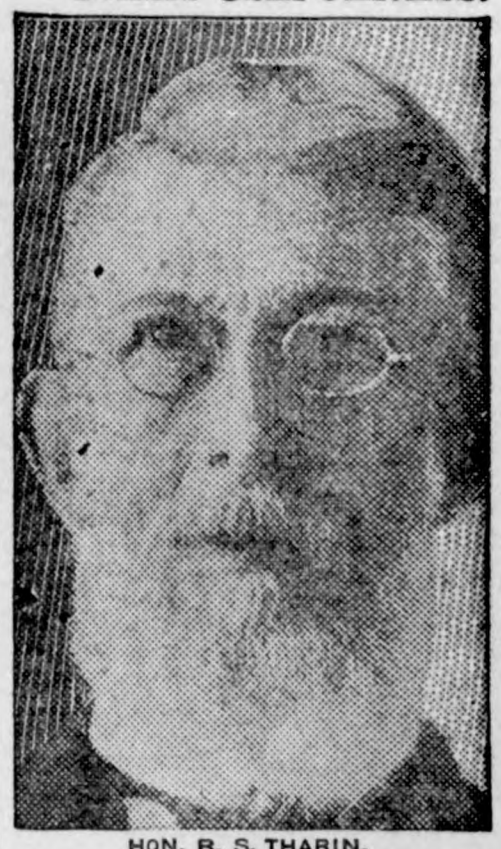
It is easily and simply made, and a piece of cardboard of the size indicated should be used for the foundation. This may be covered with any pretty piece of material that may be at hand and edged all round with a silk cord.

There is a support at the back, similar to that of an ordinary photograph frame, hinged on at the top with a piece of cloth. In the upper part of the front of the stand a large dress hook is sewn, and on this may be hung the watch. A little lower down a strap of elastic runs across, and over this the half-sheets of notepaper are folded and held in their place by the elastic. When one has been used, it is an easy matter to pull it off and expose the underneath sheet for further notes. To complete this little article, to the right hand side a pencil is attached by means of a fine silk cord.

PERUNA A TONIC OF GREAT USEFULNESS.



HON. R. S. THARIN.

Hon. R. S. Tharin, Attorney at Law and counsel for Anti-Trust League, writes from Pennsylvania Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C., as follows:

"Having used Peruna for catarrhal disorders, I am able to testify to its great remedial excellence and do not hesitate to give it my emphatic endorsement and earnest recommendation to all persons affected by that disorder. It is also a tonic of great usefulness."

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes: "Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well. I also induced a young lady, who was all run down and confined to the house, to take Peruna, and after taking Peruna for three months she is able to follow her trade of tailoring. I can recommend Peruna for all such who are ill and require a tonic."

Some people prefer to take tablets, rather than to take medicine in a fluid form. Such people can obtain Peruna tablets which represent the solid medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

BRYAN AGAINST WOOL GROWERS.

Proposed Policies of Democracy Would Wreck Wool Growing Industry.

McKinley was elected through a number of Rocky Mountain states which had voted for Cleveland. These states were Democratic because of the large mining population. They turned to McKinley on account of the severe punishment they had received by placing wool on the free list during the four years of the life of the Wilson Tariff act, which on the theory of free raw material swept away the duty upon wool, and this nearly destroyed the wool growing industry of the United States; and if it had not been saved by the Dingley act, which restored the McKinley duties upon wool, the industry by this time would have been wiped out in the United States. Bryan hopes to carry Wisconsin, which is a wool growing state, and the Rocky Mountain wool growing states which voted for Cleveland the last time. Apparently he expects the wool growers to overlook the fact that the Republican platform expresses and defines protection to American industries, particularly mentioning the farmer, who is a wool grower.

Bryan's election would be a menace to the wool grower in two ways. The Democratic party has defined its attitude toward wool as a raw material, although it is the finished product of the farmer. It takes a whole year to grow a fleece of wool, and in this climate, where sheep are fed in winter, they are fed crops, which represent labor and high-priced American labor, whereas the competitor of the American wool grower is the wool grower of the Southern Hemisphere (Australasia, the Argentine Republic and South Africa), who has the advantage of perennial pasture, and owing to this advantage, the cost of wool growing is only one-half of that of the American wool grower who, in the states enumerated, have to feed their sheep in the winter.

Another way to destroy the American wool grower would be by the destruction of the American Woolen Company, which consumes 40 per cent of American wool, on the ground that it is a trust. The American Woolen Company is composed of what were formerly some of the largest mills of the United States. They are thus what Bryan would denominate a "trust," and as his platform boldly declares that the products of trusts should be put on the free list, he would destroy the market for what American wool would be left.

Then, again, if, in order to strike at the trust, he removes the duty upon "manufacturers of wool," he destroys the other 60 per cent of the independent mills outside of the American Woolen Company, or, in other words, those that are not in the trust. The Bryan policy spells ruin alike to wool growers and wool manufacturers.—American Economist.

A Complete Defense.

An Irish woman was accused of having stolen an iron soap kettle and cracked it, so that its usefulness was ended.

Her defense, when brought before the judge, was as follows: "Oi have witnesses here, yer honor, t' prove, first, that Oi niver had th' kittle in me possession; second, that Oi returned it t' Mrs. Casey widout a crack in it; and, third, that th' old kittle was cracked whin Oi s'hole it."

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Function of Next Administration.

(Judge Taft at St. Louis, October 6.)

"The function of the next administration is not to be spectacular in the enactment of great statutes laying down new codes of morals, or asserting a new standard of business integrity, but its work lies in the details of furnishing men and machinery to aid the hand of the Executive in making the supervision of the transactions so close, so careful, so constant, that the business men engaged in it may know promptly when they are transgressing the line of lawful business limitations and may be brought up standing whenever this occurs and may be prosecuted where the violations of law are flagrant and defiant, and promptly restrained and penalized."

Some of the Democratic newspapers recognize the situation well enough to begin already to pick out Cabinet officers for President Taft, but that is something that President Taft can do much better himself.—Philadelphia Press.

Some time after his host heard a distant report of a gun. A few minutes later he heard some one shouting. The Passing of Brickville

By Joseph N. Quail

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

The destiny of Brickville was decided when Pikey McGinn's chimney caught fire, and in that flame the Brickvillian hope of a metropolis in the heart of the Bad Lands went up in smoke.

Brickville didn't realize it at the moment, because, paradoxical as it may seem, the little blaze which destroyed the town was easily got under control. The place hadn't progressed as far as a fire department, and it would not have helped matters if it had. A tipsy cowboy who had been sampling Pikey's hardware vaulted to the back of a wolfish-looking cayuse, yelled a few times in hearty Montana fashion, and then swung his riata at the chimney. As the noose fell fair about the stack of bricks he dug spurs into the sides of his mount and made a run upon the rope.

The chimney came down with a crash; the fire was out; the fate of Brickville was written.

That is why the town does not appear upon any map. But if ever you have ridden over the Northern Pacific you can probably recall a long and narrow valley to the north as you passed out of the Bad Lands of Dakota into the Bad Lands of Montana. That is where Brickville stood. The soil all about is hard and dry and red, and there is no verdure. Not anywhere in sight is there a tree. The side hills are seamed with black strata, and the rains have carried stains from these and streaked the valley with them on both sides of the muddy little stream which winds away to the south.

The black strata are seams of bituminous coal, and it was in mining this coal that the Brickvillians made their living. There is still pay in these streaks, but the people who worked them have drifted away, and on the site of the town prairie dogs and coyotes and rattlesnakes hold annual conventions which never adjourn.

If any place ever fully justified its name, that place was Brickville. At the height of its prosperity it had, exclusive of sheds and stables, 87 one-story buildings, including the railroad station, the saloon and the tonsorial parlor, and every one of them was of brick—even the sheds. There were optimists who looked forward to a brick court-house and a brick jail, and but for the fire in Pikey McGinn's chimney these aspirations might have been realized.

Pierre Succotash played perhaps the most prominent part in Brickville's destruction. Pierre was a French-Canadian, whose rear name had come into collision with Brickville's sense of propriety, and some of its letters were dislocated by the shock. He had been gold mining in British Columbia, and no one had inquired very closely into the reason of his coming from a gold to a coal camp; it would have established an uncomfortable precedent. But he went nosing about the wreck of that chimney, as he went nosing into everything that happened in town; and Fred Ritchie, who conducted "the tonsorial parlor," which was across the street from McGinn's, saw him suddenly dart in and pick up a broken brick.

Now Fred and Succotash had said some unpleasant things to each other once upon a time, and Fred, believing that Pierre was courting trouble, promptly ran in for his gun; but when he came out Succotash was nowhere to be seen.

Next morning Pikey found that some one had carried off nearly half of his chimney bricks, and he promptly declared it to be the work of Slanteye McCafferty, his hated rival in the hardware business. Mac denied this in vigorous language, and a gunplay was imminent when the whisky agent happened along and announced a reduction in rates by the barrel; and then they had a drink, and ordered half a barrel each, and the hatchet was buried.

But war was on hotter than ever next day, for the remainder of Pikey's loose bricks had disappeared in the night. Pikey swore that Slanteye was planning a cheap extension to his gin mill, and Mac retorted that he would be a fool indeed to go around picking up hoodoos that had fallen from his rival's leaky roof.

Then each got a shotgun and stood out in front of his saloon waiting for the other to come along. And the result of this was that trade fell off in both places, for Brickvillians knew that shotguns scattered their charges and they refused to slake their thirst when there was a chance that a stray buckshot might next moment spring them aleak. So it was that business interests induced the rivals for a second time to declare a truce, and then the town breathed easier and drank oftener.

A week later Succotash was a passenger on a west-bound express with a ticket to Glendive in his hat band. And the next east-bound freight brought in a very scarce article—some lumber—and a heavy iron roller marked with his name. On his return he installed the roller in the brick shack where he slept and put a big padlock on the door. What he did in that place was the town mystery. But he was flush of money, and one day he caused a sensation. He became the owner of a saloon, having bought out Pikey McGinn—taking bar, stock, goodwill and building.

Then, to the greater surprise of Brickville, he promptly sold to Pikey's hated rival everything but the building. Pikey swore it was all a put-up job, and left town in disgust. Succotash said it was because he intended to tear down the old house and put up a better one. And tear down the old place he did, and he carted the bricks away to his mystery shed—to store them there until he was ready to build, he said.

But the only thing that Pierre built at that time was a wooden water trough, leading from his well to the brick shed. Most of the day and all of the night he locked himself in that shed with his secret. Those who passed in the rear of the place declared that they could hear him grinding something, and because of a pool of red water which had accumulated near the shed they thought it must be the bricks.

Now, Fred Ritchie was one of those who regarded Pierre's conduct as most suspicious. He gave a good deal of thought to the mystery of the shed and the tearing down of McGinn's saloon, and finally he recalled having seen Succotash grab that piece of brick and make off with it. Then it occurred to him also that it was Pierre who had caused all the trouble between Pikey and Slanteye by stealing the chimney. And one day when Succotash was down in town buying provisions Fred sneaked out the back way of his shop with a bit and stock and bored a hole in the mortar between the bricks of Pierre's shed to discover what his secret might be. As Pierre worked that night Fred had his eye glued to this hole and noted what he was doing.

Next morning his neighbors were surprised at finding that Ritchie's chimney had fallen during the night, and they were astonished to see Fred carrying the bricks into his barber shop and piling them up with great care. He wasn't going to have them stolen, as Pikey's were, he told them. And as they passed by the shop later in the day and looked in they saw him pounding away at the bricks, breaking them into bits and scanning each piece carefully.

One of his customers was let into the secret, and another chimney fell. This man passed the secret on to a bosom friend, and then there was another crash of brick. Within 24 hours every man, woman and child in the town was pulverizing brick as if life depended upon it.

The secret was a secret no longer. Succotash had found gold in the piece of brick that Ritchie had seen him dart forward to pick up, and he had found more in the bricks he had stolen from Pikey. With the proceeds he had set up an arastra in the shed, and in this he was grinding gold out of the bricks of Pikey's dismantled saloon.

Ritchie and the others found scales and grains and specks of gold. When the chimney bricks had been ground up the wall bricks followed, and in a short space of time Brickville was a town of tents again.

Then it was announced suddenly that Succotash and Ritchie had patched up their trouble and that Pierre had sold his arastra to Fred. This was followed by Pierre's departure from town. "He has made his pile," the Brickvillians said to one another.

The coal pits had been abandoned for this new method of gold mining, and there wasn't a whole brick building in the place when a freight brakeman one day brought a startling piece of news into the town.

Succotash had bought a claybank in Basin, and a brickyard as well; and he had astonished the good people of that nook in the mountains by converting this claybank into a gold mine and this brickyard into a mill in which to treat his rich clay, for the gold could not be freed by ordinary process of placer washing.

Then Brickville collectively kicked itself for not having thought to trace out this brickyard before the man from Canada; and the Brickvillians folded their tents and went scurrying away to the mountains to search there for other claybanks that were studded with nuggets of gold.

And so it was that the fire in Pikey McGinn's chimney happened to destroy the town.

Not Fair.

"Look here, Abraham," said the judge, "it's been proved right here in court that instead of doing something to help support your wife and children you spend your whole time hunting 'possum!"

The old negro hung his head.

"Now, Abe, you love your wife, don't you?"

"Ah suttinly does!"

"And your children?"

"Yas, suh!"

"And you love them both better—"

"Better ev'ry day, jedge!" Abe broke in.

"—better than a thousand 'possum?"

"Look hyah, jedge," exclaimed Abe, with widening eyes, "dat's takin' a coon at a pow'ful disadvantage!"—Bohemian Magazine.

Peru Adopts Standard Time.

By a decree of the government of Peru, issued by President Pardo, the time of the seventy-fifth meridian west of Greenwich was on July 28 adopted as the national standard time for the whole of Peru. The meridian is only a few minutes from that of Lima, and runs almost exactly through the middle of the country. All timepieces throughout Peru will now coincide with those in the United States where eastern time is kept. Peru is the first South American republic to adopt the world standard.

Thinks Churches Should Be Taxed.

Rev. A. A. Nellis, pastor of the Second Baptist church, Auburn, in a recent sermon on the obligation of the church to the community, said that one obligation that should not be shirked was to pay taxes. There is no good reason for church exemption, he believes, and the church should not be a tax dodger.

Propitiate Chinese God.

At Wang Kong village, in the San Wui district, there was a certain god in the Tin Hau temple, over which there was a hole in the roof, exactly above the head of this god. One of the worshipers noticed this and said to the other villagers that he had had a dream that, as the god's head was suffering by the leaking of the water from the roof, to any man who subscribed money to have the temple thoroughly repaired the god would promise prosperity and a good harvest. A big sum of money was therefore subscribed within a few days, and a huge illumination accompanied by a theatrical performance will take place in a few days to propriate this god.—South China Post.

COL. TAYLOR IS UNHARMED

ESCAPES BY BOLD DASH FROM THE MASKED MOB.

Plays 'Possum Under Log—Tennessee Night-Riders, Believing Aged Attorney Is Dead, Depart.

Tiptonville, Tenn.—Unharmed, save numerous scratches received in a 30-hour trip through unfamiliar woods and the fatigue incident to the trip without food, and the mental strain, Judge R. Zachary Taylor reached here Wednesday after a miraculous escape from night riders at Reelfoot Lake, who murdered his partner, Capt. Quentin Rankin.

Col. Taylor Wednesday told how they were seized by the masked men, and continued:

"The leader of the mob talked with us, telling us we were associated too much with Judge Harris, and were taking entirely too much interest in the lake. He said that the course of Harris and the West Tennessee Land Company in prohibiting free fishing was causing the starvation of women and children, and that something had to be done.

"I never dreamed that the mob intended us any harm, but just then they threw a rope around Capt. Rankin's neck and swung him to a limb. He protested, and said: 'Gentlemen, do not kill me,' and the reply of the mob was a volley of 50 shots.

"This was the first evidence of any intention to harm us, and when the firing began I jumped into a bayou, and made for a sunken log. Behind this I hid and the mob fired several hundred shots into the log. They evidently believed I was dead, for I heard one of them say: 'He's dead, and let him go,' and with that he rode away.

"I remained in the water until after the mob was out of hearing and went to an island in the lake, where I remained all day Tuesday. At night I started out and walked all night, coming up to a house at six o'clock this morning."

TOKYO FETES COME TO CLOSE.

Scene of Entertainment Is Changed to Yokohama.

Yokohama.—The series of incomparably brilliant functions which have characterized Japan's reception of the American battleship fleet came to a close here Friday night with a dinner on board the battleship Fuji, the guests of which were confined to the American ambassador, rear admirals and other officers.

There was also a brilliant reception on the battleship Mikasa to which all the prominent Americans here were invited, with the accompaniments of an illumination of the fleet, fireworks and torchlight processions on shore.

Rear Admiral Sperry endeared himself to the Japanese people by personally attending the funeral of Gen. Count Nodzu and placing a wreath on the casket. Later a luncheon was given at the Shiba palace and the admiral, accompanied by his aides, walked from the palace to the Shimbash railway station, passing along the Ginza, the principal street of Tokyo, which was massed with people.

The admiral was recognized and almost mobbed by tens of thousands of enthusiastic people, but everywhere was treated with respect. Thousands sought to shake him by the hand and the ovation lasted the whole length of the street. The stern old admiral evidently was deeply impressed.

Rear Admiral Sperry was accompanied by Rear Admirals Schroeder and Wainwright, who with their aides were kept equally busy exchanging greetings.

Eagle Lost Its Prey.

Eagles still hover over the crags that make the Cumberland narrows noted. John H. Horchler, an engineer, found a pheasant fluttering in his yard at Cumberland and observed a large eagle flying away. The eagle had dropped the pheasant and made frantic but unsuccessful efforts to recover it, flying into the yard, but was frightened away by the presence of Mr. Horchler, who found the pheasant fluttering with jagged holes in its neck from the eagle's talons.—Baltimore News.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A GOOD NAME

EVERY one desires to establish for himself a good name, but it takes time to win the confidence of your fellow men. Truth and perseverance are the alternate rungs on the ladder of success, and he who reaches the top must make no false step.

There are hundreds of cough medicines with all sorts of names, each claiming to be the best, but the test of time will prove whether or not they have established the right to be called the best.

Careful selection of the drugs, intelligent and skillful compounding, the entire absence of opium, chloroform, or any other harmful ingredient, and the absolute purity of every article that goes into its composition, has built up and sustained its good name.

These are the things you should remember, and the next time you want a cough medicine, it is worth while to see that you get Chamberlain's and secure the virtues which a good name implies.

Every dealer who sells a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy guarantees it to give satisfaction or he will refund the money.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has had thirty-five years of sale and use, and has cured coughs and colds under all conditions, in all countries and climates, and the verdict today is that it has no equal.

The Colonel's Leg in History.

Col. Blank, who later called himself general, received, in a little skirmish of the Civil war, a slight scratch on the leg. In the days afterward he nursed his glorious wound with loving care and grew lamer year by year that the memory of his bravery might be ever fresh.

When grown old, as he sat one day caring for his leg and musing on the glorious past, a young man, a stranger visiting the family for a few days, approached him and inquired, sympathetically:

"Lame, general?"

"Yes, young man, I am lame."

"Been riding, sir?"

"No, sir," sternly and rebukingly, "I have not been riding."

"Ah, slipped on the ice, general?"

"No, sir!" with actual ferocity.

"Then, perhaps, sir, you have sprained your ankle?"

The old man slowly and carefully lifted his pet leg in both hands and tenderly set his foot upon the floor. Then he slowly rose from his seat and stood looking down with scornful pity at the unlucky youth. At last, in the sublimity of rage, he burst out:

"Go and read the history of your country, you puppy!"

The Child's Viewpoint.

Percy Alder, M. P., of London, told an amusing story of a small girl at a recent meeting of the Children's Happy Evenings association. The child had been sent away to the country for a holiday, and questioned as to what in all her holiday had pleased her most, this little slum maiden, whose London home adjoined a waste piece of land, replied: "Seeing no dead cats."

FIRST SECTION OF ATLANTIC FLEET AT OLONGAPO.

Second Division at Amoy, China, Tells Indifference of the Natives—Few "Passes" Cause.

Olongapo, P. I.—The first squadron of the Atlantic battleship fleet arrived here Saturday.

The weather was fine throughout the entire trip from Japan and the ships have been occupied with squadron evolutions and careful preparations for target practice. Otherwise the journey has been uneventful. Wireless communication will be maintained with Manila while the fleet is at Olongapo.

Amoy. — Chinese people were indifferent regarding the arrival here Friday of the second squadron of the United States Atlantic fleet. Only a few natives turned out to see the battleships composing the strongest naval force that ever entered this port.

Not more than 100 Chinese guests were admitted to the grounds on which the celebration planned for the reception of the American officers and sailors was held, and resentment at the severe measures to exclude the natives was the cause of the apathy. The British consul issued a circular stating that the local officials have declined to issue more than 60 passes to the inclosure to British subjects and that in consequence he refused to accept one.

The fleet appeared off Tai-Tan island at 6:30 a. m. Friday, having been met ten miles out at sea by the torpedo gunboat Fei-Ying, which escorted the visitors to their anchorage. The ships entered the harbor in single file, the Louisiana, flagship of Rear Admiral William H. Emory, leading, and after forming a double line they dropped their anchors at 9:30 o'clock while the forts on shore and the flagship of the Chinese squadron, the Hai-Chi, fired the usual salutes, to which the Americans responded.

CHAIN THEMSELVES TO GRILLE.

Suffragettes Create Remarkable Scene in House of Commons.

London.—Suffragette disturbances have driven the government to the unusual course of temporarily closing the strangers' and ladies' galleries in the house of commons. Wednesday evening a sensation was caused by the display of a placard and sudden shrill cries from the ladies' gallery, demanding votes for women, while simultaneously a bundle of handbills fluttered down from the strangers' gallery at the opposite end of the chamber, and a man shouted protests against "injustice to women."

Attendants hurried to the galleries and the male offender was unceremoniously ejected, but from the ladies' gallery sounds were heard of a desperate struggle. Two suffragettes had firmly chained themselves to the grille and resisted for a time all efforts at removal, crying continuously in shrill tones their demands for votes.

The scene was watched with amazement from the floor of the house, but finally the suffragettes were dragged from their posts and removed, but only after portions of the grille were removed with them.

PEACE STEPS BY BULGARIA.

Agrees to Compensate Turkey and Discharges the Reservists.

Sofia.—The Bulgarian government Tuesday informed the representatives of the foreign powers here of its acceptance of the principle of paying compensation to Turkey, which has been the burden of persistent diplomatic representations during the past fortnight on the part of all the great powers. This decision was arrived at by the cabinet Tuesday morning after a long debate, in which Emperor Ferdinand used all his influence in favor of peace with compensation.

As a further step in the direction of peace, 60,000 reservists will be discharged at once, leaving the army at its normal strength of 60,000.

Memorial Service for Sternburg.

Washington.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the diplomatic corps, the secretary of state, and other high executive officials, members of the supreme court and representatives of the army and navy, attended the memorial services for the late German ambassador, Baron Speck Von Sternburg, which were held in the German Lutheran Concordia church here Thursday. Baroness Sternburg was accompanied by her mother. Revs. Paul A. Menzel of the Lutheran church and Roland Cotton Smith of St. John's church led the service.

TREASURER'S BOOKS O. K.

Calhoun County Official's Office Found in Fine Shape.

Rockwell City.—The board of supervisors passed a resolution employinng W. A. Burnap, an expert accountant, to check up all of the county officers of Calhoun county, his work to cover the years 1905-6-7-8.

At a recent meeting of the grand jury a recommendation was made that all officers be checked up, but instead of complying with that recommendation the board employed Mr. Burnap to check the county treasurer only. This action on the part of the board caused considerable feeling, so much in fact that the board decided it was wise to take action in accordance with the recommendation of the grand jury.

Mr. Burnap has made his report covering his findings in Treasurer McCrary's office up to the present time and the report is a most favorable one of the manner in which the affairs of that office have been conducted.

WOODMAN YIELD SUIT.

Drop Claim of Preference for Lodge Deposit.

Chariton.—The fight of the Modern Woodmen of America to establish the claim that their deposit of $350,000 was a preferred claim in the failed First National Bank of Chariton, has been given up. The claim will now take its place along with all the other claims and share pro rata with them. This has been decided after a conference between the attorneys and lodge officers. The Woodmen will receive approximately $140,000 on the claim. Receiver Jamieson has on hand about $250,000 which he will soon turn into a dividend to creditors. This will cover about 25 per cent of the total claims. There will probably be a further dividend of 15 per cent later on, making a total of 40 per cent.

SERVIAN COMES TO AMES.

Young Man Plans To Go Back to Teach His People.

Ames.—From far off Servia young Joseph Hekiman has come to Iowa to enroll as a student at Iowa State college and study the science of agriculture that he may go back home and teach it to his people. Mr. Hekiman arrived a short time ago, too late to classify for the present term, so he is spending his time in Ames studying the people with whom he is soon to be associated as a student. Young Hekiman is a bright fellow and is very enthusiastic over the new work that he is soon to take up.

A Creston Lawyer is Dead.

Creston.—Attorney Walter J. Locke died Oct. 25, at Cottage hospital in this city, after a severe illness of over four weeks. A widow and three daughters survive him.

Will Examine Fire Risks.

Des Moines.—Engineers sent out by the national board of fire underwriters of New York City has started an investigation of all the business buildings of Des Moines and they will report on the fire department as well. Offices have been leased in the Observatory building. It will probably take five men about thirty days to complete the inspection. Their purpose is to gather information in regar to fire hazards, building laws, the condition of the fire department and general information in regard to conditions from a fire insurance standpoint.

An Accident or Suicide?

Mason City.—Ole Olsen(a young Norwegian. who has lived in this country but a few months, was found dead in bed with the gas turned on, the door locked and the windows down. The authorities concluded that death was accidental and that he did not turn off the gas completely when he retired. Others think it suicide. Olsen has a brother, Charles Olsen, living at Hampton.

State dairy and food inspector H. R. Wright, has brought charges against two Des Moines grocerymen for selling adulterated food.

MANY WILL LOSE MONEY.

Decision Rendered by Judge Clark Decrees This.

Mason City.—Many depositors in the recently defunct Bank of Corwith will lose their money, according to a decision rendered by Judge J. J. Clark, in which it was decreed that nearly the entire assets of the bank, about $70,000, are due claimants by virtue of their showing that the money placed in the Corwith bank by them was there in trust, and hence is preferred. The showing made by the claimants was to the effect that the paper they received from Standring. the absconding cashier, was fraudulent as duplicates had been sold to many different institutions.

VOTE FOR WATER WORKS.

Council Bluffs Declares For Municipally Owned Plant.

Council Bluffs.—An election held here on the 27th on the issuance of $60,000 in bonds to be devoted by the city to the construction of a municipal water works plant carried by nearly two to one. In the election the women cast the largest vote and evinced the greatest interest ever shown in an election here. The division of sentiment among them was shown in precincts where they did not all vote as their husbands did and returned a majority against the bonds while the men registered a reverse sentiment. This was reversed in some other precincts. Another election will be held to pass upon any contract the council may wish to enter into. Plans for a plant have already been tentatively accepted.

M'FARLAND HAD INSURANCE

Also Had an Interest in Valuable Farm Land in Monona County.

Marshalltown.—President A. F. Balch of the Marshalltown State bank, looked over Mr. McFarland's personal effects kept at the bank to ascertain just how much life insurance he carried. It has been found that McFarland was insured for $14,000, $6,000 in the Bankers' Life of Des Moines, $5,000 in the Northwestern and $3,000 in the Equitable of New York. It is claimed that the insurance is all valid, as it has been in force a long time, and any suicide clause that the policies might contain would not be affected. Mr. McFarland also had an equity in a Monona county, Iowa, farm said to be worth about $25,000

JAMES KERR PASSES AWAY.

Democratic National Committeeman Dies at New Rochelle, N. Y.

New York. — James Kerr, Democratic national committeeman from Pennsylvania, died Saturday morning at his summer home in New Rochelle, following an operation for an intestinal disorder which had made him practically an invalid for a year. His wife and sons were with him at the end.

William J. Bryan visited Mr. Kerr last Monday, and the latter was much elated over the visit of the Democratic candidate, but almost immediately afterward suffered a nervous collapse which greatly aggravated his already weakened condition. There have been several consultations of physicians within the last few days, and it was determined Friday that the only chance of saving Mr. Kerr's life lay in performing an operation.

We said nothing, for just then he reached for another chair. This time, however, he was not bent on destruction, for he merely detached a dark object hanging on its back. For the second time Gabrielle clutched my unfortunate arm, which was quite bruised with her attentions.

"It's my bag!" she exclaimed. "My new shopping bag. I left it hanging on my chair—and he's opening it! Oh, the wretch!"

The "wretch" proceeded to investigate the contents of the bag, and carefully examined each article as he drew it forth. First a pair of gloves, and then a handkerchief, which he held critically to his nose after scrutinizing the monogram.

"I hope he likes it!" ejaculated Gabrielle, in an indignant whisper.

Next a small powder puff and a bit of chamois skin (regarded with tolerant amusement), a stubby pencil minus a point and much dented from thoughtful biting (having been used to calculate our expenses), 25 cents, three street car tickets, a latch key, and a square card, at which he looked long and earnestly.

"It is a good thing you wear your money around your neck," remarked Elizabeth, but Gabrielle pointed an outraged finger at the unconscious blue serge back.

"It is our picture," she said—"we three together. Did you ever!"

Finding the moonlight not bright enough for his purpose, he moved nearer the cabin window, happening as he did so to glance behind him. Springing to his feet, he lifted his cap and advanced towards us, bag in hand, but with one accord we turned and fled. It was best to take no chances within reach of his hands. We had no desire to follow the chairs over the railing.

I went with Gabrielle and Elizabeth to their stateroom, where we spent some time in discussing the strange incident and the fact that our picture was still in the supposed lunatic's possession. At length I bade them goodnight and set out to find my own berth, as we had not been fortunate enough to get adjoining rooms.

In the saloon I found the stewardess, who at once accosted me, with an apologetic cough.

"Oh, if you please, miss," she said, "could I speak to you?"

The burden of her speech was a request that I share my stateroom with a lady who had not been able to secure one, and who was much fatigued. "And I thought, miss," she concluded, "that as you have a room to yourself, perhaps you would be so kind as to let her have the spare berth, since it is the only one on the boat. Would you mind obliging her?"

I did mind very much, and was about to say so in no uncertain language when the stewardess twitched my skirt warningly.

"That's her," she whispered, "over there under the light. Speak low, if you please, miss, and don't go for to refuse the poor dear a bed—don't, now."

I looked in the direction indicated, and felt glad I had not spoken. It was a comparatively young face which rested against the back of the chair, but so pale, so worn, so unutterably weary, that one wondered instinctively what blow fate had seen fit to deal this woman to so rob her of her girlhood. The pitiless glare of the electric light fell directly upon her, accentuating the purple shadows beneath her eyes and the hollows in her cheeks, while her listless pose suggested heartsickness as well as fatigue. One hand lay on the arm of her chair, and as I advanced toward her I noticed the gleam of her wedding ring.

"The stewardess tells me you have no stateroom," I said. "I am alone, and shall be glad to share mine with you."

The heavy lids lifted slowly, and I found myself looking into a pair of wistful dark eyes with an unanswered question in thim.

"Thank you," she said, in a sweet, low voice. "You are most kind. I know it is not pleasant to share one's room with a stranger, but I will come gladly, for I am very tired. My husband—"

She paused abruptly and a faint color tinged her cheeks as a man approached and bent over her with an unmistakable air of possession.

"It's no use, Juliet," he said; "I can't get you a stateroom at any price, and you are regularly done up, too! We must manage with one of these sofas."

"It is all right, dear," she replied gently. "This young lady is good enough to offer to share her room with me. My husband, Mr. Graham, Miss——"

I supplied the name and bowed to Mr. Graham, looking curiously at him as I listened to his effusive thanks.

The man evidently possessed the vitality his wife lacked. His every movement indicated that he was filled to the finger tips with vibrant, pulsing life, and one admired him with the admiration one involuntarily accords a perfect specimen of the animal kingdom, whether man or beast. Perhaps his lips were a trifle too full and red, and his teeth rather unpleasantly dazzling when they gleamed under his dark mustache; perhaps, also, there was something in his large black eyes now and then which might cause a woman to blush and turn aside if he looked too long at her; but his manner was very gentle as he bent over his wife, and he collected her wraps and helped her to rise with genuine solicitude.

The stewardess was waiting to show Mrs. Graham the room, and I decided to remain in the saloon until she had retired, so I sat down in a green plush chair and amused myself watching my fellow passengers and speculating as to their destinations. I had just determined that a fat old lady opposite was the mother of a large family and going to visit a married daughter, when the cabin door opened and Mr. Graham returned alone.

He raised his hat as he passed, hesitated a moment, then seated himself on the arm of an adjoining chair.

"We really owe you a debt of gratitude," he said. "Of course I can get along perfectly well anywhere, but Mrs. Graham is not strong. She has had a tiresome journey, and to-night seemed to be the last straw. I suppose you noticed how awfully done up she was."

"She certainly seemed very tired."

"She will be all right to-morrow, after a night's rest—thanks to you. We are going to spend the summer in Canada. I think the climate there will benefit her, it is so invigorating. And you? Are you also bound for Canada, and are you traveling alone?"

I replied somewhat curtly that I was with friends, for I had no desire to prolong the conversation. Mr. Graham, however, lingered with the manner of one who has something on his mind, but finds expression difficult. At last he rose and said good-night, after offering to look out for our baggage when he landed in the morning.

"And by the way," he remarked, carlessly, "don't be alarmed if my wife should talk a bit in her sleep. She does it now and then, especially if she is overtired. She is apt to dream, I think, and sometimes talks a lot of gibberish. I trust you may not be disturbed, but I thought I ought to warn you. Good-night again, and many thanks."

So Mrs. Graham talked in her sleep! I thought rather ruefully of my prospects for a peaceful night as I slowly walked the length of the cabin—for mine was an outside stateroom, and it was necessary to go on deck to reach it.

The moon shone brilliantly, a path of silver light falling across the water, which rippled and sparkled alluringly. I was so fascinated by the beauty of the scene that when I reached my door I did not enter at once, but leaned over the railing, watching the white foam that marked our course, and quite forgetful of the flight of time.

After a while two men approached and one of them fitted a key in the door next mine. As he stooped to examine the lock, the moonlight shone full upon his face, and I recognized our friend in blue serge with the strange aversion to chairs. I wondered if the person with him was an attendant, and hoped the partition wall was substantial. I was also conscious of a strong desire to waken Gabrielle and Elizabeth and seek shelter with them.

The Perfectly Poised Mind.

People who would attain exquisite mental poise must dive between the whitecaps and the waves on the surface of thought, down into the depths of their beings, where there is eternal calm which no mental tempest can disturb.

A perfectly poised mind must be in frequent communication with the divine. Dwelling upon human qualities will never bring that perfect mental balance, that divine serenity, which makes mere physical beauty unattractive in comparison.

There is a sweetness, a ripeness, a divine something about a serene mind which eludes analysis, but which we all feel. No wealth can compare with the benign, satisfying influence which radiates from an exquisitely poised personality.

Smoe of our best observatories are built upon mountain tops, so that the great lens which sweeps the heavens may not be obscured by the dust, the dirt, the mists floating in the atmosphere.

In order to shut out the din, the terrible noises which distract the mind; in order to shut out the thousand and one disturbing influences in our strenuous life, the things which warp and twist and distort us, it is necessary to rise into the higher realm of thought and feeling, where we can breathe a purer air, get in closer touch with the divine.—Success.

Devil-Tempted Young Men.

There is no one so devil-tempted today as the young custodian of the cash drawer. He is tempted because he assumes he is not paid enough; tempted because he cannot indulge himself as some who are better paid; tempted because he is vain of a good appearance; tempted because he wants to shine socially; tempted because he loves devotedly and cannot shower gifts from his thin pocketbook; tempted because he is a neophyte in forbidden mysteries; tempted, most of all, by the desire to emulate some other apparently successful young men who have made great "killings" on the race track or the stock exchange.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

15 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Burning, Painful Sores on Legs. Tortured Day and Night—Tried Many Remedies to No Avail —Cured by Cuticura.

"After an attack of rheumatism, running sores broke out on my husband's legs, from below the knees to the ankles. There are no words to tell all the discomforts and great suffering he had to endure night and day. He used every kind of remedy and three physicians treated him, one after the other, without any good results whatever. One day I ordered some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. He began to use them and in three weeks all the sores were died up. The burning fire stopped, and the pains became bearable. After three months he was quite well. I can prove this testimonial at any time. Mrs. V. V. Albert, Upper Frenchville, Me., July 21. 1907."

From Frying Pan to Fire.

Some years ago, when the late Judge John Henry McCarthy was a candidate for the bench, says the Hebrew Standard, in a district populated by both Hebrews and Irish, there was displayed in an East Broadway window a banner which read: "Vote for John Henry McCarthy—the friend of the Hebrew." An Irishman on his way to the polls espied the sign and grew indignant. He remarked, "Vote for 'the friend of the Hebrews?' I'll be hanged if I will. I'll vote for the other fellow." And he did, the "other fellow" being Henry M. Goldfogle.

A Cure.

The sinner walked along the rocky road, his bare feet torn and bleeding from bruises and wounds. He met a stranger.

"Friend," he exclaimed, "I have sinned and done wrong, I must patiently suffer the most extreme agony to save myself from eternal damnation. Can you tell me some supreme test of repentance?"

"Certainly," answered the other, with an air of experience. "Go to a boarding house and live there for a year."

A Difficult Task.

An old Irish laborer walked into the luxurious studio of a New York artist and asked for money to obtain a meal, as he was too weak to work.

The artist gave him a quarter and then, seeing possibilities for a sketch in the queer old fellow, said: "I'll give you a dollar if you'll let me paint you."

"Sure," said the man, "it's an easy way to make a dollar, but, but—I'm wonderin' how I'd get it off."

PUZZLE SOLVED.

Coffee at Bottom of Trouble.

It takes some people a long time to find out that coffee is hurting them.

But when once the fact is clear, most people try to keep away from the thing which is followed by ever increasing detriment to the heart, stomach and nerves.

"Until two years ago I was a heavy coffee drinker," writes an Ill. stockman, "and had been all my life. I am now 56 years old.

"About three years ago I began to have nervous spells and could not sleep nights, was bothered by indigestion, bloating, and gas on stomach affected my heart.

"I spent lots of money doctoring—one doctor told me I had chronic catarrh of the stomach; another that I had heart disease and was liable to die at any time. They all dieted me until I was nearly starved but I seemed to get worse instead of better.

"Having heard of the good Postum had done for nervous people, I discarded coffee altogether and began to use Postum regularly. I soon got better, and now, after nearly two years, I can truthfully say I am sound and well.

"I sleep well at night, do not have the nervous spells and am not bothered with indigestion or palpitation. I weigh 32 pounds more than when I began Postum, and am better every way than I ever was while drinking coffee. I can't say too much in praise of Postum, as I am sure it saved my life." "There's a Reason."

A HYBRID IN HARNESS.

Department of Agriculture Has Hopes of Making a New Beast of Burden in This Country.

By means of two male zebras, imported from Abyssinia as the gift of King Menelik, and which are now at the National Zoological park in Washington, the department of agriculture hopes to make in this country a new beast of burden—a cross between the zebra and the horse, says Country Life in America. Experiments in this direction by the French authorities at Paris have been very successful. The hybrid is smaller than the horse. It is an exceedingly tough and wiry animal and will be suited to the warmer sections of the United States. The history of the American mule is suggestive of the possibilities of the zebra. A century ago the mule was a very scarce animal in the United States. Washington had done much to direct attention to his merits and had loaned the services of a large Spanish jack, presented to him by the king of Spain. But the mule did not become popular until well into the century. At our last census, however, we had nearly 3,000,000 mules, with a taxable value of $250,000. The possibilities from the two zebras are immense—they may combine with the donkey and back into the horse and thus introduce entirely new strains.

BUILDING FIRE IN OPEN.

Something Worth Remembering by Those Who Delight in the Pleasures of the Camp.

How to contrive a satisfactory fire in the open, say, at a picnic, is not known to everyone. The best way is to make a "tramp's" log-fire, the logs being placed—as this diagram plan indicates—with their ends over lapping in the center, which arrangement insures a good draught of air through the fire. The dotted portion of the diagram indicates the heap of leaves, twigs, etc., that is to be burned. As their ends are consumed the logs are pushed further into the fire.

Last Year's Flower Novelty.

One of the flower novelties of last year which was successfully grown by many experts is a tobacco plant which produces scarlet flowers, nicotiana Sanderae. It is named for its producer, an expert of England. The plant was originated by crossing two South American tobacco plants, one of which had white and the other red flowers. The result was a flower varying from a light pink to the deepest red.

Delusions About Police.

There is one class of persons who believe that the policeman of London is a kind of knight-errant. They believe that on the vigil of his appointment he watches his helmet, truncheon and large boots in some dim and sacred chapel, and that he would wear his lady's colors on his helmet if the rules of the service permitted it. It is one of the innumerable delusions of mere wealth.—Illustrated London News.

CHILD SAVING INSTITUTE.

Movement for Adequate Buildings for Conducting the Work.

This statement is made to the general public for the information of those who may be in a position to assist in meeting the present necessities of this organization. The home is without adequate buildings and facilities to take care of the homeless and dependant children in positions of distress, needing shelter and temporary care.

For several years past the present buildings have been inadequate to meet the demands. The old buildings can only accommodate comfortably about 400. The number appealing for admission has been so large, hundreds have been refused admission who need temporary assistance. In spite of the small quarters the Institute has sheltered and fed and provided for 2,371 children the past 11 years. During the past 12 months 341 homeless and dependant little ones have been cared for and 40 of these are on hand today.

Cottages have been rented for two or three years past in the neighborhood of the Institute in order to accommodate children and nurses and helpers and on account of having these additional rooms near by the Institute could shelter more children. The average number on hand daily during the past summer has been from 50 to 60. The old buildings are in such a dilapidated condition that extensive repairs are absolutely necessary unless the home can enter at once upon the work of constructing new buildings.

The Board of Trustees has been planning a new building for about four years, but on account of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. the Auditorium, the various hospitals of the city and other building enterprises the matter has been postponed from time to time until the present. Now the managers of this Institute feel that the time has come to launch the enterprise. They are assured by the leading business men of Omaha and by friends in the country districts that the Child Saving Institute has the right-of-way, an open field and the sympathy and approval of the general public in the enterprise to construct a suitable building for these dependent little ones.

The Trustees look to the country district for a large amount of help, to bankers, merchants, professional men and the farmers because this institute belongs to the whole district for hundreds of miles in every direction from Omaha. A few years ago a message came from Sidney that the father of a large family had broken in health and that he was unable to do anything for his wife and eight children and that the county had assumed the burden of his case for the rest of his life. Almost immediately following this information came the word that the poor mother of the children, who had been washing to support them and struggled against poverty, had suddenly collapsed and died leaving a baby and seven little brothers and sisters. This appeal from the citizens was responded to and a representative of the Institute sent by the next train to bring in the eight little children and provide homes for adoption for all of them.

During the past summer a message came from Louisville to come for two little girls, left absolutely homeless because their mother had died and the father was an invalid and there were no relatives or friends to take care of the children.

Lsss than a month ago three little children were received from Belgrade, Neb., whose father was dead and whose mother was sick, with the hope of living not more than four to six weeks longer. There were no friends or relatives to care for the little ones and they were sent to the Institute.

Telephone messages have often been received from Blair, Tekamah and other towns in Nebraska and from towns across the river in western Iowa to come at once to receive little children thrown out homeless and destitute and such appeals have always been aswered.

It is the policy of the Institute to find good Christian homes for children as soon as possible and it is usually found that two or three months time is required in which to carefully investigate homes by personal visits and to make arrangements for placing the children. The matter of final adoption is carefully looked after and watchful care exercised over the little ones until they grow up.

Another department of the work of the Institute is to rescue children from vile and immoral surroundings and to prosecute cases in the courts when necessary to protect those who need it and in cases where the parents show themselves absolutely unworthy of keeping their children they are sometimes taken from them by legal proceedings and placed in good homes.

It is also the policy of the Institute to assist parents to keep their children, believing in all cases where this can be done parents and children should be kept together. Temporary assistance is therefore often given in the care of little children to help the mother tide over a hard place until she can reach a position of self-support. Efforts are made to re-establish broken homes and to assist in the reconciliation of husband and wife by holding out the encouragement that they can have their children a little later and that they ought to live for their children, and the efforts of the workers have been crowned with success in scores of cases.

Now the Institute has become so well known throughout the community and the volume of the work has so increased that it is impossible to meet the demands without larger buildings and suitable buildings for the work. A building of this kind will cost about $50,000 and to secure the proper grounds and to furnish and equip the building will cost nearly $25,000 more, making an outlay of $75,000 required.

The managers of the Institute are the following well known business men: George F. Bidwell, president; Guy C. Barton, vice-president; C. W. Lyman, treasurer; K. C. Barton, secretary; Rome Miller, chairman of executive board; H. J. Penfold, W. S. Wright and Arthur C. Smith.

Necessaries of a Millionaire.

What is a million sterling today? Fifty years ago a millionaire was an object of universal curiosity. But in order to "startle" people today one needs a few country and town houses and estates, stables full of horses, garages full of motors, a luxurious yacht and an aeroplane or two.—Paris Gaulois.

Sir Walter Hilyer has been appointed expert adviser to the Chinese government. Sir Walter was born in China of English parents and is a learned linguist. Li Hung Chang once said that he spoke and wrote Chinese as well as the most highly educated mandarin.

Work In Minute Fractions.

The human heat sense cannot realize a difference of temperature beyond one-fifth of a degre; but the barometer, an instrument 200,000 times as sensitive as the skin, notes a difference of a millionth of a degree. A galvanometer flexes its finger at a current generated by simply deforming a drop of mercury so as to press it out of a spherical shape into that of an egg.

A Novel Compliment.

His wig blew off, and was captured and returned by a nice young lady to whom the gentleman acknowledged his obligation with: "A thousand thanks, my dear. You are by far the most successful hair restorer I ever tried."

No Expense to Be Spared.

"When my uncle comes to town," said the young man, firmly, "he shall be properly entertained. He shall never say that I did not do him well. He shall have everything that his money will buy."

Anti-Fat Diet.

Fresh fish boiled or broiled chicken, game, lamb or mutton, lean beef and veal (all sparingly), eggs poached on toast or briled, lettuce, spinach, asparagus, celery, waterchess, onions, radishes, white cabbage, olives, ripe fruits of the acid varieties one glass of pure water or one cup of coffee or tea without cream, milk or sugar, sipped slowly after meals.

Hard to Do.

One of the hardest things for a husband to do is to arrange it so that the nights he comes home late to supper his wife is also late in getting it ready. If this were possible, a great deal of unpleasant conversation would be spared.—Detroit Free Press.

What Country Dwellers Need.

A third of our population is urban; the rest is more or less rural. What the country dwellers need to make them happy are religion, education and material prosperity. The farms cannot employ as many laborers per acre as they did before the coming of agricultural machinery. Therefore they must either raise fewer children or export some of their population to the cities.—Harper's Weekly.

Long Arm of Enterprise.

There will soon be not an inch of land unexploited from the poles to the equator, but the world will, nevertheless, remain the wide world as of yore for merchants and capitalists, who will be the only possible colonists in the future.

Juvenile Ignorance.

"You ought to know better, Johnny," said Mrs. Lapsling, reprovingly, "than ask me what the difference is between courage and bravery. They are pusillanimous terms and mean the same thing."

GERMANY AMAZED

KAISER'S UTTERANCES NOT HELD OF MUCH WEIGHT.

VON BUELOW CASE PUZZLES

Kaiser Condones Prince Von Buelow but Country Is not Satisfied.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—Chancellor von Buelow's position appears to be almost untenable. Far and wide throughout the empire the newpapers of all parties discuss with varying degrees of mockery, amazement and regret the government's explanation of how what purported to be enormously important utterances of the emperor, affecting great powers, passed through the hands of the chancellor and a long line of foreign office officials without seemingly having been considered by any of them or read by most of those responsible for the delicate foreign relations. The emperor fully condones Price von Buelow's part in the affair, but the chancellor's authority and prestige with the country have been so shaken that he may again ask the emperor to relieve him. The radical, liberal and socialist journals utilize the event to urge upon the country a demand for ministry responsible to the parliament and the people instead of the continuance of ministerial responsibility to the crown alone. The whole subject is likely to come up for debate in the reichstag, which will reassemble on Wednesday.

UNIFORM BILL OF LADING.

Commerce Commission Measure Has Gone Into Effect.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—The new uniform bill of lading, approved by the interstate commerce commission, went into effect on forty-one railroads in the official classification territory yesterday. Hereafter every shipment of freight in the territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio must be made upon the basis of the form unless a shipper objecting to the terms agrees to pay 10 per cent more than the regular freight rates. It was customary to charge 20 per cent extra on shipment not under the old bill of lading. The new form is believed to be universally acceptable. It has a distinctive color, yellow, adopted at the suggestion of the American Bankers' association for all "order" bills of lading which are negotiable and enable a shipper to obtain an advance payment through a banker.

ARMS FOR CHINESE BANDITS.

Smuggling Goes On by Steamships From Vancover.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 2.—According to a discovery made on board the steamer Empress of Japan at Hongkong, arms and ammunition are being regularly smuggled from Vancouver to aid Chinese bandits and pirates on the western side of the Pacific. On the last visit of the steamer to that port a number of trunks with false bottoms were found, in each of which were several hundred rounds of ammunition. In another instance many packaes labeled "soap" were found. In some of these there was nothing but ammunition, while in other cases real soap lined the sides and bottom of the boxes and the ammunition was packed neatly in the center. The packages were all booked to North Chinese villages.

RUSSIA TO BLOCK THE GAME.

May Interfere With Austria's Balkan Plans.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 2.—Interest in the Balkan situation is centered in the positive statement of several parliamentary leaders that Russia has determined to drop the idea of the proposed international congress and will refuse to recognize the annexation by Austria-Hungary of Bosnia and Herzegovina. This information, although purporting to be from official sources, is not entirely exact. The foreign office states that the negotiations between Russia and Austria-Hungary and other powers are still in progress and considers that an acceptabe formula for submission to the congress may ultimately be found.

TRIED BURNING AT STAKE.

Locust Mountain Boys Begin to Roast Comrades.

Shenandoah, Pa., Nov. 2.—As a result of reading dime novels and visiting cheap shows, a number of boys held a wild west show on Locust mountain, and in the height of their enthusiasm seized Joseph Krumpilis and Harry Rudinski and carried them to a tree. There they tied them fast, got a quantity of dry leaves and brush and piled them about the helpless victims and set them afire to "burn them at the stake," in true wild west style.

BUSINESS MANAGER FOR CHURCH

Cleveland Institution Plans to Try a New System.

The Epworth Memorial Methodist church in Cleveland has decided to try a new system of church management. A business manager has been appointed who will give his entire time and attention to the finances of the church. As executive secretary he will collect the benevolences, dues of members, subscriptions, etc., and pay all expenses. He will serve as secretary of the standing committees of the church and keep a record of their business for transmission to the official board. This, it is expected, will leave the pastor free to give attention to the larger plans of the work and to his pulpit and pastoral duties. Epworth Memorial has the largest membership of all the Protestant churches in the city. It has an extensive charity work and handles over $35,000 in contributions every year. Dr. G. K. Morris, district superintendent, strongly commends the innovation. "To my mind," he says, "it is the ideal of church government. I expect to see the plan adopted in many other cities."

The Doctor's Fee.

The average man will give a lawyer $300 to $500, together with a lifetime's praise, to keep him out of the penitentiary for from two to ten years, and at the same time he will raise a phosphorescent glow and a kick that can be heard around the world if a doctor charges him $50 to $100 to keep him out of hell for a lifetime. We are the only people under God's ethereal tent to-day who keep open shop 24 hours each day and 365 days in each year. We are also the only laborers to keep on working for people who do not pay. I can carry my part of charity with as good a grace as most men. I can go through rain, snow or mud and do my best, provided the case is one of worthy need, but to reward continually downright rascality, willful drunkenness and wanton laziness is getting out of my line.—Texas State Journal of Medicine.

Savagery in Civilization.

It is no time to say that man cannot, in civilized society, be guilty of cannabilism. I tell you there are more cannibals in New York than in the isles of the Pacific; and if to-day you were suddenly to take away the support that comes from eating men, there would be thousands and thousands of empty maws to-morrow in that city.—Henry Ward Beecher.

MRS. ASTOR IS DEAD

AMERICAN SOCIETY LEADER PASSES AWAY.

LONG A SOCIAL LIGHT

New York Woman Who Was Known as First Among Country's Aristocrats Taken by Death—Heart Trouble Cause.

New York.—Mrs. William Astor, who for 30 years had been regarded as the social leader of New York, died Friday night of heart disease at her home on Fifth avenue.

For nearly four weeks Mrs. Astor, who was 82 years old, had been in a critical condition owing to the return of a heart affection that had given her trouble for years.

There is not a name in the social register that is so well known from one end of the land to the other as that of Mrs. Astor. Despite her advancing years, Mrs. Astor continued to hold her social domination up to a year ago, when failing health compelled her to retire into comparative seclusion.

In Ill Health a Year.

It was in the summer of 1907 that Mrs. Astor's friends learned of her ill health. While she was abroad last year, her son, Col. John Jacob Astor, made the announcement that Beechwood, the summer home of Mrs. Astor at Newport, would not be opened and this led to the discovery that Mrs. Astor was in poor health. Word came later from Mrs. Astor, while she was in Paris, saying that she would open her Newport villa and that she would make the season there one of the gayest in years.

This promise was not fulfilled, however, for when Mrs. Astor returned from abroad she broke down in Boston and had to return to New York. She had remained at her home ever since.

Society Functions in History.

The society functions given and presided over by Mrs. Astor have gone down into history as the most brilliant on record. It is said that the ballroom in the mansion on Fifth avenue would accommodate 1,000 people. It was Mrs. Astor who established the famous "400," her visiting list being confined to that number of names. In 1905, however, Mrs. Astor was said to have "let down the bars," when she invited 1,200 persons to one of the most memorable social events ever given in New York. Mrs. Astor received her guests at these gatherings seated in a high-backed chair beneath a portrait of herself, painted by Carolus Duran.

Spouse Not Tall Socially.

The Astor jewels were worn by Mrs. Astor on these occasions It is said the Astor emeralds are the finest in the world.

William Astor, who died in Paris in 1892, took little part in the social activities his wife enjoyed. Mrs. Astor, before marriage, was Miss Caroline Schermerhorn, a daughter of Abraham Schermerhorn, a well-to-do merchant. She was married to William Astor on September 23, 1853. John Jacob Astor was their only son. There were four daughters, two of them, Mrs. Ogilvie Haig and Mrs. Orme Wilson, are now living. The eldest daughter, Miss Emily Astor, who married J. J. Van Alen, died some years ago.

Montgomery Again Convicted.

Pittsburg, Pa. — William Montgomery, cashier of the Allegheny National bank until the discovery of a shortage in its funds of over $1,250,000 early last summer necessitated closing the institution, was for the second time this week found guilty Wednesday of embezzlement and abstraction of funds, his peculations in the two cases amounting to $613,000. This case involved the abstraction of $144,000 worth of the bank bonds, and as in the first case, Montgomery offered no testimony in defense.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials

How He Hunted Bear.

A New York Irishman was visiting a friend in the Adirondacks and was taken with a desire to go hunting. Borrowing a gun from his friend he set off alone in search of game. Some time after his host heard a distant report of a gun. A few minutes later he heard some one shouting. From a window he spied, in the distance, his friend, hot-footing it for home, and behind him a bear, gaining at every step. Nearly spent, the pursued reached the door just in time to cry out:

"Quick, Mike! Quick! Open the door! I'm bringing him home alcive!"

"Amusement?" said the other.

"Oh, yes," went on the bride. "I've been through my husband's desk, and I've read all his old love letters. I found several very affectionate letters from you, and I enjoyed reading them, really, ever so much."

"I'm so glad you enjoyed them," purred the other. "But do come and see me very soon. Here is my card. I have the answers to all those letters and you might like to read them as well. The Beilharz Entertainers.

Within the last few years these versatile artists have made for themselves an enviable repu tation. They have made a careful study of the art of entertaining and the result is an ideal program well balanced artists and complete. Whether it is in impersonations, music novelties, vocal duets or instrumental or voc l solos, the same artistic finish is niticeable and the result is an entertainment that can hardly fail to meet the popular demand as well as to satisfy the most critical.

Jane Hudson Beilharz received her musical education in Chicago under the direction of Professor Root. Her rich contralto voice is splendidly trained and has that sympathetic quality that at once appeals to her hearers. Her cordial reception wherever she has appeared demonstrates her strength as a musician and entertainer Her three years' experience with Mr. Beilharz in platform work and her natural ability and determination to success have won her a place among the best of lady entertainers.

Noah Beilharz has given more than one thousand entertainments in the past five years and the increasing demand for return engagements is the verdict of the people as to his success. He is a graduate of King's School of Elocution and Dramatic Arts in Pittsburg from which place he bears three gold contest medals. He uses make up in his character delineations, making his changes in view of the audience and avoiding any pause in his program. He is alike clever in his delineations, monologues or musical sketches. He is the author of many of his most successful productions and in these he shows an artistic appreciation of the lights and shades of everyday life.

Several years of successful platform work in liceum courses and at chautauquas have demonstrated the versatility and merit of this combination. We commend them to our patrons. They will be at the Klemme Opera House on Monday evening Nov. 23.

IDEAS FOR THE HOSTESS.

Some Novel and Simple Ways to Entertain Guests.

A Handkerchief Shower.

This affair for a prospective bride was arranged in a very clever manner. Twelve intimate friends were invited to luncheon with the request to bring the gift "mouchoir" rolled up into the smallest package possible. Before going to the dining-room the hostess took all the packages and disapepared. When luncheon was announced, with one voice the guests exclaimed "how pretty." Suspended from the chandalier there was an inverted Japanese umbrella, from each rib there was a smaller umbrella and from this hung by ribbons there was a gilded watering can the sprinkler of which had 12 holes with baby ribbons of different colors coming out. At the end of each ribbon there was a tightly rolled package. The effect was lovely. The place cards were miniature "Jap" parasols with the cards tied to the handles. The candle shades were ornamented with these same tiny parasols and small lanetrns filled with candied puffed rice were at each place. The mint sherbert, which was the dessert, had smilax twined around the tall glass with another little umbrella in the top of the glass.

ATTEMPT TO KILL

Y. M. C. A. SECRETARY SAVES ENGLISHMAN'S LIFE.

THE GOVENOR OF BENGAL

It Was the Third Attempt to Assassinate Sir Andrew Fraser in Calcutta.

Calcutta, Nov. 9.—A daring attempt was made Saturday night by a Bengali to assassinate Sir Andrew Henderson Leith Fraser, the lieutenant governor of Bengal. Like three other attempts that have been made to take the life of the lieutenant-governor this latest attack upon him proved unsuccessful. The lieutenant-governor accompanied by the Maharajah of Burdwan, an important division of Bengal and Secretary Barber of the Young Men's Christian association attended the lecture given by Professor E. D. Burton, of Chicago university at the town hall, which was filled to overflowing with an audience that included many prominent residents .Just as the lieutenant-governor stepped up in the aisle, a young man who afterwards gave the name of Nhowdbury, thrust a revolver within a few inches of Sir Andrew's body and pulled the trigger twice, but the cartridges missed fire and Mr. Barber, who is an American, flung himself upon the Bengali. The latter struck savagely at the secretary with his revolver and wounded him in the head but was eventually overpowered.

GET RICH QUICK SCHEME.

New York Postal Official Uncover Operations.

New York, Nov. 9.—That they have uncovered a get-rich-quick swindle rivaling in magnitude that of the Storey-Coleton company of Pennsylvania is the belief given expression by postal authorities here following a raid late today upon the offices of George W. Emanuel & Co., private bankers. Emanuel & Co., are accused of having used the mails to defraud by seeking to sell stock of a Mexican gold mine, which their literature is said to have represented as yielding a yearly return of 29 per cent to the investors, fully guaranteed by an international banking house. According to the postal authorities 50,000 or more investors have remitted money to Emanuel & Co., to the amount of at least $500,000.

HOLLAND REVOKES TREATY.

Castro's Insolence Ends in Breaking of Pact.

Willemstad, Nov. 9.—The treaty between Holland and Venezuela of 1894 has beenz revoked by Holland in accordance with the ultimatum delivered by second note to the effect that unless President Castro's decree of May 14 was revoked by Nov. 1, Holland would no longer consider the protocol of 1894 to be in force. The Curacao government has received an order to declare the port of Curacao free for the import and export of weapons and ammunition and it is also announced that the government will in no way interfere with revolutionary movements.

Again Philippine "Oppression."

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Prof. Frederick Starr of the University of Chicago, in a public address here denounced the continued occupation of the Philippine islands by the United States and said the Filipinos would probably never adopt the English language. Professor Starr further declared that the American teachers being sent to the islands were inferior and that all the improvements being made there were paid for by the Filipinos who were heavily taxed.

Protestant Episcopals Meet.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 9.—Prelates, priests and prominent laymen of the Protestant Episcopal church from eight states of the middle west met here yesterday for the annual conference of the sixth missionary department, comprising the dioceses of the states of Colorado, Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Wyoming, North and South Dakota. The council opens today with an imposing festival service at Gethsemane cathedral.

Taft's Vacation Spoiled.

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 9.—Mr. Taft will not be able to enjoy his anticipated vacation undisturbed. He was reminded that almost a year ago he promised to speak before the Prison Martyrs' Monument association in Brooklyn. The date of the speech is next Saturday. Mr. Taft will leave his camp Friday night and will return to his cottage immediately after he fulfills his promise.

SYNOPSIS.

Three girls—Elizabeth, Gabrielle and Elise—started for Canada to spend the summer there. On board steamer they were frightened by an apparently demented stranger, who finding a bag belonging to one of them, took enjoyment in scrutinizing a photo of the trio. Elise shared her stateroom with a Mrs. Graham, also bound for Canada.

CHAPTER I.—Continued.

The light was burning in my stateroom when at last I forced myself to enter it, and Mrs. Graham lay asleep in the lower berth, her lips slightly parted and her face resting upon her hand. Nature had meant to be kind to this woman, and had been liberal indeed with her gifts. The lashes which swept the pale cheek were dark and curling, like the luxuriant hair carelessly pushed aside on the pillow, while the face itself, though thin and haggard, had evidently once been a perfect oval, with a singular purity of outline and innocence of expression.

As noiselessly as possible, I made my preparations for the night and climbed into my berth, turning off the electric light with a sense of relief that the switch was within easy reach of my hand.

I lay staring into the darkness, wide awake and alert to every sound. A murmur of voices came from the next room, interspersed with occasional subdued laughter, and at last I heard a window opened, and some one apparently leaned out with an ejaculation of relief.

"Jove, what a night! And to think of wasting it in a cell like this! Blake, you old sinner, have you no soul for the beautiful? Look at the light on the water."

The reply was inaudible. Evidently Blake had gone sensibly to bed, but the voice continued undaunted:

"I say, wouldn't it be jolly to dive off the railing and swim a mile or so? I declare, I've half a mind to do it!"

I caught my breath apprehensively. Suppose he should jump? A match was now scratched, and the odor of a cigarette floated through my slatted blind.

"Maybe you think you're on an ordinary steamer, Blake, but it's nothing of the kind. It is a royal barge belonging to the gods, and it's carrying the Three Graces to attend Apollo—I'm Apollo, you understand, and Venus isn't in it this trip. I think—of course I'm not yet sure—but I think Thalia is the chosen one."

The berth creaked plaintively, and a second match was struck. Apparently Blake considered it wiser to join his patient at the window.

"Don't be an ass," he said, with a slow drawl, but his companion merely whistled a few bars of an old song.

"'How happy could I be with either, were t'other dear charmer away,' eh, Blake?" he laughed. "That's the way with this world—always too much or too little."

"Quite enough for you, I think."

"Not a bit of it. The thing I want most I lack, but some time, some how, I'm going to get it."

Silence for a few moments, then he resumed more gravely:

"Of course it's no end jolly to have you with me, Blake, but it is a queer business for you to take up, and I don't altogether like it. You were built for better things."

"It is interesting work, and said to require special fitness."

"No doubt. Well, 'it's an ill wind,' you know, and, since it blew you my way, I've no kick coming. But, old chap, there is no use in publishing what you are doing, and for both our sakes it is better you should pass simply as my guest."

"As you please, Bennett. Now, for heaven's sake, come to bed."

I don't know whether I had actually been asleep, or whether I was merely in that delightful state of half-consciousness which precedes profound slumber, but suddenly I started up broad awake, with the echo of a cry ringing in my ears. Was I dreaming? I wondered, for I heard nothing but the sound of the waves against the boat.

Then it came again, from just beneath me, a sobbing, frightened cry, infinitely distressing to hear, and instinctively I turned on the light and jumped to the floor.

Mrs. Graham sat upright in her berth, her dark eyes looking into space, and her hands tightly clasped.

"Not again, Harry," she moaned; "not again—so soon."

I took her hands in mine and spoke to her, calling her by name several times, and gradually the blank look in her eyes was replaced by utter bewilderment as she began to realize her surroundings.

"What is it?" she said. "What have I been doing?"

"You were dreaming," I suggested. "A bad dream, perhaps."

"A bad dream," she repeated; "yes, that's it—a bad dream. And only a dream, thank God!"

"But I've wakened you," she continued contritely, "and of course you are tired, too. I'm so sorry. Please go to sleep again, and I will try not to disturb you. I am all right, indeed."

I put out the light and got back into my berth and lay there thinking about my companion and more than half expecting her to cry out again. Evidently she did not at once go to sleep, for I heard her sigh softly now and then, and once she whispered brokenly: "Only a dream, thank God, only a dream!"

CHAPTER II.

When I wakened the next morning I was alone, and should have been inclined to believe the preceding night a dream were it not for the penciled words on a scrap of paper pinned to my counterpane, that thanked me for sharing my room and expressed the hope that we might meet again in the future.

It was raining when we landed, and upon reaching our hotel, after two hours' run by train and a half hour spent in crossing troubled waters in an odious little steamer, we were not in a condition to be enthusiastic about our new quarters.

Elibabeth's booklet had said:

This well appointed house combines the comforts of home with the conveniences of the best hotels. The cozy bedrooms, spacious verandas, abundant, carefully prepared food, and cheerful, willing service appeal at once to the jaded traveler, offering all essential bodily comforts and refreshment; while nature's never ending panorama stretching away into space affords vistas pleasing to the eye, and the society of other cultured guests provides the mental stimulus so necessary for true recreation.

Even now, however, I hesitate to recall our first week in this ideal retreat, when it rained without ceasing and the beauties of nature were left to the imagination, while the house itself proved a delusion and a snare.

Elizabeth got along best, for she immediately inspected her wardrobe and ripped up two skirts and a shirt waist preparatory to making them over with circles of lace insertion let in by hand; her ardor was a little dampened when she discovered she had no lace and nowhere to buy it, but she rallied bravely and resorted to fagoting instead, with satisfactory results.

Gabrielle and I were not so fortunate, for experience had taught us not to attempt to improve on our rai ment, and after we had written to everybody we knew and told them what a delightful summer we anticipated, we had reached the end of our resources, and I only stared absently out of the window, while Gabreille took to reviewing her past life, which is proof positive that she is very blue indeed.

"What use have I been in the world?" she demanded, lying face downward on her bed. "I do nothing but eat and sleep and enjoy myself, year after year."

"You are lots of use to me," interrupted Elizabeth cheerfully. "Would you cut these sleeves elbow length?"

"No, I wouldn't; I don't like them."

"Well, I do;" and Elizabeth clashed her scissors vigorously (elbow sleeves being a point upon which they differed emphatically), while Gabrielle pulled a pillow under her head and continued solemnly:

"I have quite decided that next winter shall be different. When we go back to Washington I intend to read something improving every day, and to spend money I generally waste on theaters in flowers for the Children's hospital; and I will read to the blind, and take them up and down to the congressional library to those entertainments, you know."

We exchanged smiles over her unconscious head, for the blind had often before been promised the pleasure of her society without reaping any actual benefit therefrom, and reference to them always indicated that her spirits had reached the zero point.

"Let us go out," I suggested, feeling that something must be done to cause a diversion; "even if we get wet, it will be better than staying here."

So we donned our rain coats and walked through the little village, with its modest frame dwellings and occasional pretentious hotel, up a hill and straight out on a bluff overlooking the sea. There, isolated and alone, was a vacant cottage with a covered veranda.

I shall never forget our first sight of the ocean—all gray like the enveloping fog, except where the white-crested waves rolled highest, with wonderful green shadows and opalescent lights. As we looked, the mist lifted, the sun came out, and we saw the vast Atlantic stretching away into space, restless, awesome, and irresistibly alluring, with its vague suggestion of hidden marvels just beyond the horizon.

Elizabeth beckoned from the turn of the veranda, which ran quite about the house, and we joined her, speechless with admiration. Evidently the island ended here in a sharp point, for while on one hand was the ocean, on the other was water also, but closely dotted with little green islands, gay with flowers and comfortable-looking houses. Just beyond was the strip of land we knew to be the border of the United States.

High above, upon the bluff, stood the little cottage, commanding an unobstructed view on every side. There was an air of coziness about it, deserted though it was, which made us homesick in spite of ourselves. It was built of shingle, now beautifully gray and weather-beaten, ing latticed windows gables, with an ou rough stone. Anyth the clapboard house could not be imagin am Howard Taft of Ohio, ican, has been elected twenty-h president of the United

, and James Schoolcraft Sher-of New York has been chosen President. This is the outcome e of the most remarkable po-campaigns in the history of public.

William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska, the Democratic candidate, went down in the third defeat of his life's ambition to occupy the White House.

Among the more significant results were the re-election to congress of Speaker Cannon and Chairman Sereno E. Payne of the house committee on ways and means, and the re-election for a third term of Gov. John Johnson Democrat, in Minnesota.

One of the results surpassing the most sanguine hopes of most Republicans was Mr. Taft's carrying the greater city of New York by a plurality which approached 10,000. Furthermore, his plurality in New York state will be approximately 189,334, exceeding by nearly 14,000 Roosevelt's big plurality of 1904.

Only second in point of general interest was the victory of Gov. Charles E. Hughes, who was re-elected by a plurality estimated as well above 75,000 over the vote cast for his Democratic opponent, Lieut. Gov. Chanler. While Greater New York gave a plurality for Taft, it gave Chanler a margin of 56,843.

With 31 United States senators to be elected by legislatures chosen now or earlier in the fall. The Republicans will retain their control of both houses of congress.

Mr. Taft carried practically every so-called doubtful state except Nebraska, where Mr. Bryan was victorious. Mr. Bryan carried Nevada in addition to the solid south, excepting Missouri.

Republican Pluralities Reduced.

Some of the figures relating to the Republican slump in certain states regarded as certainly Republican, are little short of amazing. Pennsylvania's immense plurality of over 500,000 four years ago nas been cut in two. Illinois, which gave Roosevelt 305,000 in 1904, has gone for Taft by about 170,000. The highest claim of the Republicans for Indiana is 15,000 as against a plurality of 93,000 for Roosevelt.

RESULTS ON STATE TICKETS.

Gov. Hughes Re-elected in New York and Deneen in Illinois.

Charles E. Hughes triumphed over his foes and was re-elected governor of New York by a plurality of about 76,000. This he accomplished by cutting down the expected Democratic plurality below the Bronx.

Deneen Wins in Illinois.

Gov. Deneen has been re-elected in Illinois by a plurality of from 20,000 to 30,000 while Judge Taft carried the state by more than 200,000.

Incomplote returns indicate that Taft has carried Iowa by a plurality now placed at 57,000. This is a tremendous falling off from the Roosevelt plurality of 158,000 of four years ago, but it represents only a slight falling off from the normal plurality. The entire Republican state ticket is elected, probably by about the same plurality.

Harris Beaten in Ohio.

Though Taft carried Ohio by about 50,000, Harris, Republican candidate for governor, was defeated by Harmon (Dem.), by probably 20,000 plurality.

The Republican national and state tickets were victorious in Wisconsin by a plurality estimated at 75,000. The congressional delegation probably will remain about the same as two years ago, nine Republicans and two Democrats. The legislature, which will elect a United States senator to succeed Isaac Stephenson, will be overwhelmingly Republican, the returns indicating the election of 73 Republicans, 21 Democrats and six Social Democrats in the assembly, and 27 Republicans, four Democrats and two Social Democrats in the senate.

Incomplete returns indicate Gov. Johnson's re-election as governor of Minnesota by a majority of 10,000 to 15,000. Returns so far received indicate that Taft's plurality will be between 80,000 and 100,000.

Unofficial returns from 114 of the 115 counties in Missouri, 86 of the counties being complete, give Bryan 289,698; Taft, 290,177; Taft's plurality, 479. For Gov. Hadley, Republican, 301,757; Cowherd, Democrat, 286,604; Hadley's plurality, 15,153.

It will require the official count to determine whether the rest of the state ticket was carried to victory by the vote for Mr. Hadley.

For the first time since Thomas A. Hendricks was elected governor on the Democratic state ticket and U. S. Grant received the electoral vote of the state for the Republican national ticket, Indiana has given a plurality to the Republican candidate for president and elected the Democratic candidate for governor, Thomas R. Marshall being the winner.

According to the latest estimate Mr. Taft received a plurality of about 15,000 and Mr. Marshall was victorious over James E. Watson, Republican candidate, by about 8,000.

The latest returns indicate that Taft carried Maryland by about 300 plurality, but that the state's electoral vote would be split.

CONTROL HOUSE AND SENATE.

Republicans Have a Good Majority in Both Houses.

Latest election returns indicate that the house of representatives is still heavily Republican, with a majority on division of 41. The Republican membership in the Sixty-first congress is 218 while the Democrats show only 173. The membership of the house is 391, and the majority necessary for control is 196.

Speaker Cannon was re-elected by a majority of from 6,000 to 10,000. Congressmen Hull, Dalzell, Payne and other leaders of national importance who had hard fights were all successful.

The districts on which the Democrats relied to increase their present strength have, in most instances, returned Republicans.

Practically No Change in Senate.

The senate will show practically no change in political complexion, the Republicans retaining a large majority. The membership of the senate is 92, the hold-over members number 61 (43 Republicans and 18 Democrats).

CONGRESSIONAL RESULTS

The congressional returns indicate that the Sixty-first congress will have Republican majorities in both branches. According to the latest reports the various states have elected congressmen as follows:

The election of 15 Republicans and 15 Democrats, as seems probable from the returns giving the make-up of the various legislatures which elect senators, would show the strength of the two leading parties in the senate to be: Republicans, 58; Democrats, 33; doubtful, 1.

One of the surprises of the election was the defeat in Iowa of Congressman Hepburn, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee.

Chairman Hitchcock's Statement.

Chairman Frank H. Hitchcock of the Republican national committee made the following statement:

"The returns speak for themselves. There seem to be no longer any doubtful states. The electoral vote will show that my estimate was correct. It looks now, I think, as if I must have underestimated it. The returns have exceeded my expectations.

"The plurality in Indiana will be less than I expected. That in Illinois is far more than anticipated. And so it goes: where one state has not quite come up to the figures I had expected some other state has gone far beyond. The latest returns from Maryland indicate that we have carried that state by about 8,000 to 10,000 and that is more than I believed it would give.

PERFECT HEALTH.

After Years of Backache, Dizziness and Kidney Disorders.

Mrs. R. C. Richmond, of Northwood, Iowa, says: "For years I was a martyr to kidney trouble, backache, dizzy spells, headaches and a terrible bearing-down pain. I used one remedy after another without benefit. Finally I used a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and the backache ceased. Encouraged, I kept on, and by the time I had used three boxes not a sign of the trouble remained. My health is perfect."

SEEMED A TRIFLE PERSONAL.

Clergyman's Particular Reason for Omitting the Fifth Verse.

A clergyman in an interior town married a woman from whom he received a dowry of $10,000 and a prospect of more. Shortly afterwards, while occupying the pulpit, he gave out a hymn, read the first verse and proceeded to read the fifth, commencing:

"Forever let my grateful heart," then he hesitated and exclaimed: "The choir will omit the fifth verse." Some of the congregation read the verse for themselves and smiled as they read:

Forever let my grateful heart
His boundless grace adore,
Which gives ten thousand blessings now
And bids me hope for more.

A Linguist.

The charm of Mrs. Ruth McEnery Stuart's negro dialect stories was greatly enhanced when she read them herself, as she used frequently to do in the early days of her fame, for charity and church entertainments. Her imitation of the negro dialect was excellent, and her small son, who was very fond of her accomplishment in this line, frequently boasted of it among the other children. Once, when some of his schoolmates were vaunting the accomplishments of their several mothers, he was overheard to declare:

"Well, my mother is smarter than any of yours. She can speak two languages."

"What are they?" demanded his companions.

"White and colored."

EAGER TO WORK

Health Regained by Right Food.

The average healthy man or woman is usually eager to be busy at some useful task or employment.

But let dyspepsia or indigestion get hold of one, and all endeavor becomes a burden.

"A year ago, after recovering from an operation," writes a Mich. lady, "my stomach and nerves began to give me much trouble.

"At times my appetite was voracious, but when indulged, indigestion followed. Other times I had no appetite whatever. The food I took did not nourish me, and I grew weaker than ever.

"I lost interest in everything, and wanted to be alone. I had always had good nerves, but now the merest trifle would upset me and bring on a violent headache. Walking across the room was an effort and prescribed exercise was out of the question.

"I had seen Grape-Nuts advertised, but did not believe what I read, at the time. At last when it seemed as if I were literally starving, I began to eat Grape-Nuts.

"I had not been able to work for a year, but now after two months on Grape-Nuts I am eager to be at work again. My stomach gives me no trouble now, my nerves are steady as ever, and interest in life and ambition have came back with the return to health."

"There's a Reason."

Rock Island

Full particulars upon application to the Rock Island man.

Klemme, Iowa.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

TOO MUCH FOR YANKEE.

English Munchausen Had Shade the Better of Fellow Romancer.

The Cape Cod man and the Londoner were traveling on the same train together from Liverpool to the capital.

"Yes," said the Yankee, "we do have consid'rable fog out our way. I've seen it so thick that the landladies of our summer boardin' houses could ladle it out and use it instead o' whipped egg for the heavy part of the floatin' island."

"We 'ave 'em, too, in London," said his traveling companion, "but our climate is too dirty to permit of our eatin' it. We burn so much soft coal, you see, the fog gets packed full of soot. The only thing we really can do with it is to cut it up into blocks and use it instead of peat when we want a quick fire."

And the Yankee took out the little American flag he wore in his buttonhole and put it away in his wallet.—Judge.

BOY KEPT SCRATCHING.

Eczema Lasted 7 Years—Face Was All Raw—Skin Specialists Failed, But Cuticura Effected Cure.

"When my little boy was six weeks old an eruption broke out on his face. I took him to a doctor, but his face kept on getting worse until it got so bad that no one could look at him. His whole face was one crust and must have been very painful. He scratched day and night until his face was raw. Then I took him to all the best specialists in skin diseases but they could not do much for him. The eczema got on his arms and legs and we could not get a night's sleep in months. I got a set of Cuticura Remedies and he felt relieved the first time I used them. I gave the Cuticura Remedies a good trial and gradually the eczema healed all up. He is now seven years old and I think the trouble will never return. Mrs. John G. Klumpp, 80 Niagara St., Newark, N. J., Oct. 17 and 22, 1907."

Uncle Zeb's Preference.

Uncle Zebulon was on a visit to his nephew in the big city and the two had gone to a restaurant for dinner. They had given their order and were waiting for it to be filled when the younger man, who had been glancing at a paper that lay on the table, said:

"By the way, uncle, did you ever have cerebro-spinal meningitis?"

"No," replied Uncle Zebulon, after a few moments' mental struggle with the question, "and I don't want any. I'd ruther have fried liver and bacon any day."

VICTOR, IOWA, IN QUEER MIXUP

Must Grant Franchise to Plant Built Years Ago.

Victor.—Victor found herself up against a queer proposition not long ago. The town built, and for years has maintained a system of water works without sanction, oor legal right, so far as the voice of the people was concerned. Lately it has been found necessary to erect a new water tank. The council preceded to let the contract to a Chicago firm, and when it became necessary to execute the legal papers it was discovered that the town was without authority, inasmuch as the waterworks proposition had never been submitted to a vote of the people. Without a vote of the people the contracting firm would have been powerless to collect their claim. So the town dads got busy and passed a resolution calling a special election for November 18, at which time the voters will likely approve al that has been done and authorize the council to proceed with the work.

GIRL OF ELEVEN ASSAULTED.

Fear of Lynching Causes Sheriff to Spirit Man Away.

Colfax.—E. W. Lindsey, formerly manager of the Jasper County Teleph company and a prominent citizen of Prairie City, was placed under arrest in Colfax Sunday night Nov. 8, charged with a criminal assault upon 11-year-old Grace Hopkins, daughter of Sam Hopkins, a Colfax carpenter. The little girl is in a precarious condition as the result of the alleged assault. When the news of the crime and Lindsey's arrest spread over Colfax, the feeling against the man ran high. Marshal Kinsey, fearing mob violence, smuggled the prisoner from the city under cover of darkness. He took him cross country to Prairie City and there boarded the 8 o'clock train and hurried the man to the Jasper county jail at Newton.

TELEPONE WAR IN COURTS.

Independents Will Attack Sale to Bell People.

Dubuque,—C. A. Lindemuth of Chicago, president of the International Independent Telephone association, and Messrs. Healy and Healy of Fort Dodge, counsel for the Iowa State Independent Telephone association, will enter suit against the Bell Telephone company, asking that the sale to the latter corporation last April of a majority of the stock of the former company to set aside. It is the contention of the plaintiffs that the transaction by which the Bell people secured in effect a monopoly of the telephone business in Dubuque is in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The case is to be tried in federal court and the outcome will establish precedent for numerous other cases pending in Iowa and Illinois.

FIND MURDER CLUE

Pool of Blood Near Railroad Track Convincing Evidence.

Plymouth.—This city is still in turmoil over the death of Michael Cummings. That he was murdered goes without question. That the crime was splendidly covered up is true. Two of his brothers and four of his sisters, all well-to-do, have been here looking over the situation and all are convinced that there was foul play. It is reported that the brothers are perfecting plans that may soon lead to the quilty parties. A large pool of blood has been found near the railroad track and a piece of a woman's dress about twelve inches long and three or four inches wide was found near the pool. This is regarded at this time very important as a link in the evidence sought.

Haugen's Majority Cut.

Mason City.—One of the surprises of the recent general election in the Fourth district is the big cut in the usual majority of Congressman Haugen, whose majority of two years ago of 11,000 was cut to 4,642. What is more the big slump occurred in counties which contain the larger percent Scandinavian vote. He received the normal republican vote in this county, but counties like Mitchell, Winneshiek and Howard he lost heavily.

Hamburg Man a Suicide.

Hamburg.—Charles Engleman, who lived five miles southwest of Hamburg committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn. He was a son-in-law of Orlan Anderson of Hamburg, and had been married some eight months. He was about 40 years of age.

2,500 PEOPLE ARE AFFECTED.

Residents and Students at Iowa City in Dysentery Epidemic.

Iowa City.—Fully 2,500 residents of Iowa City and students of Iowa university, including most of the members of the football team, are suffering from an epidemic of dysentery which has swept over the community. It was almost necessary to suspend class room exercise at the university on account of the small attendance. It was later determined that the dysenteric epidemic was caused by crenothrix, a micro-organism which flourishes in the still water of the mains. A test is being made of the river water and unless it is very impure, the mains will be flushed with unfiltered river water, which will remove the organic growth. In case the river water is too impure to be used with safety nothing can be done except to let the crenothrix work itself out by natural means. In the meantime boiled water is being used by the residents of the city.

TWENTY YEARS FOR MURDER.

George Young Pays Penalty for Killing of Frank Parker.

Newton.—In the presence of an aged father, George Young was sentenced for the Frank Parker murder, near Kellogg, and next Monday he will be taken to Fort Madison by Sheriff Russell to begin service on a twenty year term at hard labor. Young seemed a thoroughly penitent man as he stood before the court. Judge Clements talked to him in a kindly manner and asked the prisoner questions concerning his past record. Young said he was born in Gifford, Ia., thirty-five years ago. He answered with not a little pride that he had never before been in trouble in the courts. Evidently the young man concluded to take his punishment without further fighting, for no motion for a new trial or an appeal was filed. Young may reduce his sentence from twenty years to eleven by good behavior.

Hosiery Mill at Boone.

Des Moines.—Unable to hire the necessary female factory help in this city, the Des Moines Hosiery mills has completed arrangements for establishing a branch at Boone. The new factory will have a capacity of 500 dozen pairs of hose per day, or one-half that of the home plant in Des Moines. Secretary Rollins declared that the branch at Boone was only the first of several to be located in the rich territory surrounding Des Moines. He said this is the plan adopted by most of the large hosiery mills and that the local company is compelled to do it because of the increased demand for their product and the inability to secure help in Des Moines.

KIDNAPPING FOILED.

Stranger Steals Little Child From Farm.

Calmar.—The entire neighborhood near Calmar was aroused over what looked like an attempt to kidnap Emil Benda, the 6-year-old son of Mrs. Tuma, who lives on the Calmar-Decorah road four and a half miles from Calmar. The child was playing in the road in front of the house when a stranger persuaded him to take a ride. They drove into Calmar and the stranger left Emil on the depot platform, telling him to await his return. The boy left the depot and went to the house of Mrs. Yarhood, a friend of Mrs. Tuma. Mrs. Yarhood put the boy in charge of John Korbel, who returned him to his anxious mother.

Pastuer Institute For Iowa.

Iowa City, Nov. 5.—A second Pasteur institute will be started in Iowa City if the tentative plans of Dr. Henry Albert, the state board of health and the university authorities are carried out. Preliminary investigation is being made on the facilities for such an institution here. The excellent laboratory accommodations in connection with the state barteriological work, the new addition to the hospital, etc., make it seem probable that the victims of mad dogs, etc., can be brought to Iowa City for treatment instead of being sent to Chicago.

Pension for Palma's Widow.

Havana, Nov. 9.—In response to an inquiry by Jose Gomez, the liberal candidate for the presidency, Governor Magoon Saturday issued a decree providing an annual pension of $5,000 during her life to the widow of the late President Palma.

53,924 FOR CARROLL

BRYAN'S VOTE IN THE STATE IS 173,423.

TAFT'S VOTE IS 238,454

The Carroll Vote Is 217,772 Against 163,848 for the Democratic Candidate.

Total Vote in Iowa.

Taft	238,454
Bryan	173,423
Taft plurality	65,031
Carroll	217,772
White	163,848
Carroll plurality	53,924
Total vote for Taft and Bryan	421,877
Total vote for all candidates, 1904	485,703
Cummins	42,000

Des Moines, Nov. 6.—These figures based on semi-official returns from eighty-eight counties of the ninety-nine in the state and gathered from county auditors, furnish the first actual total vote published in Iowa. All previous statements of pluralities have been based merely on estimates of the vote, but the table published herewith give the exact vote in each of the counties listed. It is impossible to secure the eleven missing counties last night, because the county auditors had not received the complete returns from the precincts in these counties. In some cases the complete vote will not be available until the official canvass of the returns next week.

While there are eleven counties missing, they will not change the net result except to increase somewhat the lead of both Taft and Carroll over their opponents. They may add 3,000 to the pluralities of each, bringing the final Taft plurality to about 68,000 or 70,000 and the Carroll plurality to something over 55,000.

The "state of Davenport," whose assumed autonomy was ended by the law enforcement policies of Attorney General Byers, played even with Mr. Byers by cutting his vote. But he did not suffer alone for the entire state ticket was cut from Carroll down. State Superintendent Riggs suffered even a little worse than Attorney General Byers, for he reveived five less votes, due to controversies probably, with Davenport school authorities on questions of policy. Byers' vote was cut approximately 2,000 from the Taft vote. Taft received 6,288 and had a plurality of 619 over Bryan; Byers received 4,279 and his opponent carried the county by 979. Carroll received 5,179 votes and White 6,805, White receiving the largest vote cast for any one on the state ticket. Riggs received 4,274 in Scott and Miller 5,214.

But no serious cutting of the state ticket was reported outside of Scott county. Byers and others ran behind in some of the other river counties, but it is believed that Byers, at least, will more than make it up in other sections of the state.

Iowa's New Congressmen.

REPUBLICAN—

First District—C. F. Kennedy of Montrose.

Second District—A. F. Dawson of Preston.

Third District—C. E. Pickett of Waterloo.

Fourth District—G. N. Haugen of Northwood.

Fifth District—J. W. Good of Cedar Rapids.

Sixth District—N. E. Kendall of Albia.

Seventh District—J. A. T. Hull of Des Moines.

Ninth District—Walter I. Smith of Council Bluffs.

Tenth District—Frank P. Woods of Estherville.

Eleventh District—E. H. Hubbard of Sioux City.

Jamieson, Good, Pickett, Kendall and Woods were elected for the first time.

Des Moines, Nov. 5.—Iowa republicans elected all but one of their candidates for congress, and that one was Col. "Pete" Hepburn of the Eighth district. That old veteran of many a valiant political campaign was vanquished by a young man—W. D. Jamieson—who did an amazing thing when he was elected to the state senate two years ago and now does a still more amazing thing by beating a man who was experienced in politics when he was as yet unborn.

In every other district but the Eighth the republican candidates were elected. There was doubt for a long time over the outcome in the Sixth district, where former Speaker Kendall of the Iowa legislature made a desperate fight against Dan W. Hamilton, who defeated Lacey two years ago. Tuesday night returns were very meager, but they were considered favorable to Kendall. Yesterday morning the report was that Kendall had lost, but last night all doubt was removed and Sixth district democrats conceded his victory.

In the First and Second, the other close districts, the republican candidates, Kennedy and Dawson, won handily with large pluralities.

In the Eighth, Jamieson won by 500, or more plurality over Hepburn. In the Sixth, Kendall won by about 769 over Hamilton.

END OF PET DETESTATION.

w Yorker Finally Rid of the Dis-pised High Hat.

There is a certain man in New York ose pet detestation is a high hat. his journey through life he has ac-ired many dislikes, some prejudices, d a few hatreds—but his feeling ward a high hat goes far beyond the nits implied by the mild word atred."

However, family influences were ought to bear on him when he had ached the proper milestone in his e, and these influences were so ong and insistent that eventually man in question purchased a high ; what is more, he actually ned it.

But his hatred abated not a jot. In t, it grew. He used to open his box and eye the hat viciously, mur-ously. But thoughts of what the ily would say if he should adopt lent measures always deterred him, d every time he shut the box again, ving the thing unharmed, and ted his rage in profanity.

Once he and his family went to e at a hotel in the country. And night, with appalling suddenness, t hotel caught fire.

Fortunately, everybody in it was le to get out in safety. The young n of the hat, after counting heads, d seeing that his people were out of nger, decided to dash into the burn-g building once more—there was ll a bit of time—in order to see ether he might rescue a few more ings from his room. In the excite-nt attendant on the discovery of fire the hotel guests had been liged to look to their personal safe-without thinking overmuch of that their belongings.

Well, the young man, plunging gal-ntly through flame and smoke, ached his room. There, the first ing which caught his eye was the gh hat.

With a look of diabolical glee he re-rded it for a few seconds. Then—th an exclamation of delight—he cked it into the inmost part of the om, into crackling flame and eddy-g smoke, far from all possible ans of escape.

Then, diabolical glee still illumining features, he emerged a happy an.

Again the Hair.

The man's hair, at 47, was so thick d dark that it gave him an ab-rmal and coarse look—the look mehow, of the proprietor of a swind-g sideshow. He was, however, a illionaire banker.

"All this talk about the hair turn-g gray if you go bareheaded is lse," he said, "except in the case of ose who don't use brilliantine. Since was a boy of 18, when my hair got ry thin, I have gone bareheaded all mmer long by a hair specialist's ad-ce. To that I impute my excellent op.

"Of course, my hair, dried by the n and wind, would have turned gray I hadn't oiled it with brilliantine ily. I oiled and brushed it till it one like satin. That combination—air bared daily to the sun and oiled ily with brilliantine—positively as-res a thatch that will last out the etime. And this treatment staves rather than brings on grayness."

Special Train to Carry a Wreath.

Carelessness on the part of some urt official recently rendered neces-ry the sending of a special train om Budapest to Vienna to carry a urel wreath for the tomb of the mur-ered Empress Elizabeth. It is the stom every year to make up on the mpress' estate at Godollo, in Hun-ary, a gigantic laurel wreath to be id on the empress' coffin in the aults of the Capuchin church on the e of the anniversary of her assas-nation. This year when the official charge of the wreath arrived in dapest he found that the wreath ad not been put in the carriage. To back for it was to lose the train nd as it was imperative that the reath should be laid in the imperial aults that evening, the court cham-erlain ordered a special train to car-y the wreath over the 163 miles be-ween the Hungarian and Austrian pitals.

PRISON FOR MORSE

ICE TRUST MAGNATE SENTENCED TO FIFTEEN YEARS.

A. H. CURTIS IS RELEASED

Wives of the Two Convicted New York Financiers Collapse as the Court Pronounces Judgment.

New York.—From a cell in the Tombs prison, Charles W. Morse now directs the efforts of his counsel to secure his freedom, he having been sentenced Friday to serve 15 years in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., for misapplication of the funds of the National Bank of North America and making false entries in the books of the bank.

Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the defunct bank, who was jointly tried and convicted with Morse, was given his liberty on a suspended sentence.

While Morse's lawyers immediately applied for and secured a stay of execution for ten days after sentence had been imposed, still it is probable that Morse will remain a prisoner in the Tombs until Monday, as Judge Hough has refused to admit the financier to bail. The Morse lawyers late Friday applied to the United States circuit court of appeals for a writ to show cause why their client should not be admitted to bail, and the writ was granted, but it is not returnable until Monday; hence it appears that Morse must remain a prisoner until the question of bail is settled on that day.

May Not Get New Trial.

Whether a new trial will be granted Morse is problematical. Judge Lacombe granted a writ of error to the Morse lawyers. This writ is returnable December 3 and is based on the usual grounds—exceptions taken by the defense during the trial and exceptions to the indictment itself. This step had to be taken before application for bail could be made, and it also leads to the argument for a new trial. The Morse lawyers say their client has instructed them to fight "to the last ditch."

The scene in the courtroom when sentence was pronounced by Judge Hough was a most dramatic one. The wives of the two prisoners, who had been constant attendants at court during the entire trial, were present early Friday as if anxious to cheer their husbands by their presence in the trying ordeal which confronted them.

Husbands Are Comforters.

When the real test came, however, it was the husbands and not the wives who proved the comforters. Morse sat like a stoic when he heard the words which condemned him to prison. There was scarcely the tremor of an eyelid, and to those who watched there was no longer even the shadow of a doubt that the "little man" was indeed a man of iron nerve. Curtis, too, accepted the news which came to him—good news in his case—with the same lack of emotion that characterized his former chief. But the strain had been too great for the women. As the truth of what Judge Hough's words meant flashed through their mind Mrs. Morse, who through all the trying day of the trial had preserved an unruffled demeanor, collapsed in her seat, buried her face in her hands and began to sob convulsively. Still weeping she was led away to an anteroom, where a moment later her husband held her in his arms and sought to console her.

EXCELLENT WEATHER AND MAGNIFICENT CROPS

REPORTS FROM WESTERN CANADA ARE VERY ENCOURAGING.

A correspondent writes the Winnipeg (Man.) Free Press: "The Pincher Creek district, (Southern Alberta), the original home of fall wheat, where it has been grown without failure, dry seasons and wet, for about 25 years, is excelling itself this year. The yield and quality are both phenomenal, as has been the weather for its harvesting. Forty bushels is a common yield, and many fields go up to 50, 60 and over, and most of it No. 1 Northern. Even last year, which was less favorable, similar yields were in some cases obtained, but owing to the season the quality was not so good. It is probably safe to say that the average yield from the Old Man's River to the boundary will be 47 or 48 bushels per acre, and mostly No. 1 Northern. One man has just made a net profit from his crop of $19.55 per acre, or little less than the selling price of land. Land here is too cheap at present, when a crop or two will pay for it, and a failure almost unknown. Nor is the district dependent on wheat, all other crops do well, also stock and dairying, and there is a large market at the doors in the mining towns up the Crows Nest Pass, and in British Columbia, for the abundant hay of the district, and poultry, pork, and garden truck. Coal is near and cheap. Jim Hill has an eye on its advantages, and has invested here, and is bringing the Great Northern Railroad soon, when other lines will follow."

The wheat, oat and barley crop in other parts of Western Canada show splendid yields and will make the farmers of that country (and many of them are Americans) rich. The Canadian Government Agent for this district advises us that he will be pleased to give information to all who desire it about the new land regulations by which a settler may now secure 160 acres in addition to his 160 homestead acres, at $3.00 an acre, and also how to reach these lands into which railways are being extended. It might be interesting to read what is said of that country by the Editor of the Marshall (Minn.) News-Messenger, who made a trip through portions of it in July, 1908. "Passing through more than three thousand miles of Western Canada's agricultural lands, touring the northern and southern farming belts of the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, with numerous drives through the great grain fields, we were made to realize not only the magnificence of the crops, but the magnitude, in measures, of the vast territory opening, and to be opened to farming immigration. There are hundreds of thousands of farmers there, and millions of acres under cultivation, but there is room for millions more, and other millions of acreage available. We could see in Western Canada in soil, product, topography or climate, little that is different from Minnesota, and with meeting at every point many business men and farmers who went there from this state, it was difficult to realize one was beyond the boundary of the country."

AFTER THE SHOT.

Robbie Rabbit—Never in all my life has such shocking language been used in my presence as that boy has used in the last three minutes. Oooh!

If the energy that women expend in making fools of men could be concentrated—but what's the use of speculating with impossible problems?

LAUGH WAS ON THE DEACON.

Statement Might Be True, But Certainly Was Unhappily Expressed.

"I regret to say," remarked Deacon French, at the last meeting of the Squashville Political Debate club, "that this club has been degenerating ever since I became a member of it."

The deacon paused and flushed as he saw a slight smile on the faces of his fellow members.

"What I mean to say is," he continued, with some haste, "that ever since I joined this club I've noticed a gradual but decided change for the worse."

The smile on the faces of the other members deepened, and the deacon's face turned almost scarlet.

"You all know what I mean," he added, desperately. "What I mean is that from the very minute I became a member of the Squashville Political Debate club, I could see that it was beginning to lose its value as an organization, and the longer I have stayed in it, the more steadily have I seen it running down hill!"—Lippincott's.

His Epitaph.

"I have just one request," said the dying man to his relatives.

"What is it?" they asked him earnestly. "We will grant you anything."

"Well," replied the man, feebly, "I want you to have carved upon my monument these words: 'Here lies a man who worked for his living.'"

Realizing that he had forestalled any attempt on the part of his rich relations to brag too much about their family connections, he sank into a sweet sleep.

How He Hunted Bear.

A New York Irishman was visiting a friend in the Adirondacks and was taken with a desire to go hunting. Borrowing a gun from his friend he set off alone in search of game. Some time after his host heard a distant report of a gun. A few minutes later he heard some one shouting. From a window he spied, in the distance, his friend, hot-footing it for home, and behind him a bear, gaining at every step. Nearly spent, the pursued reached the door just in time to cry out:

"Quick, Mike! Quick! Open the door! I'm bringing him home alolve!"

People who were present smiled at the little passage of arms which took place between two young ladies at a luncheon recently. One of them, a bride, shaking hands in her characteristically cordial way, said to the other:

"I'm so glad to meet you! You have afforded me so very much amusement just lately."

"Amusement?" said the other.

"Oh, yes," went on the bride. "I've been through my husband's desk, and I've read all his old love letters. I found several very affectionate letters from you, and I enjoyed reading them, really, ever so much."

"I'm so glad you enjoyed them," purred the other. "But do come and see me very soon. Here is my card. I have the answers to all those letters and you might like to read them as well. Mr. X——'s letters are so much more affectionate than those I wrote to him. I know you'll enjoy reading them ever so much more than you did mine."

GONE HOME.

Helen Ruth Bloom whose sudden illness and death was mentioned in last week's paper, was born September 24. 1891 at Klemme, Iowa. She was the oldest daughter of W. R. Bloom and Sadie Bloom. Her brief young life was spent here in the home of her parents. She was graduated from our High School in June 1908. Ambitious for further education she went to Eldora, Iowa this fall to carry out this plan and entered the high school where she was when the dread disease, diabetes, which sapped her life culminated, and she obliged to leave her work.

She went to Alden, Iowa to visit on her way home and the unwelcome messenger overtook her there. When Mr. and Mrs. Bloom received word of Helen's severe sickness, they left at once and and hurried to her side She was unconscious however when her parents arrived and remained so until death. Yet they had the comfort to be with her until she peacefully breathed her last. This was Wednesday night Nov. 11th at about 12 o'clock. The remains were bro't here Thursday. The funeral service was held at the Bloom home Sunday morning and was conducted by Rev. A. Muehlmeier.

A selected quartette rendered several heart touching songs. The floral decorations which were presented from our public school, Royal Neighbors, State Savings Bank and the school where she attended at Eldora, were grand.

A great number of sympathizing friends from far and near were present. After the service the remains were taken to Belmond cemetery for interment. Helen leaves behind her grief stricken parents, two sisters and one brother and also a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Our heartfelt sympathy for the bereaved family. May we all find comfort in the word of our God: "I know the thoughts that I think toward you saith the Lord, thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you an expected end."

All trials and afflictions which come upon us in this life are sent for some high purpose, are sent to put us to thought, may we give ear to his thoughts so that we may be ready at our masters call Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Never fails. Buy it now. It may save life.

Last year young Mr. Astor was given an automobile by his indulgent father because he was not at the foot of his class. This year it is wondered what form the award of merit will take. As a precaution against coal dust explosions Prof. William Galloway said that if the coal dust in a roadway in a mine were regularly strewn with a sufficient amount of salts containing large quantities of water of crystallization, or with much larger proportions of the dusts of clay, slate, limestone, chalk or other substances, it would be rendered quite as innocuous as if it were damped with water.

It would be hard to find two men more different in their way than the two Jameses of Kentucky—Ollie M. James, a Democrat, and Addison James, a Republican. Ollie is a lawyer, and Addison a doctor. Representative James is a man of immense frame, big voice and spirited, characteristic of the lawyer; Representative Addison James is quiet and unassuming, like the modest doctor that he is.

$100,000 WILL CASE DECIDED.

Sullivan Estate Ordered Divided Among All Heirs.

Newton.—After a long and bitter fight, brother has defeated sister in the $100,000 Sullivan will case. Judge Preston of the district court decided that when aged John Sullivan two years ago deeded all of his estate worth $100,00 or more, to his daughter, Mrs Kittie Kenney, and later willed it to her he was of unsound mind and under undue influence. He ordered that Mrs. Kenney return to her brother Hugh Sullivan, and to her deceased sister's two children, their full share of all the property wrongfully held by her. This case was instituted months ago by Hugh Sullivan of this county and Daisy and John Orton, children of a daughter of the late John Sullivan. The property involved included 572 acres of Jasper county land, valued at about $66,000, an orange ranch in California, which was later sold by Mrs. Kenney for $18,500, and about $12,000 in cash and notes.

BAD YEAR FOR CEMENT MILLS.

So Say Managers of Big Establishments at Mason City.

Mason City.—"This has been a hard year for the product of cement mills," said Secretary McCourtie of the Northwestern States Cement company, at its second annual meeting here. Mr. McCourtie went on to explain that the panic which was prevalent in the east affected the big projects in the way of building, and thus directly affected the cement business. Many mills were shut down. While this was true the local mill was able to run under full head all year, and declared its regular dividend, and re-elected its present corps of officers. The mill at the present time is turning out cement at the rate of 3,500 barrels per day, and all of this is finding a ready sale. Eight big kilns are under full headway, and nearly 400 men find steady employment.

MINERS' PRESIDENT IS OUT.

W. W. White of Iowa District Will Not Seek Re-Election.

Oskaloosa.—W. W. White of Jerome, Ia., who succeeded John P. White of Oskaloosa as president of district No. 13, United Mine Workers of America, which includes all of Iowa and part of Missouri has announced that he positively would not be a candidate for re-election at the referendum election to be held in January. The declination of J P. White to stand for re-election as vice president of the national organization leads to the inference that he may be induced to again become president of the Iowa organization. The affairs of the Iowa union are in splendid shape. During the past three months the association has paid death claims amounting to $6,000. Seventy-two claims were allowed, fifty-two being for men and 20 for wives of the miners.

Bound Over to Grand Jury.

Newton.—Earl W. Lindsay, until recently manager of the Jasper County Telephone company at Colfax, was bound over to the grand jury on the charge of rape upon little 8-year-old Grace Hopkins. Justice J. W. Allfree of Newton, before whom the preliminary hearing was held, fixed the amount of Lindsay's bonds in the sum of $2,000, but the prisoner has not found bondsmen and he was still in custody in the Newton jail. The state examined only enough witnesses to have Lindsay bound over to the grand jury, which will sit December 2. The defense offered no witnesses.

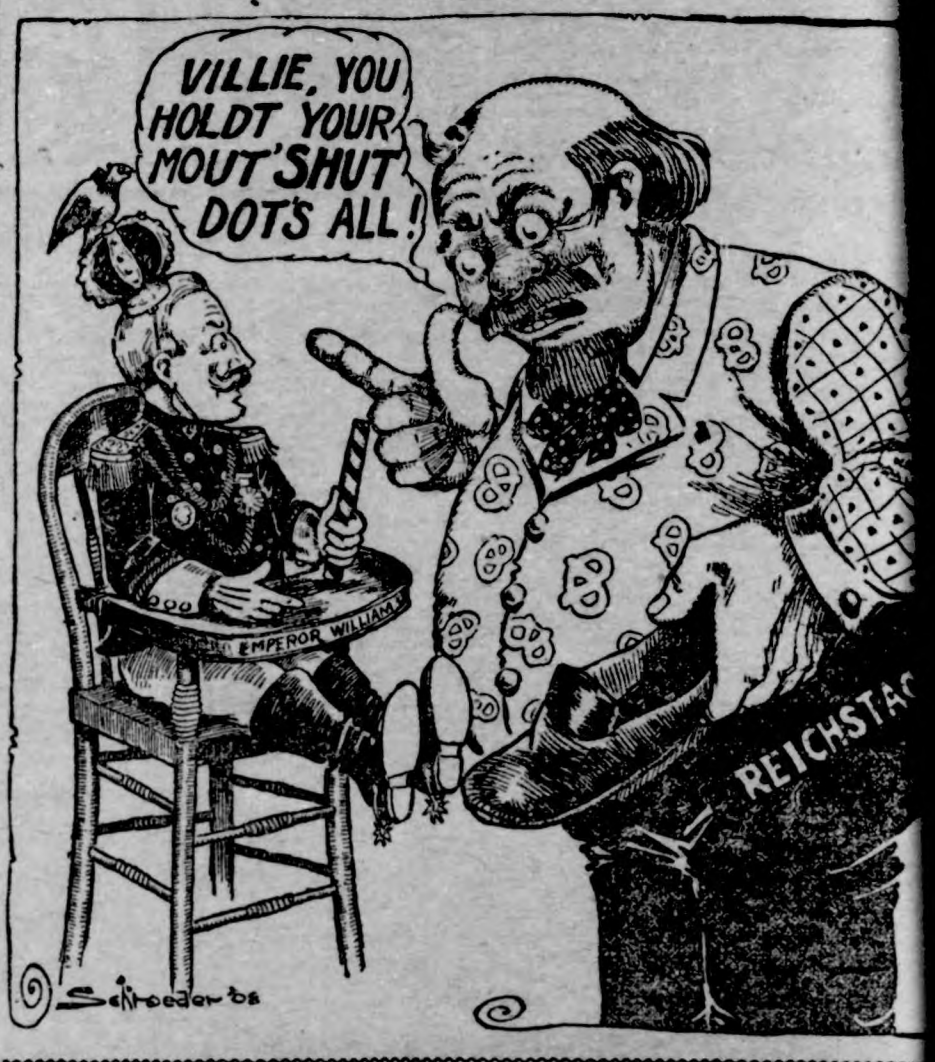
Pays Tribute to McFarland.

Marshalltown.—The public memorial service in honor of Silas C. McFarland, late United States consul general at large for the European district, was largely attended on the afternoon of Nov. 11, at the Congregational church. Col. Lafayette Young editor of the Des Moines Daily Capital, and for many years a warm personal friend of Mr. McFarland, delivered the eulogy to the dead consul general.

The Epidemic is Abated.

Iowa City.—The epidemic of dysentery here has been alleviated, not through the purification of the city water, but because no one drinks it without boiling. Tests are now being conducted to determine the location and extent of the decomposing organic matter. To this end, water has been taken from filter galleries and from hydrants in different parts of the city.

TIMELY ADVICE.



HUNDREDS DIE IN A MINE

AWFUL RESULTS OF EXPLOSION IN GERMAN COLLIERY.

Dead Number 339—Efforts to Reach Their Bodies Are Frustrated by Fire.

Hamm, Westphalia, Germany, Nov. 13.—The greatest mine disaster in many years in Germany occurred Thursday morning at the Radbod mine, about three miles from this place. There was a heavy explosion in the mine about 4 a. m., and almost immediately the mine took fire.

Of 380 miners working under ground at the time only six escaped without injury. Thirty-five were taken out badly injured and 37 were dead when brought to the mouth of the pit. The remaining 302 have been given up for lost.

The explosion, which was unusually violent, destroyed one of the shafts, which had to be partly repaired before the rescue work was begun. In addition, the flames and smoke proved almost insurmountable obstacles in the early efforts of the rescuing parties. A special corps, composed of the men who rendered such valuable aid in the terrible mine disaster at Courrieres, France, in March of 1906, arrived upon the scene shortly before noon, but were unable to enter the mine, being forced to await the result of the determind efforts of the firemen to keep the flames in check.

Meantime heartrending scenes were being enacted at the mine when the dead and wounded were brought to the surface, and there were similar scenes in the town when the injured were transported through the streets to the hospitals.

At one o'clock the fire had made great headway, and later in the afternoon, after a consultation of the engineers, it was decided that any further attempts to rescue the entombed men were vain, owing to the impossibility of entering the galleries. At the same time an order was issued to flood the mine.

First reports indicated that the accident was the result of an explosion of coal dust, but the statements of the injured men render them improbable, and it is not clear just what caused it.

BANK EXAMINER IS DEAD.

E. B. Shaw Is Suddenly Stricken at Carroll, Ia.

Carroll, Ia.—The second tragedy in the affairs of the failed First National bank of Carroll, whose president, W. L. Culbertson, recently shot himself, occurred here Thursday in the death of the national bank examiner in charge, E. B. Shaw of West Union, Ia.

Although apparently in good health Wednesday night, he was found dying at eight o'clock in the morning when the clerk at his hotel sought to arouse him for breakfast. He had been stricken while undressing to retire, and had lain across the foot of the bed all night unconscious. He was removed to the hospital and there died at ten o'clock of hemorrhage of the brain.

Bold Attempt at Blackmail.

Denver, Col.—A woman giving her name as Mrs. H. C. Cones Monday afternoon compelled Mrs. Genevieve Chandler Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Phipps, the Pittsburg millionaire, to take her in her automobile to a bank for the purpose of getting $10,000 that she demanded of Mrs. Phipps on pain of being blown to pieces with dynamite. At the bank Mrs. Cones was overpowered by special officers and placed under arrest. She talked incoherently to the police and is thought to be insane.

KAISER WILLIAM CENSURED

Members of German Reichstag Use Severe Language.

Berlin.—Emperor William never has been so severely judged by his parliament as he was Tuesday during the debate in the reichstag on the interpellations concerning the conversations published with the permission of the emperor in the London Daily Telegraph, on October 28.

The criticisms of his majesty's court, his ministers and his majesty's treatment of the constitution, as well as of his freedom of speech, went lengths that astonished observers unacquainted with the traditional calm of the chamber in dealing with the personality of the sovereign. Even the emperor seemed to have nerves of fenders.

Chancellor von Buelow made an address lasting 15 minutes, but which lacked his usual spirit, and a person high in confidence is authority for the statement that he also had told the emperor that neither himself nor his successors could remain in office unless his majesty was more reserved. The house received his explanation in icy silence.

The conservatives, represented largely the landed nobility, were almost as relentless as the socialists and the radicals and the national-liberals.

SIX CHINAMEN DROWNED.

Attempt to Smuggle Orientals from Canada Is Disastrous.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A motor boat containing ten Chinamen and three white men was wrecked on the breakwall at the foot of Michigan street early Thursday. Six of the Chinamen were drowned or dashed to death against the rock-ribbed seawall. The four survivors were rescued by the crew of a police boat. The three white men escaped.

Mock Quong, one of the rescued Chinamen, speaks fairly good English which he learned in a South Bend (Ind.) Sunday school class. He told the immigration inspectors that the ten Chinamen left Toronto a week ago and had been lodged in a barn on the Canadian side of the lake opposite Buffalo, awaiting a favorable opportunity to make a landing in the United States. Wednesday night they were taken to the lake by three white men and placed in a motor boat which also had a rowboat in tow. They had been on the water about half an hour when they were wrecked.

EMPEROR OF CHINA DEAD.

Dowager Empress Also Said to Be Dying at Peking.

Peking.—The emperor of China was reported dying Saturday morning. It has, however, been impossible to procure official confirmation of this announcement. His majesty was transferred to the death chamber at two o'clock Friday afternoon. At that hour he was still breathing, it was said.

Two imperial edicts were issued from the palace Friday afternoon in quick succession. The first makes Prince Chun regent of the empire and the second appoints his son, Pu Wei, heir presumptive.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSIONS.

Sergent, Ky.—In a boiler explosion at the Miller Lumber Company's plant at Pound, near Pound Gap Friday four men were killed and four more severely injured.

Norton, Va.—Three men were killed outright, two were fatally injured and two others were seriously hurt in an explosion at a sawmill plant in Wise county Friday.

SYNOPSIS.

Three girls — Elizabeth, Gabrielle and Elise—started for Canada to spend the summer there. On board steamer they were frightened by an apparently demented stranger, who finding a bag belonging to one of them, took enjoyment in scrutinizing a photo of the trio. Elise shared her stateroom with a Mrs. Graham, also bound for Canada. The young women on a sightseeing tour met Mrs. Graham, anxiously awaiting her husband, who had a mania for sailing.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

"He was to have been home by noon," she said, "and I have been standing here two hours. Sailboats are treacherous, and Harry is so reckless. Ah!"

The ejaculation was one of relief, as a white sail appeared and headed for the slip.

"I'm coming to see you," I called, as we walked on, but the conclusion was forced upon me that she had forgotten my existence.

"Why do you suppose they use that forlorn little slip," I inquired, "when there are plenty of good landing places further on?"

But the subject did not seem to interest Elizabeth, whom I had addressed, for she merely remarked with a sigh:

"I just hate to go back to that old hotel."

"But of course we could never rent the cottage," said Gabrielle, the prudent.

"Oh, of course not!" we agreed, and ascended the steps of the hotel in gloomy silence.

In the hall there were mountains of trunks, covered with a bewildering quantity of labels, and a subdued air of excitement prevailed, indicating that the new arrivals were worthy of consideration. As soon as possible we investigated the register and found that Lord Wilfrid and Lady Edith Campbell of London, England, were enjoying the hospitality of the house.

It was no use pretending that we were not impressed, for we were, and we read the names over several times aloud to see how they sounded. It was our first encounter with British aristocracy outside of books, and we hurried upstairs to make fresh toilets in their honor.

They did not appear until we had nearly finished dinner, and we were so interested watching for them that we forgot to complain about the food. Lord Wilfrid was disappointing, although he had the drooping blonde mustache and bored manner we were familiar with on the stage. I say this frankly, because we learned later that we had been unjust and that his unprepossessing appearance was simply the result of unrequited affection, which, of course, went very hard with one who was accustomed to having the world at his feet—especially the feminine world.

Lady Edith told us all about it after we got to know her very well, and explained that they had come to this quiet retreat, where they were sure to meet no one, to allow her brother to regain his usual poise before visiting their uncle, the governor general of Canada. She added that the length of their stay depended upon the benefit he derived from it, and hoped we would do what we could toward diverting him. We said we would.

Of course all this happened quite naturally as time went on, and I only mention it here to show how wrong it is to judge by appearances, for we thought Lord Wilfrid looked ill-natured and grumpy, whereas he was really suffering from a broken heart.

His sister, however, was all that could be desired, and suggested Lady Clara Vere de Vere in a very satisfactory manner. In fact, I heard Gabriella murmur: "'The daughter of a hundred earls,'" as Lady Edith swept through the doorway, and Elizabeth quoted: "'The langu'd light of her proud eyes,'" when she inspected the somewhat dingy menu.

I don't think I said anything, for I was so absorbed in wondering whether the ripples of her golden hair were natural or acquired that I forgot everything else; but when we met her the next day and felt the charm of her personality I was ready to swear that everything about her was genuine.

So absorbed were we that evening in discussing the brother and sister that we almost forgot the cottage; but I saw Elizabeth busily engaged with pencil and paper as we were preparing for bed, and was not altogether surprised to hear her voice from the next room after the lights were out.

"If we got a competent woman who would do our washing," she remarked, "it would not be much more expensive than staying here. I have calculated everything."

"But we could never find such a woman," Gabrielle said, interested but incredulous.

"The old man said his sister would come," returned Elizabeth. "Of course I did not engage her, but I know where to find her."

The next day we rented the cottage, engaged the competent woman, and notified the clerk at the hotel that our rooms would be at his disposal at the end of the week.

CHAPTER III.

We saw a good deal of the Campbells—or at least of Lady Edith—during the following week. She was unquestionably lovely, from the crown of her golden head to the tip of her dainty shoe, and, moreover, was endowed with that most enviable gift called personal magnetism; her smile was a caress, and the inflection of her voice implied unqualified pleasure in the society of the person whom she happened to address.

We took her to the cottage, and she went over it with genuine interest, suggesting slight rearrangement of furniture, and lingering on the veranda as though reluctant to leave.

"I quite envy you," she said, with a trace of sadness in her voice. "You will be so cozy up here, and—the hotel is horrid, is it not?"

"You must come and see us very often," said Elizabeth, and Gabrielle and I echoed the invitation eagerly.

"How good of you!" she replied. "I shall be only too glad to come. And I may bring Wilfrid sometimes? We are both rather forlorn strangers in a strange land, you know."

We hastened to say we would be delighted to see Lord Wilfrid at any time, and Elizabeth, who had volunteered to keep house, added that tea would be on tap every afternoon and guests very welcome.

So we took possession of the cottage on the bluff and settled down for a long, lazy summer.

It was nice. That first evening as we sat on the veranda after our comfortable dinner, listening to the murmur of the waves and watching the myriad of stars overhead, we spoke contemptuously of the stuffy little hotel, and pitied those confined within its walls.

Elizabeth had heard from home that day, and told us that a man her father had recently met owned an island near by and had pledged himself to call upon us. Elizabeth's father is a general in the army, and has hosts of acquaintances, so his daughter is quite accustomed to encountering them wherever she goes.

"When do you expect the old gentleman?" inquired Gabrielle, languidly.

"He isn't old at all," flashed Elizabeth—"at least, I don't think so. And, of course, he has sailboats and things if he has a summer home on an island. He might be very useful."

"Ask him to dinner," I suggested, secure in the conviction that our "competent woman" could really cook.

"And ask Lord Wilfrid and Lady Edith the same evening," supplemented Gabrielle. "Let us impress him at once with our intimacy with the nobility."

"Have we a butler and 12 footmen, that we should give dinners?" inquired Elizabeth, with withering sarcasm. "When I entertain landed proprietors and members of the peerage I don't want to feel nervous about anything, so we won't attempt dinners while I'm housekeeper."

We did later, just the same, and our little dining room was the scene of several merry nondescript meals, called dinner by courtesy, and thoroughly enjoyed by every one. But this is anticipating.

The next day as we were all three leaning out of the broad window of my room, in an interval of repose after unpacking and settling, we heard steps on the gravel path, and before we could withdraw our heads two men turned the corner and started for the front door. From the hand of the taller dangled Gabrielle's black shopping bag, and although he wore gray clothes and a straw hat instead of blue serge and a small cap we recognized the man on the steamer, and were consequently petrified with astonishment.

"Don't let them in," whispered Gabrielle, who always has her wits about her in an emergency. "Tell Mary Anne to say 'Not at home.'"

They were directly under the window now, and we feared to move, almost to breathe, lest we attract their attention; but it was just at this crucial moment that my side-comb elected to fall out and land with considerable force upon the aforesaid straw hat. Of course its owner promptly looked up, and equally of course we precipitately retreated.

"Do you think he saw us?" gasped Elizabeth and I simultaneously as the doorbell rang; but Gabrielle had fled to the hall, where we heard her whispering hoarsely to Mary Anne over the banister.

We also heard that invaluable factotum's assurance that the ladies had just gone to the village, and a polite expression of regret, accompanied by a promise to call again.

We stole again to the window as our visitors retreated, and saw them pause, examine my side comb, and calmly drop it in Gabrielle's bag, which had not been left with Mary Anne, as, of course, it should have been.

"At this rate, Bennett," said a laughing voice, "you'll soon be able to open a junkshop. But I must say, old chap, we were very neatly snubbed. Wherefore?"

"I don't know," replied Bennett, "but I mean to find out, for I'm coming again very soon. I assure you, Blake, the picture doesn't begin—"

The rest of the sentence was lost as the two men disappeared around the corner. We straightway held a council of war.

"I suppose," said Elizabeth, "he has lucid intervals and his attendant humors him, but this is no reason why we should be victimized. Let us caution Mary Anne."

So we descended in a body to the kitchen and solemnly warned Mary Anne that the day she admitted our late visitor we would immediately part company. She in turn solemnly assured us that if he crossed the threshold it would be over her dead body, so we felt somewhat comforted. Elizabeth picked up the cards and looked at them.

"Mr. John Clinton Blake," she read aloud, "and Mr. Gordon Bennett."

The card dropped from her hand and she collapsed into the wood box.

"What's the matter now?" demanded Gabrielle, fishing her friend out of its capacious depths.

"Gordon Bennett," said Elizabeth, "is the man who knows father, and who owns the island."

We stared at each other in incredulous silence, then sank down upon Mary Anne's immaculate floor and laughed until we were exhausted.

"I feel sure," said Elizabeth, when she could articulate, "that it is not the same man. This is some impostor."

"Mayhap," suggested Mary Anne, who had been an interested listener—"mayhap, miss, 'e's a smuggler."

Mary Anne had not long left the mother country, and her manipulation of the letter h was as agreeable to our American ears as Lady Edith's faultless enunciation. Just now she was regarding us with the manner of one who possesses unimparted information.

"It's quite hawful, miss," she resumed, dropping her voice to a whisper, "and it do give a body the creeps, so it do. But they say the smuggling wot goes on 'ereabout is most hextaordinary."

"Smuggling?" repeated Gabrielle.

"Yes, miss; taking things in over the border without the duty—which I do say is a sin and a shame to 'ave to pay, so it is."

"It is perfectly right to pay it, Mary Anne. Everybody should obey the laws of a country."

So spoke the general's daughter, but she carefully avoided looking at us, for we all intended investing heavily in furs before our return and getting them in without cost.

"Yes, miss," replied Mary Anne, without enthusiasm, and Gabrielle inquired in rather a muffled voice what the miscreants smuggled.

"Oh, most hanything that comes 'andy, miss. Fur, cloth, gloves, humbrellas, preshus jools—mostly di'monds. The feller they're lookin' fur deals in di'monds. Quite the gentlemen 'e is, too, so I've 'eard."

BORES AT PUBLIC GATHERINGS.

Protest Against Prosy Utterers of Dreary Commonplaces.

Those who impute to us a national lack of patience and politeness must admit that there are occasions upon which we deserve a long mark for self-restraint and kindly consideration of the feelings of our tormentors. Undoubtedly altruism is one of the finest jewels in the moral crown, but it has its limits, and at the close of a season that has abounded in lectures and debates it seems a fitting time to protest against their being stretched beyond the point of human endurance by downright bores in the shape of chairmen and speakers, who vocally amble on and on while their audiences, however they may chafe inwardly at the waste of time and mental irritation, begotten of a dreary rehearsing of commonplaces, sit as patiently as dumb puppets.

In private their victims discuss the advisability of a stiff civil service course for chairmen who apparently are of the firm conviction that they are expected to make the longest addresses of the occasion over which they preside, and certainly they as well as other speakers frequently stand in need of training in the direction of much thought and few words. —Vogue.

Our Wonderful Language.

"For my part," said one, "I think Fred is very bright and capable. I am confident he will succeed." "Yes," replied the other; "he is certainly a worthy young man, but I doubt whether he has head enough to fill his father's shoes."—Roseleaf.

A SURGICAL OPERATION

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For eight years I suffered from the most severe form of female troubles and was told that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown. N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

Took the Wrong House.

On one of the Southern railroads there is a station building that is commonly known by travelers as the smallest railroad station in America.

It is of this station that the story is told that an old farmer was expecting a chicken house to arrive there, and he sent one of his hands, a newcomer, to fetch it.

Arriving there the man saw the house, loaded it on his wagon and started for home.

On the way he met a man in uniform with the words "Station Agent" on his cap.

"Say, hold on. What have you got on that wagon," he asked.

"My chicken house, of course," was the reply.

"Chicken house be jiggered," exploded the official. "That's the station."

A Complete Defense.

An Irish woman was accused of having stolen an iron soap kettle and cracked it, so that its usefulness was ended.

Her defense, when brought before the judge, was as follows: "Oi have witnesses here, yer honor, t' prove, first, that Oi niver had th' kittle in me possession; second, that Oi returned it t' Mrs. Casey widout a crack in it; and, third, that th' old kittle was cracked whin Oi s'hole it."

The Child's Viewpoint.

Percy Alder, M. P., of London, told an amusing story of a small girl at a recent meeting of the Children's Happy Evenings association. The child had been sent away to the country for a holiday, and questioned as to what in all her holiday had pleased her most, this little slum maiden, whose London home adjoined a waste piece of land, replied: "Seeing no dead cats."

Birds Not Afraid of Man.

Among southern African birds which manifest wonderful tameness is the Cape wagtail, which not only penetrates to the living room in search of flies, but will pick them from the old Boer's veischoons as he sits or his stoep, and perch about his chair.

We have it on good authority, that recently 25.000 employes of Northwestern railroad, signed the temperance pledge. These men had noticed that a large majority of those annually laid off were the men who drink and are seldom taken back.

We are anxiously watching the out come of the proceedings in San Francisco. Can it be possible that in an enlightened nation as ours such corrupt men as Ruef and his machinery should win the day and men like Henry and Spreckels who are giving their life and means to expose crime, go down in defeat. Yet this has been the condition of things in many places only in a milder form.

F. C. Griewe had an unusual ride near Fenton one day last week. It was short, but exciting enough to equal an automobile accident. Going down hill, the neckyoke centre broke, the buggy ran on to the ponies and the ponies to save their lives gave chase. When Fred saw how things were going he concluded to stop by the way-side. It did not take the ponies long to out-run the buggy and left it behind, but they would not leave their master, so they stopped and waited for him. Only an Indian pony will do that. Well we say: "It might of been worse.

P. J. Daly of 1247 W. Congress St., Chicago tells of a way to become strong. He says: My mother who is old and was very feeble is defiving so much benefit from Electric Bitters that I feel it's my duty to tell those who need a nonic and strengthening medicine about it. The Colonel's Leg in History.

Col. Blank, who later called himself general, received, in a little skirmish of the Civil war, a slight scratch on the leg. In the days afterward he nursed his glorious wound with loving care and grew lamer year by year that the memory of his bravery might be ever fresh.

When grown old, as he sat one day caring for his leg and musing on the glorious past, a young man, a stranger visiting the family for a few days, approached him and inquired, sympathetically:

"Lame, general?"

"Yes, young man, I am lame."

"Been riding, sir?"

"No, sir," sternly and rebukingly, "I have not been riding."

"Ah, slipped on the ice, general?"

"No, sir!" with actual ferocity.

"Then, perhaps, sir, you have sprained your ankle?"

The old man slowly and carefully lifted his pet leg in both hands and tenderly set his foot upon the floor. Then he slowly rose from his seat and stood looking down with scornful pity at the unlucky youth. At last, in the sublimity of rage, he burst out:

"Go and read the history of your country, you puppy!"

The Pumpkin

By John Greenleaf Whittier

AH!—on Thanksgiving Day, when from East and from West,
From North and from South come the pilgrim and guest,
When the gray-haired New Englander sees round his board
The old broken links of affection restored,
When the care-wearied man seeks his mother once more,
And the worn matron smiles where the girl smiled before,
What moistens the lip and what brightens the eye?
What calls back the past, like the rich Pumpkin pie?

Sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving.—Psalm 147:7.

THANKSGIVING is one of our highest and holiest duties. There are in the Scriptures more commands and calls to praise than to prayer. Yet few duties are more frequently neglected than this. There are many people who are always coming to God with requests but who do not come to him with thanksgiving after their requests have been granted. Ten lepers once cried to Jesus for cleansing, as he was passing them at a distance. He graciously heard them and granted their plea. When they had been healed, one of the ten returned to thank the healer, but the other nine came not again with any word of recognition of the great favor they had received. So it is continually—many are blessed and helped, but few show gratitude. Our Lord felt keenly the ingratitude of the lepers who returned not. "Where are the nine?" was his pained question. God pours out his gifts and blessings every day upon his children; and whenever no voice of thanksgiving is heard in return he misses it. If one bird of the forest is silent in the glad spring day, he misses its song. If one human heart fails to utter its praise amid life's countless blessings, he is disappointed.

Many there are who think that if certain definite days are set apart for praise it is enough. For example, they will be grateful for a whole day once in a year, touching then every chord of praise in their being, thinking that this is the way God wants them to show their gratitude. But the annual Thanksgiving day is not intended to gather into itself the thanksgiving for a whole year; rather it is intended to give the keynote for all the year's life. Life's true concert pitch is praise. If we find that we are below the right pitch, we should take advantage of the particular thanksgiving seasons to get keyed up. When the strings of life begin to grow discordant thanksgiving will put us in tune.

The ideal life is one of gladness. Unthankfulness and fretfulness are discords in the song. We have no right to live gloomily or sadly. Go where we may, we hear the music of joy, unless our ears have become tone-deaf. The world is full of beauty and full of music. Yet it is strange how many people seem neither to see the loveliness nor hear the music. It were well if many of us would train ourselves to see the glory and goodness of God, as revealed in nature. It will be sad to leave this world, after staying in it three-score or four-score years without having seen any of the ten thousand beauties with which God had adorned it. "Consider the lilies," said Jesus. Every sweet flower has a message of joy to him who can read the writing. One who loves God's flowers and birds and trees and mountains and rivers and seas, and has learned to heed the voices which everywhere whisper their secrets to him who understands, can never be sad or lonely. The power to hear what nature's voices have to say is in our hearts, not merely in the ear. We must have the beauty in our souls before we can see beauty anywhere. Hence there are many who are really blind to the loveliness which God has strewn everywhere, with most lavish hand, in his works. So we must have the music in our heart before we can hear the music which sings everywhere for him who has ears to hear. If we have thanksgiving within us, we will have no trouble in finding gladness wherever we go. It is a sad and cheerless heart that makes the world seem dreary to certain people; if only they will let joy enter to dwell within, a new world would be created for them. If we allow our heart to cherish unlovingness, bitterness, evil thoughts or feelings, we cannot hear the music of love which breathes everywhere, pouring out from the heart of God. But if we keep our heart gentle, patient, lowly, and kind, on our ears will fall, wherever we go, sweet strains of divine music.

Then a glad life makes a life of gladness wherever it goes. It leaves an unbroken lane of sunbeams behind it. Everybody is better as well as happier for meeting one whose Christian life radiates gladness and cheer. We can do nothing better either for ourselves or for the world in which we live than to learn the lesson of praise and of thanksgiving. "Let us learn to sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving." There are troubles in every life, but there are a thousand good things for one trial. Sometimes we have disappointments but even these are really God's appointments, as some day we shall find out. If people are unkind to us, we must go on loving just as before, our hearts full of unconquerable kindness, and it will finally win. The most deep-seated tendency to sadness can be overcome and replaced by happy cheerfulness. The gospel of Christ comes to us and tells us that we must be born again, born from above, born of God, and our very nature will be recreated. Then divine grace assures us that it is not impossible even for the most unholy life to be transformed into holiness. The being that is saturated with sin may be whiter than snow. There is no nature, therefore, however unhappy it may be because of its original quality or its early training, which cannot through divine help learn the lesson of happiness and thanksgiving. The secret of Christian joy is the peace of Christ in the heart. Then one is not dependent upon circumstances or conditions. St. Paul said he had learned in whatsoever state he was therein to be content. We know well that his circumstances were not always congenial nor easy, but he sang songs in his prison with as cheerful a heart as when he was enjoying the hospitality of a loving friend. There might be hardships, sufferings, and want; but in himself he had the peace of Christ; and this sustained him. St. Paul's secret of contentment is the Christian's true secret of a happy life.

SOME REMARKS FROM MINNESOTA EDITORS.

What They Think of Western Canada.

A party of editors from a number of cities and towns of Minnesota recently made a tour of Western Canada, and having returned to their homes they are now telling in their respective newspapers of what they saw on their Canadian trip. The West St. Paul Times recalls the excursion of the Minnesota editors from Winnipeg to the Pacific Coast ten years ago. Referring to what has happened in the interval the writer says: "Thousands of miles of new railway lines have been built, and the development of the country has made marvelous strides. Millions of acres, then lying in their wild and untouched state, have since been transferred into grain fields. Towns have sprung up as if by the wand of a magician, and their development is now in full progress. It is a revelation, a record of conquest by settlement that is remarkable."

The Hutchinson Leader characterizes Western Canada as "a great country undeveloped. The summer outing," it says, "was an eye-opener to every member of the party, even those who were on the excursion through Western Canada ten years ago, over considerable of the territory covered this year, being amazed at the progress and advancement made in that short space of time. The time will come when Western Canada will be the bread-basket of the world. It was a delightful outing through a great country of wonderful possibilities and resources."

Since the visit of these editors the Government has revised its land regulations and it is now possible to secure 160 acres of wheat land at $3.00 an acre in addition to the 160 acres that may be homesteaded.

The crops of 1908 have been splendid, and reports from the various districts show good yields, which at present prices will give excellent profits to the farmers.

From Milestone, Saskatchewan, there are reported yields of thirty bushels of spring wheat to the acre, while the average is about 20 bushels. The quality of grain to be shipped from this point will be about 600,000 bushels. Information regarding free lands and transportation will be freely given by the Canadian Government Agents.

YEARNING OF THE SOUL.

Writer's Desires Expressed in Most Beautiful Prose Verse.

Through every grass-blade in the many thousand grasses; through the million leaves, veined and edgecut, on bush and tree; through the song notes and the marked feathers of the bird; through the insect's hum and the color of the butterfly; through the soft, warm air and the flecks of clouds dissolving—I used them all for prayer with all the energy the sunbeams had poured unwearied on the earth since Sesostris was conscious of them on the ancient sands; with all the life that had been lived by vigorous man and beauteous woman since first in dearest Greece the dream of the gods was woven; with all the soul-life that had flowed a long stream down to me—I prayed that I might have a soul more than equal to, far beyond my conception of those things of the past, the present, and the fullness of all life; not only equal to these, but beyond, higher ,and more powerful than I could imagine; that I might take from all their energy, grandeur, and beauty, and gather it unto me; that my soul might be more than the cosmos of life. —Richard Jefferies.

SEVERE HEMORRHOIDS

Sores, and Itching Eczema—Doctor Thought an Operation Necessary —Cuticura's Efficacy Proven.

"I am now 80 years old, and three years ago I was taken with an attack of piles (hemorrhoids), bleeding and protruding. The doctor said the only help for me was to go to a hospital and be operated on. I tried several remedies for months but did not get much help. During this time sores appeared which changed to a terrible itching eczema. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, injecting a quantity of Cuticura Ointment with a Cuticura Suppository Syringe. It took a month of this treatment to get me in a fairly healthy state and then I treated myself once a day for three months and, after that, once or twice a week. The treatments I tried took a lot of money, and it is fortunate that I used Cuticura. J. H. Henderson, Hopkinton, N. Y., Apr 26, 1907."

EMPRESS IS DEAD

DOWAGER EMPRESS OF CHINA PASSES AWAY.

NEW EMPEROR CHILD OF THREE

Emperor and Emperess Died Without Medical Attendance and Alone.

Peking, Nov. 16.—Tsze Hsi An, the dowager empress of China, the autocratic head of the government which she directed without successful interference since 1861, and without protest since 1881, died at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The announcement of the dowager empress' death was official and followed closely upon the announcement that Kuang Hsu, the emperor, had died Saturday at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, but it is believed that the deaths of both the emperor and the dowager empress occurred a considerable time before that set down in the official statements.

An edict isued at 8 o'clock yesterday morning placed upon the throne Prince Pu Yi, the 3-year-old son of Prince Chun, the regent of the empire, in accordane with a promise given by the dowager empress soon after the marriage of Prince Chun in 1903. An edict issued on Friday made Pu Yi heir presumptive.

The foreign legations were notified yesterday morning of the death of the empress and succession of Prince Pu Yi.

Prince Chun, the regent, has ordered the viceroys and governors to take precautions for the continuation of the administration of the provinces as heretofore, and has ordered a hundred days of mourning. The court will go into mourning for three years.

Peking already has been greatly transformed; all red objects have been removed and blue substituted.

Deathbed observations of three thousand years ago marked the passing of the emperor and dowager. They died alone and unattended, although surrouned by a circle of abject spectators who remained at a distance, as on account of the sacred persons of their majesties, they could not be approached.

The emperor died as he had lived, without ministration of whatever kind or scientific aid. For months he had refused to permit the services of foreign physicians, and, it is believed that latterly he received no treatment at all.

NEGRO KILLS SEVEN.

He Is Then Shot and Burned in His Own House.

Okmulgee, Okla., Nov. 16.—Eight persons were killed and ten others wounded yesterday afternoon in a fight between Jim Deckard, a negro desperado, and law officers.

The disturbance began at the St. Louis & San Francisco railroad station where Jim Deckard engaged in a fight with an Indian boy, Steve Grayson, and beat him into insensibility with a rock. Friends of Grayson notified the police and when Policeman Klaber went to the scene Deckard fled to his house, barricaded the door and when Klaber approached, Deckard shot and killed him. Sheriff Robinson gathered a posse and hurried to the scene. Part of this posse was made up of a group of negroes whom the sheriff commissioned as deputies. As the posse approached the house, Deckard killed the sheriff and five of the negro deputies.

Deckards' house was soon surrounded by a frenized mob of armed men who set fire to a house near by. Volleys were poured into Deckard's house and he was shot down. He was seen to roll over on the floor and set fire to his own house, which was soon a roaring furnace in which his body was burned. Quite is now restored with armed men patrolling the streets.

Miss Elkins Denies Story.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—Senator S. B. Elkins last night made the emphatic announcement that no engagement exists between his daughter Katherine, and the duke of the Abruzzi of the Italian navy. The statement was made with the knowledge and consent of Miss Elkins, who desired that the statement should be given to the public, which has manifested so great an interest in the matter.

$100,000 for 'Frisco Churches.

Topeka, Kas., Nov. 16.—The committee of the home missions of the Methodist Episcopal church appropriated $100,000 towards the rebuilding of the church damaged and destroyed in the San Francisco earthquake. It was suggested that $100,000 more was badly needed.

Grand Duke Alexis Dead.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 16.—The news of the death in Paris of the Grand Duke Alexis was received in St. Petersburg on the 14th. It has made little impression on Russian society.

ter Changing from Coffee to Postum

Many a talented person is kept back cause of the interference of coffee th the nourishment of the body.

This is especially so with those ose nerves are very sensitive, as is en the case with talented persons. ere is a simple, easy way to get rid coffee evils and a Tenn. lady's ex- ience along these lines is worth sidering. She says:

"Almost from the beginning of the of coffee it hurt my stomach. By time I was fifteen I was almost a vous wreck, nerves all unstrung, no ength to endure the most trivial g, either work or fun.

"There was scarcely anything I ld eat that would agree with me. e little I did eat seemed to give me re trouble than it was worth. I ally quit coffee and drank hot ter, but there was so little food I ld digest, I was literally starving; s so weak I could not sit up long a time.

"It was then a friend brought me a t cup of Postum. I drank part of it d after an hour I felt as though I d had something to eat — felt engthened. That was about five ars ago, and after continuing Post- in place of coffee and gradually tting stronger, to-day I can eat and gest anything I want, walk as much I want. My nerves are steady.

"I believe the first thing that did me y good and gave me an upward art, was Postum, and I use it alto- ther now instead of coffee." "There's Reason."

METCALF STEPS OUT

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY WILL LEAVE CABINET DECEMBER 1.

LONG ILLNESS THE CAUSE

President Accepts Resignation with Regret—Truman H. Newberry of Michigan Will Be Appointed to Fill Vacancy.

Washington.—Secretary of the Navy Victor H. Metcalf Friday tendered his resignation to the president to take effect December 1 on account of ill health. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Truman H. Newberry will be named as Mr. Metcalf's successor.

For more than a year the fact that Mr. Metcalf had suffered serious illness has been well known at the navy department. Formerly of vigorous health, his friends expected that he would be able to regain his strength, but constantly recurring illness convinced him that the only course for him to pursue was to sever his connection with all active work.

Too Ill to Perform His Duties.

Mr. Metcalf has suffered from a nervous breakdown that has rendered it impossible for him to remain at his desk for any length of time, and the chronic nature of his trouble has caused him to abandon hope of recovery while burdened with the cares of office. On April 15 last, he went to California and to review the Atlantic battleship fleet. He took a long vacation, hoping to be permanently benefited thereby, returning here September 1. Upon his resumption of official duty, his illness promptly recurred and he frankly told the president that he could not remain in the cabinet.

Mr. Metcalf was thoroughly versed in naval matters, having served on the house committee on naval affairs while in congress. His first appointment under this administration was as secretary of commerce and labor, which he relinquished in order to accept the duties of secretary of the navy on December 17, 1906.

Praise from the President.

The president's letter accepting the resignation was as follows:

"My dear Mr. Metcalf: I accept your resignation with real reluctance, and only because you tell me that it is imperative that you must go on account of the state of your health. I had earnestly hoped that you would be able to continue with me throughout my term. I thank you warmly for your faithful and efficient service in both of the departments, at the head of which you have served under me. But, my dear Mr. Metcalf, you have always been more than the head of a department; you have been a cabinet minister upon whose aid and advice, and above all, on whose staunch and steadfast loyalty I could rely upon any and all occasions. No president could wish more loyal and hearty support than you have given me. I thank you for it. I shall miss you when you leave the cabinet, and I wish you well in whatever work you may undertake and wherever your life may lead.

"With regret, therefore, I accept your resignation to take effect upon the first of December."

ASST. SEC. OF THE NAVY. NEWBERRY.

Newberry Good Man for Place.

Mr. Newberry had never filled any important public office prior to his appointment as assistant secretary of the navy November 1, 1905. Before that he was in business in Detroit, Mich. The intelligent interest he has displayed in connection with his post has caused much favorable comment. Mr. Newberry has entered into the spirit of naval improvement and has co-operated, whenever possible, in the development of naval matters. He will have an opportunity to use his personal prestige with the naval affairs committees of both houses in securing desired naval legislation.

FRANCIS J. HENEY IS SHOT

PROSECUTOR OF 'FRISCO BOODLERS BADLY WOUNDED.

Saloon Man Attempts to Kill Lawyer Because Latter Brought Out Fact He Was Ex-Convict.

San Francisco.—Francis J. Heney, a leading figure in the prosecution of municipal corruption in this city, was shot and seriously injured Friday by Morris Haas, a Jewish saloon-keeper, who had been accepted as a juror in a previous trial and afterwards removed, it having been shown by the prosecution that he was an ex-convict, a fact not brought out in his examination as a venireman.

The shooting occurred in Superior Judge Lawlor's courtroom during a recess in the trial of Abraham Ruef, on trial for the third time on the charge of bribery.

At six o'clock at night Mr. Heney was conscious. He said:

"I will live to prosecute him."

The physicians in attendance on Heney expressed the opinion that he would live. It had been ascertained that the bullet, which had entered the right cheek, had lodged under the left ear, and had not entered his brain, as at first feared. Mr. Heney was taken to the Lane hospital, where he is receiving the care of skilled surgeons.

When he was arrested, Haas said he shot Heney because he had ruined him. He is a married man and has four children. In a statement made to Police Captain Duke he said:

"Heney denounced me in public, which ruined my life and branded me as an ex-convict. It was an outrage. I am the wronged man. I do not care what becomes of me now. I have sacrificed myself not for my own honor, but for those who are situated like myself. I would not have brought my four children into the world to bear such a brand if I had known that the fact that I was an ex-convict would become known. Heney ruined me. That is why I shot him."

HIRES MEN TO KILL HER MOTHER

Cold-Blooded Plot of Chicago Woman Is Exposed.

Chicago. — Plotting matricide in the most cold-blooded manner, in order to obtain $7,300, May L. Otis, 36 years old, carried her plans to the point where she believed four days would see their fulfillment, then was arrested by the men she believed her fellow conspirators.

She was to point her mother out to the man she had hired to commit the crime, that he might make no mistake. She had paid over $100 cash and signed a note for $2,400 to procure the commission of the crime. She had outlined in detail how her mother was to be done to death and had warned him that she wanted a "good job" and did not want it to be "any ambulance case."

All her planning was due to the fact that her mother, in a recent will, had made Miss Otis her sole heir. The woman's supposed fellow conspirators were the head of a private detective agency and two city detectives.

Oil Rehearing Denied.

Chicago.—The petition by the United States government for a rehearing of the appeal of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana from the $29,240,000 fine of Judge Landis was overruled Tuesday by Judges Grosscup, Baker and Seaman in the United States circuit court of appeals. In a brief opinion, delivered by Judge Grosscup, the original opinion of the court, reversing Judge Landis' decision, was upheld.

How Shall We Teach Our Children?

This question confronts every thoughtful parent whose children are approaching the age of young manhood and womanhood without a clear knowledge of certain delicate subjects which can best be imparted by fathers and mothers. With the tact and delicacy of the family physician, Dr. Henry N. Guernsey, of the Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, writes a very useful book on those subjects that should be thoroughly explained by parents, but which are more often avoided because of a mistaken delicacy of feeling. Every parent, and every young person contemplating matrimony, should avail themselves of this physician's knowledge by procuring the book, Plain Talks on Avoided Subjects, (price one dollar) from the publishers, F. A. Davis Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Literary Race.

The correspondents of most Welsh newspapers and magazines are tinworkers, colliers, shoemakers, blacksmiths, tailors, farm laborers, and others in similar humble walks of life. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SHOWING THE WEDDING GIFTS.

Charming Exhibitions Made at French Bridals.

In Paris most charming conceits are devised to enhance the effect of an exhibition of wedding gifts in the bride's home. Sometimes the furniture is removed from one or two rooms to give space to show cases, where is made a tasteful array of the most delicate parts of the trousseau, and numberless bivelots. The heavier articles are suspended from screens or round the walls from hanging ribbons, pictures, or even dados of crinkled papier velours in some subdued shade. One of the most telling arrangements is dispersal against the walls of small tables covered with mignonette-green silk, and on which are artistically displayed the bridal treasures, to each of which is attached with a pink ribbon the card of the giver. The contents of every table are partly veiled by vaporous tulle held up to the wall by some bracket lamp, high statuette, and draped at the sides with large choux in pink satin. The coloring depends evidently on the prevailing tones of the house decoration. Such a treatment is light, tasteful and not too expensive. A scheme which involves larger reception rooms and a greater ontlay of time and money consists of a triumphal arch in bamboo at the entrance to every door, often covered with climbers, whilst through the whole suite of rooms are distributed in profusion palm trees, jardinieres, tall vases and corbeilles full of flowers, giving the impression of a bower of flowers and foilage, in which are nestled the marvels of the bride's outfit and of her friends' generosity and taste.

The peasant wrote to him and called his attention to the fact that he had been on the wrong side of the street, and asked for $20 to repair the damage. The count at once acknowledged his fault apologized for it, and sent $100 instead of $20.

DAIRYMEN ASK FOR $10,000.

Legislation Asked to Prohibit Price Discrimination.

Waterloo.—The Iowa State Dairy association, before adjournment, passed important resolutions and if their prayer be granted by the general assembly and congress they will have far-reaching effects tending towards increased benefits to the dairy business and owners of cows. The resolutions were as follows:

"We recommend the state legislature make an appropriation of not less than $10,000 yearly for the use of a state dairy association, said funds to be expended for holding short courses in dairying throughout the state and in the conduct of educational meetings and campaigns among farmers. We believe the bill should be passed by the Thirty-third general assembly authorizing the appropriation by the state to provide for a fair and reasonable compensation to owners of cattle slaughtered, after having been tested and condemned as being infected with tuberculosis.

"Resolve, That this association petition the general assembly to enact a law prohibiting discriminations in prices paid for milk, cream or butter fat by any creamery in the state.

"We ask the members of congress that duties on dairy and farm products be maintained."

The next convention probably goes to Dubuque or Sioux City.

LUCAS COUNTY COMPROMISES.

Settles Its Suit Against Defunct Chariton Bank.

Chariton.—The Lucas county board of supervisors has effected a compromise settlement with the bondsmen of the defunct First National bank of Chariton whereby all litigation on behalf of the county is dropped and final settlement is made upon the following terms: The bondsmen, G. W. Larimer and C. W. Ramsey, are to pay to Lucas county $37,116.22. Of this sum $13,558.22 is to be paid within ten days. Payments from the receiver of the First National bank are to be credited upon the agreed amount of settlement and if the dividends are not sufficient to wipe out the balance of $23,558, the bondsmen are to make it good. By this settlement the county will lose about $10,000 but the court expenses are dispensed with and the county will get the use of the funds at once, as the receiver of the First National bank will pay a 25 or 30 per cent dividend within twenty days. By the terms of the settlement the bondsmen are to pay all court expenses and litigation of every nature is stopped.

BIGGEST PUBLIC SALE.

Newton & Northwestern Will Be Knocked Down to Highest Bidder.

Boone.—The biggest public sale ever conducted in Iowa, and probably in the middle west, will occur in a few weeks, when the Newton & Northwestern railroad and its numerous interests, involving millions of dollars, will be knocked down to the highest bidder. This immense public auction is for the purpose of satisfying two mortgages, one for $2,460,000 and a second for $600,000, and was ordered by Judge McPherson in federal court. The sale involves all the properties of the railroad, including coal franchises and mining interests. The sale will be conducted at the court house in Boone and will be in charge of George F. Henry of Des Moines, who was appointed standing master by Judge McPherson. The foreclosure of these mortgages is the result of proceedings started some time ago by the Old Colony Trust company, in which the American Trust company intervened.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH IOWA.

That is Query at Iowa Dairymen's Convention.

Waterloo.—In answer to his own question, "What's the Matter with Iowa?" E. R. Shoemaker, editor of the Creamery Journal and Kimball's Dairy Farmer, said in an address before the Iowa State Dairy association that Iowa needs a Prof. F. D. Coburn to propery advertise its natural resources in such a way as to attract homeseekers and investors and keep at home the folks who should stay here. He also advocated more intensive farming on smaller farms. In this way he claims that the steady decreases in the farm population of Iowa, which has been going on for ten years, will be checked, and Iowa's fertile prairies will flow with milk and money. "Iowa will always be known as a great corn state, and live stock state, and dairy state, but she is to become better known as a dairy state for the simple reason that therein lies her own salvation. Iowa must economize. She must turn from extensive to intensive farming. She must grow crops in fence corners and vacant fields, where now she is growing weeds. No state on earth but Iowa could afford to waste, absolutely waste, $40,000,000 of cornstalks every year. And Iowa cannot afford it any longer. Farmers must build silos and convert to economic uses this wastage."

GETS ARMY MANEUVERS.

Big Military Tournament Here Next October.

Des Moines.—Des Moines will have the biggest military tournament ever held in the United States next October. Definite assurance of this fact was given in a letter received from Congressman Hull by Secretary Botsford of the Commercial club. Captain Hull announces that the plan has been approved by Secretary of War Wright and General Bell, commanding the army. All that remains for Des Moines to do is to provide a place, select dates and guarantee the prize money and cost of advertising the event. The Des Moines tournament will be one of the three held in the United States next year. The others will take place at Madison Square garden, New York City, and Louisville, Ky. It will bring a large force of men to this city, representing every branch of the service. A signal corps with war balloons will be one of the features.

This company has been paying their options on land lying adjacent to the city at stated intervals for the past two years and it is now said he move for the erection of a big mill is definitely decided upon The same authority said the new mill would employ at least five hundred men on the start, while the mill was in the course of erection, and that when in running order the number would be something less.

Rockwell City, Nov. 21.—John M. Brown is guilty. A verdict of manslaughter was returned at 11:15 o'clock Friday night. Brown heard the verdict without a tremor. His attorneys declared that a motion for a new trial would be filed at once and Wednesday was given as the last day for the filing. Sentence will probably be given Monday or Tuesday. The jury retired at 9:15 following an entire day spent in listening to the closing arguments in the sensational trial. On the first ballot it was found that the twelve men were close to an agreement. The second ballot taken a few moments later showed full agreement.

A FINE PLAYTHING FOR A BABY.

UNCLE SAM SUES WOMAN

MRS. CHADBOURNE ASKED TO PAY $82,500 FOR SMUGGLING.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, of Boston, Not Mentioned in Bill—Description of Confiscated Property.

Chicago.—Mrs. Emily Crane Chadbourne, daughter of R. T. Crane, was sued Tuesday for $82,500 by the United States government, District Attorney Sims asking for the forfeiture of property which she was alleged to have smuggled into this country last August.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner of Boston, for whom, it was asserted at the time the smuggling story attained publicity, Mrs. Chadbourne had acted, was not mentioned in the bill filed by the government.

This fact was considered the most surprising thing about the action, which itself had been expected for some time. District Attorney Sims, however, declared that the government had no reason to believe from the evidence it had obtained that Mrs. Gardner had been interested in the alleged smuggling.

The $82,500 for which suit is brought is the appraised value of the goods alleged to have been smuggled. A payment of $70,409.18 has already been made as penalties. The government insists on receiving the entire $152,909.18 before it will restore to Mrs. Chadbourne the goods temporarily confiscated.

The property of which the forfeiture is asked by the government in the suit filed is described as follows:

One oil painting of "Madonna and Child."

One Italian fresco oil painting.

Two wrought-iron torch holders.

One marble bust.

Five wool and silk tapestries.

The suit filed in the district court by Mr. Sims and Assistant District Attorney Robert W. Childs, who has had charge of the Chadbourne-Gardner investigation, charges Mrs. Chadbourne with fraud. The inquiry that has been made is one that could, under the law, result in Mrs. Chadbourne's indictment by the federal grand jury and criminal prosecution, but no steps in this direction have been taken and it is believed that the duties and penalties that have been paid and the forfeiture of the valuable property are sufficient to satisfy the law and that no indictment will be sought before the grand jury.

Mr. Sims refused to discuss the possibilities of either further civil or criminal action following the suit. He said that it was yet optional with Mrs. Chadbourne to pay the government the full $152,00 or fight the suit.

akership Candidates.

he speakership of the Iowa house representatives during the Thirty- d general assembly is a matter of h discussion these days and can- ates from different counties are ar- ng to discuss the matter with r political confidants. Nels J. of Estherville, member of the rty-first and Thirty-second gener- assemblies, is the latest candidate arrive. John Sullivan, of Des nes, is another candidate active the field, also Guy Feely, of terloo, the Black Hawk member the lower house, is expected in Moines this week. W. L. Hard- representative from Woodbury nty and a well known lawyer of ux City, is also a candidate and enter the field with the formid- array of support from the al- st solid Eleventh district.

Bleakly Makes Appointments.

The positions in the office of the auditor of state, appointed by the auditor, are nearly all complete. In most instances it is reported that the positions tendered have been accepted. The work of the office, which has gone on so admirably under the administration of Governor Elect B. F. Carroll, will be continued with the same degree of excellency. The slate will be announced some time next week, it is believed. Auditor Elect J. W. Bleakly will be in the city attending the adjourned session of the Thirty-second extra general assembly and will probably make known his appointments officially at that time.

The new men added to the staff of the state auditor are C. B. Ellis of Onawa and George Galarno of Des Moines. The former succeeds W. H. Lewis and the latter Joseph H. Byrnes, who is promoted because of his conscientious and capable service to deputy auditor to succeed Amos Brandt.

While it is certain that the position of head of the insurance department has been tendered Ole O. Roe, the present incumbant, there is some doubt of his accepting the place because of the uncertainty of the tenure of the office. It is reported that but a six months' tenure is included in the appointment at this time because of the legislative acts which may occur this winter creating a separate insurance department within the state.

The new men are all reported as being highly competent and capable of filling the offices with an unusual degree of proficiency.

College Asks for $13,000.

The executive committee of the board of trustees of the Iowa State college at Ames came before the executive council with a petition for $13,000 to complete the agricultural building at the college. The council decided that it did not have the power, under the law, to grant the petition. Under the law the executive council has power to grant the trustees the right to draw against the millage taxes levied for the college in case of necessary deviation from the plans for the buildings authorized by the legislature to be erected. The present case was held not to be a deviation. No plumbing, wiring for light or heating apparatus has been installed in the building, and until it is the structure cannot be finished for occupancy and utilization. It was suggested by a trustee that the trustees go before the session next Tuesday for an act to enable completion of the structure.

Teacher Famine Will Be Broken.

The shortage in teachers for the schools in Iowa will be relieved this week by the result of the final markings made on about 2,000 examination papers in the office of State Superintendent Riggs. All year there has been considerable complaint from the rural districts that the trustees were unable to secure qualified teachers. The result was there was considerable fault found with the policy of the present administration of school affairs whereby the qualifications for teachers were raised. With the result of the final markings made this week, about 2,000 more teachers will be eligible for work in the Iowa schools.

New Speakership Contest.

Not since 1900 has there been a contest over the speakership, but the prospect this year is for one warm enough to make up for lost time. Following Speaker Bowen's administration the speakership was conceded to Mr. Eaton, who had been defeated in 1900. Following him George W. Clarke, who was elected lieutenant governor Nov. 3, was given the speakership without contest. After him N. E. Kendall was elected without a contest. But one of the reasons why the members of the legislature have gathered so early for the special session of tomorrow is the prospective contest over the speakership of the new house.

The vacancy caused by the death of Curator Charles Aldrich of the State Historical society is likely to be filled soon. A meeting of the trustees of the society, it is understood, will be called while the judges of the supreme court, who are members, are in the city. The governor, secretary of state and superintendent of public instruction are the other members. Among the leading candidates are E. R. Harlan and George H. Van Houten.

OIL KING TESTIFIES

KELLOGG BEGINS CROSS-EXAMINATION OF J. D. ROCKEFELLER.

DIRECT TESTIMONY ENDED

President of the Standard Tells of Acquisition of Other Refining Companies and Pipe Line Systems.

New York. — With the telling of the story of the first score of years of the industrial development of the Standard Oil Company, the testimony of John D. Rockefeller, president of the oil combine, on direct examination in the federal suit to dissolve the Standard Company, was brought to an unexpected close Thursday afternoon.

The head of the Standard told of the processes and causes of the company's growth up to the trust agreement of 1882 and, after he identified the parties to that agreement, counsel for the defense announced that Mr. Rockefeller had concluded his direct testimony and requested an adjournment until Friday.

Cross-Examined by Kellogg.

Friday found Mr. Rockefeller on the witness stand under the sharp fire of the cross-examination of Frank B. Kellogg, special assistant attorney general, prosecuting the case for the government. The cross-examination by the government will be confined to the period from 1862 to 1882, except where the testimony has direct bearing on developments in the company's affairs in its later period.

Counsel for the Standard let it be known Thursday night that the history of the company from the trust agreement of 1882 would be told on the witness stand by John D. Archbold, vice-president of the company, who is conversant with the combine's developments.

Mr. Rockefeller's testimony Thursday had to do principally with the acquisitions of other refining companies, together with the transportation concerns and pipe line systems which, he declared, were necessitated by the natural growth of the Standard business.

Oil Business Hazardous.

Mr. Rockefeller said that oil business was made a hazardous proposition because of the apprehension that the supply of crude oil would be exhausted. Some of the oil wells were short-lived.

Mr. Rckefeller's counsel then asked him if he recalled that a producers' union was formed at the time of the agitation regarding the South Improvement Company.

"Yes," replied Mr. Rockefeller, "it was formed a little later and was composed of a large proportion of the oil producers."

That led to an association of oil refiners who were desirous of having a supply of crude oil which was not controlled by interests antagonistic to them, and the refiners also wanted to be assured of a market for their raw material. "We desired pleasant relations with the producers," said Mr. Rockefeller.

Waited for High Price.

In December, 1872, Mr. Rockefeller said, the Producers' union and the Refiners' association entered into an agreement, the purpose of which was "to secure as high a price for the crude oil as possible," and to introduce an element of regularity into the business, which had been fluctuating greatly. Mr. Rockefeller said he was unable to give the number of producers in the union, but it included a large percentage of all of them, and the Refiners' association included a large proportion of the refiners.

By direction of his counsel Mr. Rockefeller noted that the agreement fixed the price of crude oil at five dollars a barrel at common points. The operation of that agreement, he said, stimulated an overproduction of oil beyond what the refiners could use at that price.

The temptation was great with the producers to develop more oil than they had promised to the refiners. The refiners could only take as much oil as the public would consume. As a result the producers violated the agreement and sold oil under the price which had been fixed. The agreement did not last long, said Mr. Rockefeller.

BIG STOCK YARDS UNDER BAN

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE IS TRACED TO EAST BUFFALO.

Department of Agriculture Authorities Start Vigorous Crusade to Eradicate Pest.

Buffalo, N. Y.—For the first time in their history, the East Buffalo stock yards are under the ban of a quarantine. Because two car-loads of cattle delivered in western Pennsylvania, which were found to be infected with foot and mouth disease, were traced back to East Buffalo, the federal and state authorities have placed a ban on this market pending a general clean-up of the yards and a further investigation of the outbreak of the disease so much dreaded by stockmen.

As a direct result of the conditions growing out of the investigation of the Pennsylvania shipment the word came Thursday from the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture ordering the entire states of New York and Pennsylvania to be quarantined. Pennsylvania's state authorities have declared a quarantine against New York state, and Thursday night Commissioner Pearson of the department of agriculture of this state ordered that a strict quarantine be placed on five counties in western New York, namely, Erie, Niagara, Orleans, Wyoming and Genesee.

Animals infected with the foot and mouth disease have been discovered in each of these counties by government inspectors who have been quietly at work for over a week. Practically all the cases, it is said, have been traced back to Buffalo.

Chief Melvin of the Washington bureau has been here in personal charge of the crusade to stamp out the disease, and under him are working a score of inspectors from the federal bureau of animal industry.

The federal quarantine will apply to all cattle in this state and Pennsylvania, and no one is prepared to say how long it will last. Over 200 men were put to work Friday on the East Buffalo yards disinfecting every inch of ground. This work will take at least three weeks. The state department's quarantine will be very strict.

Insane Farmer Kills Nephew.

Danville, Ky.—Hugh Thompson, a wealthy young farmer, became suddenly insane Thursday and shot and killed his nephew, Frederick Garrison, aged 18 years. The boy after being shot fired one shot at his uncle, the bullet lodging in a lower limb. The wound, it is believed, will prove fatal because of the large amount of blood lost. Thompson had only recently been released from an insane asylum.

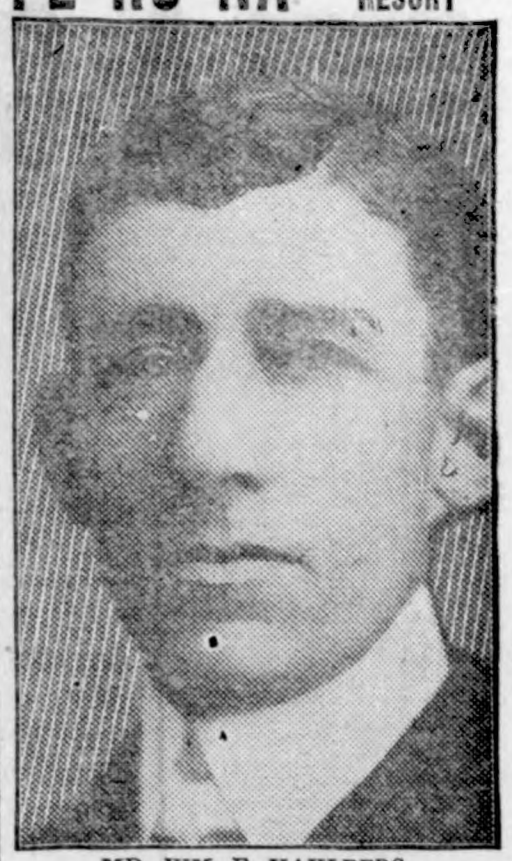
PE-RU-NA AS A LAST RESORT



MR. WM. F. VAHLBERG.

Mr. William F. Vahlberg, Oklahoma City, Okla., writes:

"One bottle of Peruna which I have taken did more toward relieving me of an aggravated case of catarrh of the stomach, than years of treatment with the best physicians.

"I had given up hopes of relief, and only tried Peruna as a last resort.

"I shall continue using it, as I feel satisfied it will effect an entire and permanent cure.

"I most cheerfully recommend Peruna to all who may read this."

Peruna is usually taken as a last resort. Doctors have been tried and failed. Other remedies have been used. Sanitariums have been visited. Travel has been resorted to.

At last Peruna is tried. Relief is found.

This history is repeated over and over again, every day in the year. It is such results as this that gives Peruna its unassailable hold upon the people. We could say nothing that would add force to such testimonials as the above. That people who have had catarrh and have tried every other remedy available, find relief in Peruna, constitutes the best argument that could be made.

NO SKIN LEFT ON BODY.

For Six Months Baby Was Expected to Die with Eczema—Now Well —Doctor Said to Use Cuticura.

"Six months after birth my little girl broke out with eczema and I had two doctors in attendance. There was not a particle of skin left on her body, the blood oozed out just anywhere, and we had to wrap her in silk and carry her on a pillow for ten weeks. She was the most terrible sight I ever saw, and for six months I looked for her to die. I used every known remedy to alleviate her suffering, for it was terrible to witness. Dr. C—— gave her up. Dr. B—— recommended the Cuticura Remedies. She will soon be three years old and has never had a sign of the dread trouble since. We used about eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment. James J. Smith, Durmid, Va., Oct. 14 and 22, 1906."

Considering the inclemency of the weather the Beilharz entertainment was largely attended at the Opera House on Monday evening last. The audience was well pleased and all laughed heartily (with the exception of those that were laced too tight). As impersonator Mr. Beilharz is hard to equal. The singing and instrumental music both Mr. and Mrs. Beilharz were grand. We would be please to have them make us a return date.

In his closing remarks Mr. Beilharz said in part: "You people of Klemme may well be proud of your Opera House. We did not expect to find so fine a house in so small a town, so well lighted and clean. It is a pleasure to address an audience in so nice a hall; furthermore I wish to thank the Committee for providing for our use this excellent Smith & Barnes Piano. It is the best instrument we have found in any Opera House this fall. Any Concert Co. would be inspire to do their best in such a hall and with such an instrument." Mr. and Mrs. Beilharz have given more than 1000 entertainments in the last 5 years, these words of praise have added weight.

SYNOPSIS.

Three girls — Elizabeth, Gabrielle and Elise—started for Canada to spend the summer there. On board steamer they were frightened by an apparently demented stranger, who finding a bag belonging to one of them, took enjoyment in scrutinizing a photo of the trio. Elise shared her stateroom with a Mrs. Graham, also bound for Canada. The young women on a sightseeing tour met Mrs. Graham, anxiously awaiting her husband, who had a mania for sailing. They were introduced to Lord Wilfrid and Lady Edith. A cottage by the ocean was rented by the trio for the summer. Elizabeth learned that a friend of her father's was to call. Two men called, one of them being the queer-acting stranger on the steamer. The girls were "not at home," but discovered by the cards left that one of the men was Elizabeth's father's friend. The men proved to be John C. Blake and Gordon Bennett. The party was told of the search for smugglers

Mary Anne proceeded to tell us, with much circumlocution and attention to detail, that the previous summer a famous band of smugglers had carried on successful operations under the very noses of our customs officials located in the little town just across the water, and had completely baffled said officials in their efforts to uphold law and justice.

She added that a police boat had recently been assigned to the station, which patrolled the shore with flashing searchlight, ready to pounce upon any unwary small craft lurking without lights in dark coves or inlets, and that a large reward had been offered for the capture of the chief offender.

"But, law!" finished Mary Anne, exultantly, "wot good does that do when 'e can stay 'igh and dry this side the border? Wot's 'e goin' to the states fur, I'd like to know, when 'e can stay 'ere, Miss Elise, and waller in di'monds?"

I admitted that he would be foolish to thus tempt Providence, and Mary Anne resumed, thoughtfully pinching up the skin on her round red arms:

"But they're lookin' fur 'im, pore feller, and the pollis is 'ungry fur the money wot'll land 'im in jail. No common man 'e is, they say, but mayhap one of these 'ere islanders wot comes fur the summer, with their steam yachts and their fine clo'es. Ah, well! Jail's no wuss fur 'im than fur the likes o' us. And seein' that the gentleman to-day was very likely lookin' and civil spoken, but quite unbeknownst to me, I wondered—beggin' your parding, Miss Elizabeth—if it was 'im I 'ear so much talk about in the village. Will you be havin' clear soup ag'in to-night, miss?"

"As you please, Mary Anne;" Elizabeth spoke absently, and joined us in the living room with an air of suppressed excitement.

"Do you think it's possible?" she inquired, laying Mr. Gordon Bennett's card on the table as though fearing it might explode.

"No, I don't," said Gabrielle, bluntly. "It's just servants' gossip. Don't think about it any more."

Of course after that we talked of nothing else, and when Lord Wilfrid and Lady Edith came up that evening we told them all about it, beginning with our experience on the steamer. Lord Wilfrid disposed of the steamer episode in one succinct word.

"Drunk," he said, with a shrug of his shoulders, and really it seemed not improbable, now that it was suggested to us.

Lord Wilfrid appeared in a new light that evening, he was so talkative and agreeable; he also corroborated Mary Anne's story about the smugglers, and gave us a good deal of information on the subject. The village was quite excited, he said, and the fishermen who hired sailboats could talk of nothing else.

"I confess," he said, with his slow drawl, "my sympathies are with the poor devil of a smuggler. He must be a clever chap, I fancy, to be worth such a large reward."

"According to Mary Anne, he can 'waller in di'monds,'" remarked Gabrielle, laughing.

"Ah, indeed!" said Lord Wilfrid. "Opulent but uncomfortable, I should imagine. Well, I wish him luck; may he—"

"Wilfrid, dear," interrupted his sister, in laughing expostulation, "and you a magistrate at home!"

"Well, suppose I am," returned Lord Wilfrid; "it is my misfortune, not my fault. And I'm sure my sympathies are nearly always with those wretched poachers we condemn so glibly."

I instantly conceived a warmer liking for Lord Wilfrid, for I thought such sentiments worthy of admiration, and I could see that Gabrielle and Elizabeth were likewise impressed. Indeed, now that he had cast aside his mantle of sulky silence, he proved himself very pleasant indeed, and even suggested sailing parties and various other ways of passing the time.

"For," he remarked, "I think this is as good a place as anywhere to stop and breathe a bit, and it's so jolly well isolated, don't you know, that one is moderately safe from one's dear five hundred friends; so I fancy it will be quite a while before we move on—provided Edith can tolerate her accommodations."

I thought I saw a shadow cross his sister's face, but she answered him gently that where he was happy she was also, so he turned to Gabrielle and told her he had hired a boat by the week and was ready to take us out at any time.

"We have a boathouse but no boat," remarked Gabrielle, "and we can't get inside it because Mary Anne's brother inconsiderately lost the key."

"Perhaps one of mine will fit," suggested Lord Wilfrid, producing his key-ring. "Let us try and see."

So we all went down the steep flight of steps to the little boathouse beneath the bluff, and waited on the slip while he tried the various keys with no success.

We Told Them All About It.

"We are right under the cottage," said Elizabeth, "and yet one can hardly see it. I don't believe I like it down here—it is so dark and creepy. Suppose we go back."

The water washed against the slip with a sullen sound, and it was undoubtedly very dark—so dark we could hardly distinguish one from another. Suddenly, however, a beam of light illuminated the little dock, so dazzling in its brilliancy that we were completely blinded and stood blinking helplessly.

"It's a searchlight," I said, with great originality, and added by way of encouragement: "It will be gone in an instant."

But it wasn't. I don't know how long we stood motionless in the white light, but it seemed an eternity to me, and Gabrielle said afterward that she felt perfectly transparent and as though her every thought was blazoned abroad for the world to read.

Lord Wilfrid leaned against the door of the boathouse, shading his eyes with his hand. Elizabeth, who stood beside him, said he swore softly under his breath. For my part, I did not blame him, for certainly it was most unpleasant; but so also was the intense darkness into which we were plunged by the unexpected removal of the light, and with one accord we made for the steps leading back to the cottage.

It was then that Elizabeth lost her nerve and gave a stifled scream. This is liable to happen at exciting moments—when she encounters a mouse or a spider, for instance; but that night, when we were talking it over in my room, she told us she could not understand why she did it just then, but she all at once felt very queer and oppressed, and relief of some sort was necessary. So she screamed in a suppressed, choking way quite heart-rending to hear, and instantly the searchlight was back again, laying bare our very souls and prying into every nook and corner of the slip and the steps leading down to it. This time we did not stand petrified, but scurried up the steps as fast as possible, and the light obligingly followed us, making a white pathway all the way back to the cottage.

Gabrielle gave a vexed little laugh as we regained the veranda; she dislikes to show the white feather at any time, but especially at a false alarm.

"One would think we had never seen a searchlight," she said, as Lord Wilfrid drew a chair forward and she sat down.

"Look!" she continued. "There is our enemy, I think."

We looked in the direction she pointed, and saw what appeared to be a very small tugboat about to vanish around the point.

"Perhaps," I suggested, "it is the boat looking for smugglers, and they suspected us. Wouldn't that be exciting?"

"No," said Elizabeth, with a little shiver; "it would be horrid. I should not like it a bit."

"Why," said Lady Edith, "this poor child is quite white and shaking, and there was nothing to be afraid of, after all. Let us go indoors. I think I would like the lamplight myself."

So we went inside, lighted the lamp with its red shade, while Lord Wilfrid told us about big game hunting in Africa, and our other guest and Elizabeth held a low-voiced conversation concerning hand-made lingerie and other subjects of mutual interest.

It seemed to me Lady Edith was tired to-night, for she was paler than usual, and sometimes her head drooped a little wearily, as though its weight of hair was burdensome. Her lips smiled readily, however, and I got so absorbed watching her dimples come and go I entirely forgot to show any interest in the pursuit of big game, which, as Gabrielle said afterward, was certainly rude on my part, for Lord Wilfrid was doing his best to be entertaining.

When at last they rose to go, and had even started down the steps of the veranda, Lady Edith turned and came back alone, laying her slender white hand on mine and slipping her other arm around Elizabeth's waist.

"I hope you will pardon me," she said, gently; "I do not mean to be officious, and of course at home we looked at such things differently—"

She paused as though she found expression difficult, and then continued with some hesitation:

"But you are just three girls living here alone, and I've been thinking about what you told us to-night, and it has made me a little uncomfortable. It is so easy to be imposed upon that were I in your place I would be very cautious about admitting promiscuous young men. Now, please don't misunderstand me, will you?"

She looked anxiously into our eyes as she spoke, and as we involuntarily smiled in response she kissed us and rejoined her brother without another word. It was her first advance beyond the ordinary courtesies of mere acquaintanceship, and we were gratified as well as surprised, for with all her grace of manner she had an air of reserve difficult to penetrate, even had we been bold enough to attempt it.

Her words carried weight, too, for when Mr. Gordon Bennett repeated his call within the week he was informed that the ladies begged to be excused, and Elizabeth wrote home that she did not like things she had heard about him, and did not think she cared to know him at all.

We sat for a long time that night by the open window in my room, watching the brightly lighted boats threading their way among the islands, for Elizabeth said the ocean seemed so wide and lonely out of their own window she did not care to look at it.

"And," she continued, pushing the sleeve of her blue kimono away from her arm, "as for that boathouse, I will never go there again after dark. I had the queerest feeling!"

"Ghosts," suggested Gabrielle, "or perhaps rats. They would have the same effect on you, wouldn't they?"

"Well, you may laugh," said Elizabeth, solemnly, "and I know I acted like a fool, but I was just sure some one was there—or something. I felt as though some one besides ourselves was breathing. Oh, I can't explain it at all, but I was next to the boathouse, and something moved inside. Maybe it was a rat, but anyhow I don't go down there any more after dark; for while I might be able to cope with men, provided I had on my best clothes and my most engaging expression, rats and mice and spiders are too much for me, and I don't care who knows it."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

NO PLACE FOR A STRAW HAT.

Beginner at Golf Quickly Convinced of the Fact.

There was a good deal of the characteristic traits of the Scotsman in old Tom Morris, the famous golfer, who has just died. He was pawky, canny and of a religious bent. Of him many stories are told. When asked for his opinion regarding the playing of golf on Sunday, Tom wisely remarked that if the player "did n' need a rest, the links did."

Beginners had always a large share of Tom's sympathy, and he was ever ready to give them sound advice. Tom was astonished one day to find a raw callant who had armed himself with a club and ball out on the links with a straw hat. "You'll never get the right swing wi' a thing like that on yer head," said Tom, and taking a club he showed the young man the proper swing. On trying it the neophyte just struck the back of his hat and knocked it off. A cap was afterward found more suitable.

New York Described by New Yorker.

New York is the dirtiest of the world's great cities and the noisiest, and the skyscrapers on which we pride ourselves are making its streets the darkest on God's footstool. Hitherto, however, we had been able to look upward—from the footstool to the throne, so to speak—and catch glimpses of the sky and of the sun or the moon, especially if we happened to be passing through a park or square. But even of this resource we are now being robbed. What with the dirt, the din and the darkness, to say nothing of the everlasting quick lunch, strap hanging, step lively scramble of our daily lives, it is small wonder that money is to be made by advertising remedies for shattered nerves and establishments for "making men over." But even such advertisers could not pay the city a price that would justify it in selling its open spaces for such use.—Letter to New York Sun.

Ugliness.

It is no paradox to say that there flourishes just now a cult of ugliness. It is not confined to literature, for witness a vast deal of the fashionable portrait painting, from some even of Mr. Sargent's presentments downward. We cannot afford to let the evil grow without protest. Fidelity to beauty is what makes art powerful for good; and ugliness, conversely, is the first stage in that broad road of decadence which passes on through shamelessness in taste and ends in immorality in conduct.

Voicing a Long Felt Want.

"You are something of an inventor, are you not?" asked the caller.

"I have done a few things in the inventing line," answered the man in the repair shop.

"Well," said the other, unwrapping a package he had brought with him, "here's an eight-day clock that has been in the family 16 years. What I want you to do is to put an alarm in it that will ring for two hours if somebody doesn't go and wind it on the morning of the eighth day."

But Cured After Doctors Said There Was No Hope.

Sylvanus O. Verrill, Milford, Me., says: "Five years ago a bad injury paralyzed me and affected my kidneys. My back hurt me terribly, and the urine was badly disordered. Doctors said my right kidney was practically dead. They said I could never walk again. I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. One box made me stronger and freer from pain. A MATTER OF HEREDITY.

Agnes Had Only Followed in the Footsteps of Her Mother.

Even if there had not been kernels of rice on her hat and a glad light of love in her eye any bachelor could have told that she was a bride. And the manner in which she spoke to her husband showed they had not been married long.

A man in the passing crowd spied the couple, and rushed over to greet the bride.

"Well, well, Agnes," he cried, extending his hand, "you don't mean to say that you're married?"

"Why—why, yes," the girl stammered, vivid color mounting to her cheeks, as she tried to defend her novel situation. "You—you know, it runs in the family. Mother was married, too."

NEW LIFE

Found in Change to Right Food.

After one suffers from acid dyspepsia, sour stomach, for months and then finds the remedy is in getting the right kind of food it is something to speak out about.

A N. Y. lady and her young son had such an experience and she wants others to know how to get relief. She writes:

'For about fifteen months my little boy and myself had suffered with sour stomach. We were unable to retain much of anything we ate.

"After suffering in this way for so long I decided to consult a specialist in stomach diseases. Instead of prescribing drugs, he put us both on Grape-Nuts and we began to improve immediately.

"It was the key to a new life. I found we had been eating too much heavy food which we could not digest. In a few weeks after commencing Grape-Nuts I was able to do my housework. I wake in the morning with a clear head and feel rested and have no sour stomach. My boy sleeps well and wakes with a laugh.

"We have regained our lost weight and continue to eat Grape-Nuts for both the morning and evening meals We are well and happy and owe it to Grape-Nuts." "There's a Reason."

MANY COME TO SEE

CUMMINS ELECTED SENATOR; GARST INAUGURATED.

CUMMINS' LAST DAY AS GOV.

Large Numbers of Members of Legislature and Other Republicans Coming.

Des Moines Nov. 23.—Many members of the legislature had arrived in the city last night and more came on every train. Accompanying them were republicans from different parts of the state, coming to the city for the purpose of attending the special session tomorrow to witness the election of Governor Cummins United states senator and the inauguation of Warren Garst governor.

Today practically will be the last one in the administration as governor of Albert B. Cummins. He will clear the decks for Governor Warren Garst. Every proposition pending before him which has been referred to him personally will be disposed of. Today he expects to name a pharmacy commissioner and the state veterinary board, and he intends also to pass on the W. A. Richards pardon case which was submitted to him last week. In addition, as a member of the executive council, he will engage in the canvass of the vote of November 3, so far as it is possible, and pending business before the council will be disposed of if possible.

The election of Governor Cummins to be United States Senator by the legislature tomorrow is in pursuance of the primary election law and its amendments passed within the last two years by the legislature which will gather to elect a senator and to justify the primary law. Its operation in this case is regarded as the most important and certain approach to popular election of senators that is possible under the constitution of the nation.

REDUCE LUMBER RATES.

Yesterday's Developments Construed to Mean a Change.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—It has developed that the representatives of lumber interests who came here to argue before the ways and means committee against the repeal of the duty on lumber or an increase of that duty have been considerably disconcerted by developments at the hearing. In the course of the hearing Chairman Payne asked questions that supporters of a repeal of the duty construed as friendly to them and that lumber interests representatives viewed in the same light. The inference is drawn that Representatives Hill of Connecticut and Crumpacker of Indiana are for reducing the tariff on lumber or wiping it out, and perhaps other republicans, too. This has led many of the lumber men to fear that the lumber interests may be made the scapegoat in the forthcoming tariff bill and it is learned from one of the most prominent of Pacific coast lumber representatives, that a change of plans has been practically made. It was the intention of the lumber interests, especially on the Pacific coast, to fight for an increase of duty. Now, they are going to fight for maintenance of the present duty, knowing they cannot hope for more than this.

DOWN MISSOURI WAY

CANADA'S RESPECT FOR LAW AND ORDER THE SUBJECT FOR FAVORABLE COMMENT.

Those who have visited Canada are always impressed with the strict observance that is given to the laws of the country, and the order that is preserved everywhere. The editor of the Gazette, of Fulton, Nev., recently paid a visit to Western Canada. He was so impressed with the conditions that he saw everywhere, that on his return home he was inspired to write as follows: "Reverence and respect for law is a dominant characteristic of the Canadian people. Wherever one goes in Canada, whether east or west, the law is supreme. The law is obeyed because it is law, seemingly, and not because violation carries a penalty. Canada enforces the law and makes every law effective. No country is more free than Canada. In name Canada is a dependency of the British Crown. In fact, it is almost a third republic. All its taxes are voted, collected and expended by the Dominion and the provinces. The nominal head of the Government is the Governor General, appointed by the English Crown. Practically his only authority is to veto the acts of parliament, which he scarcely ever exercises. Canada gives nothing to the support of the English government or the English king. She gives England the advantage in trade regulations and tariff laws, and in return receives the protection of the British army and navy. Canada enjoys the protection without sharing in the expense.

"The sale of liquor is strictly regulated. None but hotel-keepers may obtain license to vend the stuff, and before a license can be secured an applicant must prove good character and provide twenty rooms in his tavern for the accommodation of guests. The bar-rooms close at 7 o'clock Saturday evening and remain closed until Monday morning. The schools and churches in Western Canada excite admiration. Though new, Western Canada is not godless. The finest buildings in every town are the churches. Next come the school houses."

Turning to the wheat fields of Western Canada, the editor of the Laurel (Neb.) Advocate of Sept. 17th says: "I have often thought that the reason that the characters of Charles Dickens are so impressed upon the minds of his readers is because he dwells upon them so long and describes them so minutely that by the time one has waded through his long drawn out stories they are so burned into his brain that he can never forget them. It was this way with the Canadian wheat fields. Had we only seen a few the memory of them might have worn away in time, but a long drawn out experience such as we had is sure to leave an uneffaceable impression. Never while we live shall we forget the Canadian wheat fields. They call it the granary of the British Empire, and we don't blame 'em. Nobody who has seen these wheat fields can wonder at their enthusiasm." It is worth while to recall that these fields have now been harvested, and in many cases yields as high as forty and fifty bushels per acre have been marketed, while the general average has been away above 20 bushels per acre. Oats and barley have also done well, and the profits, the prices of grains being high, have paid the entire cost of the farms of many a farmer. There is now 160 acres of land given away, in addition to the 160 acres that the homesteader may purchase at $3.00 an acre. Particulars of this as well as the lowest railway rates will be given by the Canadian Government Agent.

A Terror to His Kind.

A certain congressman is the father of a bright lad of ten, who persists, despite the parental objection and decree, in reading literature of the "half-dime" variety.

"That's a nice way to be spending your time," said the father on one occasion. "What's your ambition, anyhow?"

"Dad," responded the youngster, with a smile, "I'd like to have people tremble like aspen leaves at the mere mention of my name."—Lippincott's.

Many have paid the entire cost of their farms and had a balance of from $10.00 to $20.00 per acre as a result of one crop.

Spring wheat, winter wheat, oats, barley, flax and peas are the principal crops, while the wild grasses bring to perfection the best cattle that have ever been sold on the Chicago market.

A GOOD NAME

EVERY one desires to establish for himself a good name, but it takes time to win the confidence of your fellow men. Truth and perseverance are the alternate rungs on the ladder of success, and he who reaches the top must make no false step.

There are hundreds of cough medicines with all sorts of names, each claiming to be the best, but the test of time will prove whether or not they have established the right to be called the best.

Careful selection of the drugs, intelligent and skillful compounding, the entire absence of opium, chloroform, or any other harmful ingredient, and the absolute purity of every article that goes into its composition, has built up and sustained its good name.

These are the things you should remember, and the next time you want a cough medicine, it is worth while to see that you get Chamberlain's and secure the virtues which a good name implies.

Every dealer who sells a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy guarantees it to give satisfaction or he will refund the money.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has had thirty-five years of sale and use, and has cured coughs and colds under all conditions, in all countries and climates, and the verdict today is that it has no equal.

Kissing, declares Dr. Napoleon Boston, spreads more disease than flies. We scorn his statement because we don't like his name. Reminds us of Waterloo and Bunker Hill.

A way has been found to make paper out of cornstalks. This will create a pleasant harmony for the man who likes to combine his reading with the pleasures of a corn-cob pipe.

According to the Scientific American the fact that our macadamized roads don't wear as well as those in Europe is because we don't apply the theory of the stitch in time. European highway departments watch the roads and mend them wherever and whenever they need it without allowing the damage to become important.

Now a medical expert comes forward to assert that the French heel, considered one of the greatest outrages inflicted by feminine vanity upon suffering nature, is not only proper, but highly desirable. Still, feminine vanity will not make so much of this practical vindication, as, in any event, it would have kept on wearing the French heel.

Felicitations to the cranks! Ambassador Bryce's tribute to them as not infrequently the first pioneers of great causes, is distinguished appreciation. It is scarcely so enthusiastic, however, as Dr. Holmes' earlier observation that there never was an idea started that woke up men out of their stupid indifference but its originator was spoken of as a crank.

He says Mark Twain became a good pilot, having but one fault—the excessive use of tobacco Capt. Bixby is still hale and hearty and enjoys telling of the various episodes of his eventful career upon the river.

DEAN HOWARD IS DEAD.

Head of Drake Music Conservatory Stricken While in Bed.

Des Moines.—Dean Frederick Howard, head of the Drake Conservatory of Music, was found dead in his bed at his apartments, 2506 Kingman boulevard, at 8 o'clock in the morning, Nov. 26.

Death following an attack of gastritis the night before, during which time a physician was called. The dean went to bed at 11 o'clock, fell asleep about 1 o'clock and was left by his friends sleeping peacefully. He was found by them at 8 o'clock still in death.

Dean Howard came to Drake University eight years ago from Denver, where he had been teaching music. His arrival was followed by a revival of interest in music and musical affairs in Des Moines. From a small school with but four instructors, the Drake conservatory increased to one of fourteen instructors. A beautiful music hall—Howard hall, it is called—was built, and it now stands on the campus, a firm monument of the regard with which Dean Howard was held by his associates. He was one of the leaders of the Iowa Musical society and was high in the ranks of the various musical organizations of the country.

In compliance with a request made by Dean Howard in a will executed two years ago, the body will be taken to his old home at Leicester, Mass., for interment, by Pres. Hill M. Bell, of Drake university.

BANDIT ROBS DEPOT AGENT.

Forces Newton Agent is Give up Money and Makes Him Prisoner.

Newton.—A daring bandit early Thanksgiving morning held up B. W. Yates, Rock Island station agent at Newton, and at the point of a revolver forced him to hand over all the money in the depot, amounting to about $54, then marched him down the railroad track and locked him in a box car. The Rock Island westbound limited train, due in Newton about 3 o'clock, was held up ten minutes, as the engineer was forced to step when he saw the block set at Newton. A search for the station agent proved fruitless and the train crew was obliged to telephone the chief dispatcher at Des Moines for clearance. A few moments afterwards the night hack driver at Newton heard Yates' cries and released him from the car.

COUNTY CAUSED HIS DEATH.

Such Is Charged in Suit Filed at Cedar Falls.

Iowa Falls.—One of the biggest damage suits brought against a county in this part of the state in years has been instituted against Wright county and will be heard at the December term of the district court, and on account of the damages demanded it is possible the case will be taken into the federal courts for adjudication. Last fall Clarence Schaffer was killed in an accident caused by a steam threshing outfit going through a county bridge. It is claimed that the county failed to keep the bridge in proper condition, and the administrator of the young man's estate has filed a suit, claiming $20,000 damages for the young man's death.

YOUNG WIFE DIED IN FIRE.

Rushes Into Flaming House Near Mount Ayr.

Mount Ayr.—Mrs. Monroe Newton, residing on a farm three miles from this city was burned to death while she was trying to recover some articles from her home while it was a mass of flames. The fire caught from a defective flue and had made good headway when Mrs. Newton without warning rushed into the flames. She was seen to fall, pinioned beneath heavy timbers and was burned to death. When recovered the body was beyond recognition as that of a human form. Mrs. Newton was 22 years of age, and recently married.

Church Profits By Will.

Burlington.—The will of the late Mrs. Eliza A. McConnell was probated in the district court. It reveals the fact that she has bequeathed the sum of $3,000 to the First Methodist church of this city for the purpose of erecting a new parsonage house on the corner of Court and Fifth streets. The bequest is conditional upon the terms that the church organization also raise $3,000 for this purpose inside of two years.

FAINTS AT JUDGE'S WORDS.

Sister of Sentenced Gowrie Murderer Falls.

Fort Dodge.—A tragic scene was enacted in district court when Judge Wright sentenced Wilbur Carr to Fort Madison penitentiary for life for the murder of Tom Nicholson, town marshal of Gowrie, last spring. In pronouncing sentence the judge acknowledged that he had spent many wakeful nights in determining the matter and he confessed that it was the hardest task that ever came to him.

When sentence was pronounced, a sister of Carr fell in a dead faint, striking her head against the rail and causing the blood to flow.

Carr was a young tough of Gowrie. He had attempted to kill several men in recent years, and when the town marshal arrested him for fighting, he resisted and broke away. Returning home he reloaded his shotgun shells with heavier shot and then went out to look for the marshal, whom he met on a business street of the town soon after. Without warning he emptied the contents of the gun into him. The officer died in his tracks. Carr was hustled to this city to escape the fury of the mob which gathered.

SELL DENISON HOSPITAL.

Plan on Foot Whereby it Becomes a Catholic Institution.

Denison.—A movement is on foot whereby the Denison hospital, built by the Denison Improvement company last year, may be sold to the Rev. Father Farrely of St. Rose of Lima Catholic church, who will turn the same over to the sisters of that church. About a year ago one John O'Connor died here, leaving his fortune of about $15,000 to Father Farrelly to be used by him for charitable purposes. Father Farrelly has since been seeking for an opportunity to invest the money and yet have it remain in Denison, and now that the opportunity presents itself he is anxious that the deal go through. He has secured an option on over $3,000 worth of stock now, and at a meeting of the hospital stockholders the members signified their willingness to sell the entire stock to him.

TAX REVISIONISTS.

Conference Is to be Held in Capital City Dec. 8-9-10-11.

Sioux City.—John H. Jackson, president of the Iowa Tax Revision association, has prepared an announcement of a conference which is to be held in Des Moines, Dec. 8, 9, 10 and 11, under the joint auspices of the Iowa Tax Revision association, the Commercial club of Des Moines, and the Greater Des Moines committee. The taxation of mortgages, of national, state, savings and private banks of terminal railway properties, of corporation stock, and the need of a state tax commission will be discussed by able men. The programme also calls for a discussion of the good road movement, legislation providing for trust companies in Iowa, the improvement of Iowa waterways, the viaduct legislation for larger cities and state promotion by state funds.

MAY GO TO COLFAX.

Epworth Institute Convention and Assembly.

Des Moines.—Hereafter the Epworth league workers in Iowa may hold their state institute, state biennial convention and Epworth assembly jointly at Colfax. This merger may take place next year when the assembly proposes to make an institute a part of the week's programme at Colfax. By indorsing all Epworth league institutes in the state the league convention practically placed its official indorsement on the proposed institute at Colfax. This institute is a departure from the regular educational and entertainment programme which is given each year at the Colfax assembly grounds. The directory board has secured two of the best known educators in the general Methodist church to have charge of this institute departmental work.

Haul $175,000 in One Dray Load.

Marshalltown.—The First National bank has taken possession of its fine new quarters, which are said to be one of the most elaborate and exquisite furnished banking homes in the state. In moving from the old bank building one load of $175,000 in currency was taken, and to prevent any possibility of attack, armed guards rode in front and at the rear of the dray.

DAWN.

LAMPHERE GUILTY OF ARSON

IS SENTENCED TO PRISON FOR TWO TO 21 YEARS.

Verdict Is a Compromise—Several Jurors Held Out Long for Life Sentence for Murder.

Laporte, Ind. — Ray Lamphere, charged with the murder of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her three children, by setting fire to the Gunness house April 28, was found guilty of arson Thursday evening by the jury which had the case since 5:30 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Within five minutes after the verdict was reported, Judge Richter had sentenced the defendant to the state penitentiary at Michigan City for an indeterminate term of from two to 21 years. He will be taken to Michigan City at once to begin his sentence.

Attorney Worden for the defense said that a motion for a new trial would be made, and should it be refused, an appeal to the Indiana supreme court would follow. The Indiana supreme court is two years behind in its work and so this case could not be reached until after Lamphere had served the minimum time of his sentence.

The verdict was something of a compromise. Several members of the jury, it is understood, held out long for murder in the first degree with a life sentence. So far as could be learned, none was for hanging.

Lamphere Thursday night said that he was confident the dead body in the fire was Mrs. Gunness' regardless of what other people may think. He reiterated his innocence of setting fire to the house, though admitting that he was on the road and saw the fire that night. He also declared that he did not see Mrs. Gunness kill Helgelein.

"I have no complaint to make about the verdict. Things looked pretty blue, but the verdict might have been worse."

THREE NEGROES ARE LYNCHED.

Mob at Tiptonville, Tenn., Hangs Slayers of Officer.

Union City, Tenn.—The little town of Tiptonville, bordering on Reelfoot lake, which has been the scene of many stirring incidents the past month, witnessed the lynching, late Tuesday afternoon, of three negroes, who were arrested in the morning for murdering Special Deputy Sheriff Richard Burrus, and fatally wounding Deputy John Hall.

The negroes were Marshall Stineback, Edward Stineback and Jim Stineback.

These brothers created a disturbance at a religious meeting near Tiptonville Saturday night. When the two officers attempted to arrest them a fight ensued in which the officers were shot.

Hannah Elias' "Angel" Dies.

New York. — John R. Platt, the retired glass manufacturer who four years ago vainly sued Hannah Elias in the supreme court to recover $685,385, money which he alleged he had spent on the negress since he became acquainted with her in 1896, died Thursday at the home of his daughter here in his eighty-ninth year.

Manila.—The coasting steamer Ponting, carrying a large number of laborers from Narvacan to the rice fields in Pangasinan province, struck a rock and sank Friday night during a storm off the town of San Fernando in Union Province. It is estimated that a hundred of the passengers and crew of the Ponting were drowned. The steamer Vigcaya rescued 55.

I listened in silent astonishment, and Mrs. Graham paused with a short laugh.

"Pray excuse me," she said; "you see, I'm from the south, and I love the warmth, the flowers, and the many, many trees. My child is there, too. You could not expect me to leave him in Virginia and be happy in Canada, could you?"

"Why not bring him to Canada also?"

"Oh, no, no!" she said, with unnecessary vehemence. "He is better there—far better. See, this is his picture. Do you wonder I am rebellious at the separation? My mother writes that he is quite well and happy, and no longer frets for me. Think of that! He is already learning to do without me."

"He is like his father," I said, studying the laughing little face.

"Very like," she replied; "very, very like. Do you think," she continued slowly, "that the rearing of a child determines its after life? I mean, do you believe in environment or heredity?"

I looked from the picture in my hand to the tense face of the mother.

"I do not know," I faltered. "You see, I have never thought about it."

"Of course you have not!" she exclaimed. "Why should you? And how silly in me to get started on my hobby so soon! I am apt to think every one is as much intereested in children as I am, but I suppose that is the way with all mothers. A childless woman loses both the greatest pleasure and the greatest pain in life, and I do not know whether to pity or envy her."

There was a movement in the room above, and she held out her hand for the picture.

"I will put it away," she said, hurriedly; "and let us talk of something else. Mr. Graham thinks I allow the boy to absorb me to the exclusion of everything else, and perhaps he is right."

Mr. Graham was coming downstairs now. I listened to the descent of his slippered feet, and speculated idly whether he breakfasted every morning at 11. He was evidently surprised to see me, and, I thought, not overpleased, although there was no lack of cordiality in his greeting.

"So you caught me napping!" he remarked. "The fact is, I'm a lazy sinner at the best of times—eh, Juliet? I'm extra late to-day, though, but as I only eat a bit of fruit with my roll and coffee, Mrs. Graham says it is no matter if our slavey does growl."

"You don't look as though you lived on rolls and coffee," I remarked, by way of keeping up the conversation.

"Oh, I make it up at lunch and dinner, I assure you. Isn't this a jolly little box?"

He gazed about the bare room with as much pleasure as though it contained the luxuries of a palace, and continued cheerfully:

"Just look out of the window—how's that for a view? And then the air we breathe night and day! Pure ozone—none of your strained, adulterated products, I can tell you! Already Mrs. Graham is like a different creature."

I glanced curiously at Mrs. Graham, but she refused to meet my eye.

"I have just been saying, Harry," she remarked, "how different this air is from the south, and how invigorating I find ."

I smothered a surprised ejaculation, and rose to go. Surely my new friend was rather bewildering.

"Oh, I say," exclaimed Mr. Graham, "just wait a moment till I drink my coffee and I'll walk along with you. I'm going to the village for the mail."

As the postoffice was my ultimate destination also, I resumed my chair, and Mrs. Graham and I carried on a desultory conversation until he returned, hat in hand, and announced himself ready.

"You will come and see me often, will you not?" she said, holding my hand for a moment. "And you will not mind if I do not always return your visits? I do not go out very much."

"Nonsense!" returned her husband. "Rousing is just what you need. She shouldn't be such a recluse, should she?"

He put the question in a laughing voice, but it was evident he was really annoyed, so I started for the door, fearing I might unwittingly introduce another unwelcome subject if I lingered any longer.

I glanced furtively at Mr. Graham as we walked along, and more than once found him inspecting me in like manner. The third time I caught his eye he laughed good-naturedly.

"Both taking stock," he remarked, with calm nonchalance, "and both caught in the act. Well, do I pass muster?"

"I hope I have not been rude," I returned, a little vexed at his tone of easy familiarity; but he only laughed again, and began to talk about the climate and the country, showing a knowledge of the coast which surprised me.

"Surely," I exclaimed, "you have not learned all this since you have been here?"

"Oh, no," he returned; "I'm an old stager. The fact is, I spent several summers here when I was a young chap, and I'm very keen about it indeed. The sea regularly calls to me, and I'm never quite happy away from it."

"And Mrs. Graham?"

"Well, she don't know much about it as yet, but she's learning. I can't induce her to get into a boat, though—more's the pity."

"You are fond of sailing?"

"Very fond. When I get out in my catboat I have no idea of the flight of time."

I had a sudden vision of his wife's figure waiting on the little dock. Doubtless she was destined to pass many anxious, expectant hours before the end of the summer.

Mr. Graham put our letters in his pocket with his own, for safe keeping, and we turned our faces homeward.

On the outskirts of the village we met Lady Edith Campbell, sauntering along under her white parasol, the personification of dainty womanhood. She stopped to speak to me, and I was about to introduce my companion when, to my surprise, she held out her hand cordially.

"Why, Mr. Graham!" she exclaimed. "What are you doing in this remote corner of the world, and do you mean to cut your old friends?"

"I was so astonished, Lady Edith, that I doubted the evidence of my eyes. What brings you here, may I ask?"

"Wilfrid and I are touring for his health. Is Mrs. Graham with you? How very charming! We all crossed from England together this spring," she explained for my benefit, "and we got to know each other very well, as people do on shipboard. Where is Mrs. Graham, and may I not go and see her this morning?"

Mr. Graham hesitated perceptibly, but I settled the question by holding out my hands for the letters and announcing that I meant to take a short cut to the cottage, and would see them again soon.

As usual, the girls were on the veranda, and I dropped the mail in Elizabeth's lap and flung myself exhaustedly into the hammock.

"I don't like paying visits," I remarked, "and I just hate taking walks with other people's husbands."

"Oh, I don't know," replied Gabrielle. "I rather like married men—they are so safe. They never suspect you of designs on them if you are pleasant, you know, and—"

"Why," interrupted Elizabeth, who had been turning over the mail, "what's this? What have you been buying, Elise? I'm going to look at it."

She held in her hand a small tissue-paper package about the size of an ordinary note envelope, and before I could disclaim any responsibility for it she had opened it and was examining the contents.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, "look at this."

And, nothing loath, we joined her on the steps and looked also. The little package contained a small piece of blue ribbon, and carefully fastened to it was a ring of yellow hair. Such pretty hair it was, too! It might have come from the head of a little child, it was so soft and curled so daintily. In the sunshine it glittered like spun gold.

Elizabeth put her finger under the shining ringlet and looked at me doubtfully.

"Where did you get it," she inquired, "and what are you going to do with it?"

"I never saw it before," I replied, thoroughly puzzled.

Gabrielle lifted the ribbon, which was attached at the top to a piece of white note paper, evidently for the purpose of holding it straight.

"There is writing on it," she announced, and we literally put our heads together to decipher the words closely written in pencil.

"'I need you,'" read Elizabeth. "'Do not delay.'"

"There is more," I continued; "listen:

"'And another voice is calling,
Oh, it cometh from the sea,
With an undertone of danger—
But there's work for you and me.'"

"What does it mean?" questioned Gabrielle. "Elise, you brought it here; you must know."

"Indeed I don't! I got the mail and—"

I paused as a sudden light dawned upon me.

"It's his," I exclaimed lucidly; and went on to explain that Mr. Graham had given me our mail very hurriedly, as Lady Edith was waiting for him, and doubtless the little package had slipped in between two letters.

Elizabeth was folding the tissue paper carefully about the piece of ribbon.

"It is his, of course," she said, "and we must return it. But, oh, dear! how I wish I had not opened it!"

"What I want to know," remarked Gabrielle, who was of a very inquiring disposition, "is this: Why does Mr. Graham carry a piece of yellow hair around in his pocket, when his wife's hair is almost black?"

"I wish I had not opened it," repeated Elizabeth, who was really troubled. "How shall I ever explain doing it? And to whom shall we return it?"

We discussed the question long and anxiously, and finally determined to inclose the package in an envelope addressed to Mr. Graham, and send it to the cottage by Mary Anne, with a verbal message that he had given it to us by mistake.

"And," concluded Gabrielle, "we won't ask any questions as to whose hands it falls into, although I should like to know all about it."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

GOOD FORTUNE CAME TOO LATE.

Lifelong Unfortunate Killed Himself at Moment of Luck's Turn.

A French provincial newspaper tells a story of the irony of fate. The hero was a notary's clerk, named Lemercier, who had a remarkable series of reverses of fortune.

He seems to have been a hoodoo, for something was bound to go wrong with every firm he joined in the capacity of clerk or cashier. Always ill paid and wretchedly unhappy, the youth was in turn a gardener, a porter, a carter and anything else that enabled him to buy bread, till after 15 years of a hand-to-mouth struggle he returned to his native village of Breval, near Mantes, and was taken in by a charitable person. In vain he sought for work, and he contracted some unavoidable small debts.

The other morning an imperative knocking at the door announced the emissaries of the law. The wretched Lemercier barricaded himself in and then hanged himself. When a locksmith had broken open the door Lemercier was dead. The intruder had not come to arrest him, but to announce that a distant relative had left him a legacy of $5,000.

Men and Women Friends.

Men prefer men to women for friends, because between them there is a sense of equality that is absent from all their relations with the opposite sex. Men, moreover, disliking the way women treat women, confide in each other with knowledge that their confidence is more likely to be respected than when they intrust their secrets to a woman. The sense of honor among men, their antipathy to fidgets and agitation about trifles, provides a larger stock of the raw material of friendship between men than that with which nature has provided the opposite sex.

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

As further inducement to settlement of the wheat-raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre. These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success. A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat-fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements, and local markets good.

HITCHCOCK CHOSEN

WILL BE POSTMASTER GENERAL IN TAFT'S CABINET.

HAS ACCEPTED THE PLACE

Republican National Chairman First One Selected Because of His Ability to Advise the President-Elect.

Hot Springs, Va.—Frank H. Hitchcock has been offered and has accepted the position of postmaster general in the Taft cabinet that is to be.

The official announcement of this conclusion regarding the first cabinet selection of President-elect Taft doubtless will not be made until Mr. Taft has completed his cabinet, at which time it will be announced en bloc. Because of this view of the situation no expression regarding the selection of Mr. Hitchcock was obtainable for publication from either Mr. Taft or the Republican national chairman. There were many reasons, it was pointed out, why it was expedient that Mr. Hitchcock's status should be fixed, at least so far as the principals are concerned, and a complete understanding is known to exist between them. As chairman of the Republican national committee, Mr. Hitchcock became more familiar than any other person with the political phase of questions likely to arise at the beginning of the Taft administration and the knowledge he gained regarding the personnel of the party will be of great service to Mr. Taft throughout his administration.

Besides these reasons the national chairman admittedly possesses a comprehensive as well as a technical knowledge of postal affairs, gained by a protracted experience as first assistant and acting postmaster general. Mr. Hitchcock, accompanied by Charles H. Boynton of New York, left here Friday night for Washington, where Saturday night he was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the executive and advisory committees of the national committee. He then will visit headquarters in New York. It is altogether probable that from this time on Mr. Hitchcock will be frequently in conference with Judge Taft.

ACTRESS ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Mrs. Eleanor Cowper Shoots Herself in New York Hotel.

New York.—Mrs. Eleanor Merron Cowper, a widely-known playwright and actress, shot herself in her room at the St. Regis hotel Friday and will probably die. She was a protege and business partner of the late James H. Wallick, manager and actor, who killed himself at his home in Middletown, N. Y.

Before shooting herself, Mrs. Cowper wrote letters to her lawyer, Judge Herbert B. Royce of Middletown, and to John Hood, manager of the King Edward hotel in West Forty-seventh street, where she formerly lived, advising them of her intention to kill herself. A brief history of her life, largely devoted to recounting her career on the stage, was found in her effects.

Elopers Are Given $50,000.

New York.—Pleased at his son's pluck in defying parental authority to the extent of wedding the girl he loved, whether or no, Capt. John Fleming, a wealthy contractor and prominent Tammany Hall man, after his first anger had cooled, summoned the couple to him Tuesday and placed a check for $50,000 in his son's hand.

"You're all right, my boy," said Capt. Fleming. "I'm proud of you because you went right ahead and married the girl you love. Now go where you like and don't come back until you have spent this."

PACT WITH JAPAN IS MADE

AGREEMENT COVERS POLICY OF NATIONS IN PACIFIC.

America and Mikado's Country to Defend China's Integrity by Every Peaceful Means.

Washington.—Despite official reticence, information from reliable sources has been obtained of an agreement of far-reaching importance between the United States and Japan covering the policy of the two countries in the Pacific.

The agreement is based on the idea of encouraging and defending free and peaceful commercial development in the Pacific. It contains not only a mutual guaranty to respect each other's territorial possessions there, but defines the attitude of the two countries towards China, binding each to defend by every peaceful means China's independence and integrity, and to give equal commercial opportunity in the Chinese empire to all nations. But more important still, the agreement, in the event of complications threatening the status quo, binds the United States and Japan to consult each other with a view to acting together.

The agreement has been drawn up in the form of a declaration and consists of five articles, of which the following is an accurate and faithful description. The first article gives expression to the wish of the two governments to encourage the free and peaceful development of their commerce in the Pacific. The second is a mutual disclaimer of an aggressive design, and contains also a definition of the policy of each government, both as directed to the maintenance of the existing status quo in the Pacific, and the defense of the principle of equal opportunity for commerce and industry in China. The third article contains a statement of the consequent "firm" reciprocal resolution of each government each to respect the territorial possession in the Pacific of the other. In the fourth article the United States and Japan express their determination, "in the common interest of all the powers," in China to support "by all peaceful means at their disposal" the independence and integrity of China and the principle of equal commercial and industrial opportunity for all nations in the empire. The fifth article mutually pledges the two governments, in the case of "the occurrence of any event threatening the status quo, as above described, or the principle of equal opportunity, as above defined," to communicate with each other for the purpose of arriving at a mutual understanding with regard to the measures they may consider it useful to take.

STEAMER RAMMED AND SUNK.

Disaster in Fog Off Sandy Hook Costs Four Lives.

New York.—In the thick of a fog off Sandy Hook Thursday the stout steel freighter Georgic of the White Star line rammed and sank the lightly-laden Panama line steamer Finance, outward found, with 86 passengers. The Finance went down within ten minutes after the collision, carrying to their death three of her passengers and one of the crew.

The rest of the passengers, who included 19 women and 14 children, as well as others of the crew, were rescued by the boats of the Georgic. The freighter was not damaged.

Of the passengers lost, one was a woman, Miss Irene Campbell of Panama, who clung frantically to the rail of the sinking vessel and could not be persuaded to release her hold, nor were the men who manned the small boats able forcibly to remove her.

12 WEDDINGS, ONE DIVORCE.

Startling Statistics on Legal Separations in United States.

Washington.—Higher divorce rate in the United States than in any of the foreign countries where statistics are available, is announced by the census bureau, which in a bulletin just issued, says that at least one marriage in twelve in this country ultimately terminates in divorce.

The report covers the 20 years from 1887 to 1906, inclusive. From 1887 to 1906 there were 12,832,044 marriages and 945,625 divorces, against 328,716 divorces for the preceding 20 years. Divorce is now 2½ times as common, compared with the married population, as it was 40 years ago. Utah and Connecticut are the only two states showing decreased divorce rate. Desertion caused 38.9 of the total divorces in the 20 years.

DISEASE IS FATAL

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE MAY INFECT ALL LIVE STOCK.

EVEN MAN MAY BE STRICKEN

Department of Agriculture Is Leaving No Stone Unturned To Stamp Out Malady.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—The dangerous nature of the foot and mouth disease, which is just now threatening grave ravages in Pennsylvania and other states and which may spread over a wide area if not controlled, is set forth in a bulletin that has just been issued by Dr. D. E. Salmon and Dr. Theobald Smith of the department of agriculture. This bulletin makes it clear why Secretary Wilson and his aides are leaving no stone unturned to crush out the contagion at the outset.

The Foot and Mouth disease is almost unknown in this country. It is an old-timer in Europe, where the Germans have contended with it since 1764. It is an infectious disease. It prevails chiefly among cattle, sheep, swine and goats, less frequently among horses and still less often among fowls and dogs. The affection is characterized by a moderate constitutional disturbance with fever and vesicles or ulcers on the mouth, especially in the upper jaw, which in cattle is toothless. The breaking of the blisters leaves ulcers which are so painful that afflicted animals do not eat or drink. Ulcers of the same type appear on the foot between the cleft toes and on the udder. It is a general infection of the whole animal. They drawl, hang their heads and ears, shrink in their milk, which is infected but not strongly and excretions are highly contagious. The disease is carried by cattle driven along the roads or carried on cars, by human beings in their clothes, by tools and other farm implements and by walking over ground that has been tread by infected cattle. In cases where human beings are attacked, the symptoms resemble those observed in animals but are seldom fatal.

138 MINERS DEAD IN ALL.

Only Twenty-Five Bodies Recovered From the Shaft.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 30.—Twenty-five bodies, all but two of them mutilated and a number of them dismembered, were taken from the mine of the Pittsburg-Buffalo coal company at Marianna, forty miles south of here, where an explosion occurred Saturday killing many men and casting into gloom what was until then considered the model mining town of the world. There is no doubt that the death list will reach 138 men. Officials of the company admitted that 133 men went down the shaft to work. Miners and others familiar with the number of men generally employed in the mine say the death list will exceed the company's estimates by at least fifty. It is estimated that at least one-fourth of the vicims are Americans.

Judge Taft Will Preside.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—President-elect William H. Taft has accepted an invitation to preside over and address a joint conference of the national conservation commission with the governors of the states in this city December 8, an event which brings together an assemblage of the nation's leading men in commercial, financial ,and political activity, and whose importance may be expected to rival the noted White House conservation conference held by President Roosevelt last May.

Wife Slayer Executed.

Auburn, N. Y., Nov. 30.—William Robert Brasch, the Rochester wife murderer, in whose case Governor Hughes refused to interfere, was electrocuted in Auburn prison early Saturday. The crime for which Brasch was executed was the murder of his wife, Roxanna, whom he pushed into the Erie canal at Rochester on the night of June 15, 1906. He killed her that he might marry May Gilmore of Defiance, O.

Floods in Oklahoma.

Guthrie, Okla., Nov. 30.—As the result of a forty-eight hour downpour in the valley of the Cottonwood river and its tributaries the Cottonwood overflowed here. Several hundred homes are partially under water in West Guthrie and 3,000 people are homeless. The river at 6 o'clock last night was one foot higher than ever before in its history and rising ten inches an hour.

Women Own Nearly Half.

New York, Nov. 30.—Women own 47 per cent of the stock of the Pennsylvania railroad, with a value of more than $148,000,000. Thus nearly half of the semi-annual dividend of the road, $9,437,839, which is being distributed goes to women.

Prefer Cash to Checks.

The bank check has taken small hold as yet upon the citizens of Mexico, especially when amounts of less than $1,000 are concerned. They consider it much easier to pay spot cash than to give a check for amounts of $50 and $100 and maintain with some amount of reason that a business deal can be put through with better advantage when the cash is in sight.

BAD ITCHING HUMOR.

Limbs Below the Knees Were Raw—Feet Swollen—Sleep Broken—Cured in 2 Days by Cuticura.

"Some two months ago I had a humor break out on my limbs below my knees. They came to look like raw beefsteak, all red, and no one knows how they itched and burned. They were so swollen that I could not get my shoes on for a week or more. I used five or six different remedies and got no help, only when applying them the burning was worse and the itching less. For two or three weeks the suffering was intense and during that time I did not sleep an hour at a time. Then one morning I tried a bit of Cuticura. From the moment it touched me the itching was gone and I have not felt a bit of it since. The swelling went down and in two days I had my shoes on and was about as usual. George B. Farley, 50 South State St., Concord, N. H., May 14, 1907."

DRESSING THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

The happiest and most exciting time at Christmas for young and old is when the tree beams forth in all its glory and splendor. There is great pleasure for the elders in dressing it in its gayest raiment. If the full beauty is to be brought out it should be kept until night. It is said that 150,000 Christmas trees will be brought into the American market. Hemlock, cedar, pine and spruce are all good for the purpose. The base can be covered with cotton batting sprinkled with diamond dust, and every branch may be laden down with the same artificial snow. Incandescent electric lights are becoming more popular each year as they are safer. However, many prefer the twinkling of the candles. Colored balls and tinsel are draped from every branch, and gayly dressed dolls and toys of all sorts sway in the air. Then there must be cornucopias of red and gold, filled with candy. The largest presents and mysterious packages can be heaped around the foot of the tree. Every package should be wrapped in white paper and tied with brilliant red ribbon. Many dollars are spent each year for elaborate decorations, but many attractive and effective ornaments may be made at home, such as strings of popcorn, cranberries, gilded and silver nuts, paper flowers, etc., which all add to the splendor of the Christmas tree.

A Dangerous Case of Kidney Complaint and How It Was Checked.

Mrs. Lucy Quebeck, Mechanic St., Hope Valley, R. I., says: "Eight years ago I contracted severe kidney trouble and my back began to ache continually. Every day it seemed worse. The least pressure on my back tortured me, and I could not stoop without a bad twinge. The kidney secretions passed irregularly with pain, and I bloated badly. My head swam and spots flitted before my eyes. One doctor said I was incurable. However, I found prompt relief when I started using Doan's Kidney Pills, and the troubles I have related gradually disappeared."

TWO GOOD STORIES BY BARRIE.

One Told by Successful Author Is Decidedly Against Himself.

Mr. J. W. Barrie, the author of "What Every Woman Knows," tells a good story against himself.

A lady of his acquaintance had taken a friend to see one of his plays, and, quite astonished, he asked her why she did so.

"Oh," was the reply, "it's such a quiet street for the horses!"

He also tells of a playgoer who received no response to his repeated requests to a lady in front of him to remove her huge hat.

At length, exasperated, he said: "If you won't take off your hat, my dear madam, will you be so kind as to fold back your ears?"—Woman's Life.

"Six years ago I was in a very bad condition," writes a Tenn. lady, "I suffered from indigestion, nervousness and insomnia.

"The first morning I left off coffee I had a raging headache, so I decided I must have something to take the place of coffee." (The headache was caused by the reaction of the coffee drug—caffeine.)

"Having heard of Postum through a friend who used it, I bought a package and tried it. I did not like it at first but after I learned how to make it right, according to directions on pkg., I would not change back to coffee for anything.

"When I began to use Postum I weighed only 117 lbs. Now I weigh 170 and as I have not taken any tonic in that time I can only attribute my recovery of good health to the use of Postum in place of coffee.

"My husband says I am a living advertisement for Postum. I am glad to be the means of inducing my many friends to use Postum, too."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

LET EAST AND WEST GET TOGETHER.

"The average American, it seems to me, if he considers the matter at all, gives only a passing thought to the resources of the West and does not stop to realize its enormous actualities—what already has been accomplished and what is yet to be done."

—Paul Morton.

The "West" I speak for, is the great Pacific Northwest, of which the marvelously progressive city of SEATTLE is mistress. I ask every ambitious, conservative man of the Central West to begin now to give some thought hither, where elbow room is so wide and opportunities so many; to this farthest West, so rich in natural resources, as yet unscratched; into which the rapidly swelling surplus population must flow—will want to flow. I want to send YOU particular information concerning the one greatest, inevitable fortune maker of all—Seattle Central Business Property. Please write to me now.

FRANK T. HUNTER, President,

THE TRUSTEE COMPANY, Seattle, Wash.

THEY HAD NO CHRISTMAS

There is one place on the Pacific an where there is no Christmas. avelers toward the orient who have ut half way completed their jour- and going to bed on the evening he twenty-fourth wake the next day the morning of the twenty-sixth. e twenty-fifth—Christmas day— lishes completely. It goes as ugh it never existed, which is true. All travelers on the broad bosom of Pacific making westward trips are thus cheated out of a holiday. ly those in ships which reach the hundred and eightieth degree of gitude on Christmas eve are robbed their Christmas. Those traveling the opposite direction have two ristmas days in succession. So ther Time is not altogether heart- s in playing tricks on Santa Claus. An experienced navigator explains mystery of the missing Christmas west-bound travelers and the extra letide for those bound east thus:

"In just about the middle of the cific is the one hundred and eightieth degree of longitude, and when that imaginary line is reached the westward traveler drops one day out of his calendar for the year. That line crosses the antipodes or point on the earth's surface which is precisely opposite to Greenwich, Eng., the place at which by common consent of all nations the counting of time begins. At noonday, when the sun is directly overhead at Greenwich, at other points to the westward the time will be earlier by one hour for each 15 degrees of longitude, so that when 180 degrees is reached it will be midnight.

"Twelve hours have thus been gained, and the other 12 would be added if the journey around the globe were completed. So by universal agreement the twenty-fifth of December would be dropped by all navigators reaching the fatal line on the previous day, and travelers would be cheated out of their Christmas at the only place on the earth's surface where such a thing could happen."

A GOOD NAME

EVERY one desires to establish for himself a good name, but it takes time to win the confidence of your fellow men. Truth and perseverance are the alternate rungs on the ladder of success, and he who reaches the top must make no false step.

Careful selection of the drugs, intelligent and skillful compounding, the entire absence of opium, chloroform, or any other harmful ingredient, and the absolute purity of every article that goes into its composition, has built up and sustained its good name.

These are the things you should remember, and the next time you want a cough medicine, it is worth while to see that you get Chamberlain's and secure the virtues which a good name implies.

Good Timber for State Supt.

Hancock county possesses a man with the educational, experimental and executive qualifications second to none for state superintendency of Iowa's public schools. We refer to County Supt A. M Deyoe of Garner. He is a man big enough broad enough and with an experience wide enough to cover all the phases of a successlul state supt.

His extensive work in the county superintendent's office has given him an insight into the work, such as no city superintendent can hope to acquire before entering into the state superintendent s work. It is the rural schools that need the guiding hand of a practical common school man, not the graded schools of the cities and towns. Give us a man in touch with the rural schools of the state, one who knows their needs and one who would be fearless in carrying out the needed reforms. Such a one is Co. Supt. A M. Deyoe, of Hancock County. We nominate him for the position two years hence.--Corwith Hustler.

The above article we clip from our exchange the Corwith Hustler. Every word in this article accords with our belief and in fact he is very highly spoken of in this community. No better man could be had for this office than Mr. Deyoe.

RICHEST OF ALL THE NATIONS.

Proud Position That Is Occupied by the United States.

In 1860 the United States held the fourth rank among the manufacturing nations. Great Britain, France and Germany were ahead of us, in the order named. We passed Great Britain in 1880, and to-day the aggregate of our manufacturing equals that of Great Britain, Germany and France combined. The value of our products of manufacturers has doubled since 1888. The value of our exports of manufactures has doubled since 1898. In value of the property represented, manufactures ranks third among the great activities of the United States, agriculture being first and the railroads being second, but in the number of persons employed agriculture is the only interest which leads manufactures. Manufactures is far ahead of agriculture in the value of the products. The money invested in manufactures represents an eighth of the value of all the real and personal property in the country. The United States manufactured 35 per cent. of all the manufactured products of the world. The value of the farm property of the United States increased from $7,908,000,000 in 1860 to $20,524,000,000 in 1900, and it is about $25,000,000,000 in 1908.—Leslie's Weekly.

THE DIAGNOSIS OF AN EXPERT.

No Trouble at All to Determine Baseball Player's Ailment.

Ossie Shreck, formerly of the Athletics, but now of the Chicago White Sox, was feeling under the weather one day recently, and Powers, who is somewhat of a doctor, happened in the clubhouse about that time.

"Say, Doc, what do you suppose is the matter? There are clouds before my eyes and a roaring like distant thunder in my ears."

"Um-m-m, let me see. Do you feel a chill as if the temperature had suddenly fallen?"

"Yes, yes."

"Do you notice a cold draft, as if the wind has risen?"

"Yes, yes."

"There, put this in your mouth."

"Eh—what is it, Doc?"

"It's a barometer. You're threatened with a brainstorm."

Among the laboring classes in Germany meat once a week is the rule.

A medical "expert" advises women to smoke. Anything to get your name in the papers.

The German emperor is probably ready to join the party whose platform is: "Let us alone."

England, which was 200 years in passing the deceased wife's sister bill, is not likely to grant women the ballot this year.

London did not have an adequate water supply till 1906. Two-thirds of it comes from the Thames, the rest from artesian wells.

The Panama canal is one-third completed. Evidently there is more work going on than talk in the enterprise under its present management.

Overcrowding in Scotland is not so bad as it used to be. The proportion living more than four per room fell from 18.67 per cent. in 1861 to 9.56 in 1901.

We would be deeply interested in Mme. Melba's statement if she meant that the women we know are to be more beautiful 100 years hence than they are now.

Some young Chinese women are reported en route to this country to study housekeeping. Can we teach them anything on that subject, or are they probably better capable of teaching us?

A British medical investigator advances the theory that high speeding checks the tuberculosis germ in chauffeurs. It is, however, also conducive to sudden deaths for the intersecting part of the population.

Hereafter men will think twice before they spend a half-dime, for the other day a half-dime of the issue of 1802 sold for $715. But after they have thought twice they will spend it, for there are not any more coins like that in circulation.

Of the 1,125,000 persons in Berlin who support themselves or themselves and families only 58,611, or less than 5¼ per cent. have incomes of $714 or more a year. About 1,066,000 have less than that amount and more than half of these even less than $214 a year.

A distinguished Methodist preacher, Rev. Charles Goodell, expresses a somewhat prevalent notion when he rises to remark that if the superfluous money of Mr. Carnegie and of Mr. Rockefeller is really tainted it is incumbent on the churches to take it and relieve it of its taint.

Prof. Goodwin of New York, who thinks that the organization of the public schools of the largest cities must be revolutionized, says that he would form the pupils into groups, one for learning trades, another for prepation for commercial life, and a third for the college and university. It is so easy for a ten-year-old boy to decide whether he is going to be a haberdasher or a minister!

A Japanese lady of rank, who has been traveling in this country, says American women are unhappy and discontented, and she ascribes this to the fact that they are so well taken care of that they miss in their lives the stimulating influence of a little neglect. The inference is that if their husbands beat them now and then they would be more in a position to appreciate their happiness.

An election board chairman in New York made trouble for a woman suffragist when she tried to register lately. She camped on his trail, found out he had a home in New Jersey, lay in wait for him to vote, and had him arrested and deprived of his vote and his job on the ground that he was a nonresident. So much for what a woman can do, even in politics, when she makes up her mind to get even.

Why should the merits of the proposed model husband contest in Chicago be based solely on their comparative speed in buttoning up the backs of the embroidered shirt waists of their respective wives? Has the good temper displayed by them while performing the task and their ready compliance in undertaking it as often as requested nothing to do with it? Yea, rather!

"While the southern states suffer the stigma of night riders we cannot justly point the finger of scorn at any nation on earth," says the Pilot. And while there is so much crime and lawlessness here in the north none of us can afford to point the finger of scorn at the southern states. Pointing the finger of scorn is poor business, anyway, remarks the Boston Globe. It is a great deal better to be charitable to our neighbor's shortcomings and to do all in our power to correct our own.

Events of Recent Occurrence Throughout the Commonwealth.

WANT NEW R. R. COMMISSION.

Iowa Manufacturers Urge That Commission be Named by Governor

Des Moines.—The Iowa State Manufacturers' association is boosting for a new railroad commission. O. T. Dennison of Mason City, chairman of the legislative committee of the association advocated a plan to have a commission of three appointed by the governor. The members of the committee to receive a salary of $5,000 per year, according to Mr Dennison, who thinks that men fitted for the work could not be obtained for a smaller salary. The proposed committee would be vested with mandatory powers. Mr. Dennison believes there are many changes that should be made in the railroad rates and regulations of the state.

The Iowa Implement Dealers association in convention in Des Moine adopted very strong resolutions asking for the co-operation of all implement men in an effort to defeat the parcels post law. The "uniform bill of lading" was also taken up. The convention warned dealers against delay in filing damage claims for goods, shipped under a "uniform bill of lading.

FOUND IN UNCLE SAM'S NAVY.

Former Justice of the Peace Under Indictment for Forgery.

Iowa Falls.—W. L. Weaver, son of Justice Weaver of the Iowa supreme court, and missing attorney of Iowa Falls, has been found in the United States navy. Weaver, formerly a justice of the peace here, is awnted on two indictments returned last March. He is charged with attempting to secure money from V. A. Biggs of this city on bogus loan papers. Efforts are in progress to have Weaver returned here for trial at the January term of court. Weaver enlisted under the assumed name of William L. Walters. Weaver attempted to secure $1,500 from Mr. Biggs through a Perry bank by means of a forged note, mortgage and abstract.

SHOT FOR ANOTHER MAN.

Vinton Bank Clerk Waylaid by Unknown Person.

Vinton.—Waylaid and mistaken for another man, George Ramstad of this city was shot by a mysterious stranger. He has a bad wound in his shoulder. It is not fatal, but it may be attended by serious consequences. Ramstad, who is a bookkeeper in a Vinton bank, had been in Cedar Rapids on business and returned on the midnight train. As he neared his home, a short, thick set man, wearing a slouch hat, darted out of the shadows towards him. "I've got you now, John! I'll fix you!" shouted the man as he flashed a revolver, and immediately fired.

Newton Robber Suspect Taken.

Newton.—Marshal Kendeg of Colfax, acompanied by Rock Island detectives, arrested Harry Langhoff of Colfax on suspicion of having robbed the Newton depot on the night of November 25. He answers the description given by operator Dave Yates. Marshall Robins of Newton went to Colfax for the prisoner and will bring him to Newton. His parents formerly resided there. He has no occupation.

Son Charged With Fraud.

Webster City.—A father suing his son and asking the reinstatement of a mortgage for $7,500 given him by the son and which he released to the latter and charged that the release was secured by fraud and the exercise of undue influence by the son over his aged father are some of the unnatural conditions revealed in the case of John Sloan vs. John S. Sloan et al., just filed in this city.

Council Runs Saloons.

Dubuque.—An ordinance was adopted by the city council placing all saloons in the city under direct control of the city government and assessing a tax of $120 per annum against each. Drug stores are almost under the same control in the matter of the enforcement of the law governing pharmacists in liquor matters.

Iowan Builds an Airship.

Washington.—B. F. Brinton, the airship builder, announces that he will have the best model ever exhibited completed within the coming year. Brinton made a fortune in the picture show business and will spend a portion of it experimenting with airships.

FARMING IN THE SCHOOLS.

Movement on Foot to Teach Fundamentals of Agriculture.

Waterloo.—There is a movement on foot here to bring before the attention of school boards everywhere, especially in the rural districts, the necessary for instruction in the rudiments of agriculture. In the Black Hawk county schools this subject has been given attention for the past year, with excellent results. It is pointed out that many of the boys and girls attending the rural schools will some day be farmers and farmers' wives and knowledge of the best way to grow crops and care for the farm will be more useful to them than some of the subjects in the curriculum which have been engrossing the attention of the pupils. It is the purpose to teach children some of the simpler facts of farm life, such as the nature of soil, how to conserve moisture on dry ground, how to select and cure seed corn, when and how to sow and garner the crops raised on an Iowa farm, etc. Practical interest is aroused by school gardens and the cultivation of flower beds on the school grounds. Even some of the high schools of the state are taking up this study and the time seems not far distant when agriculture will become a part of the curriculum of most of the schools of Iowa.

LARGE PLANT IS FINISHED

Iowa Portland Cement Company will Have Fine New Home.

Des Moines.—The big plant of the Iowa Portland Cement company south west of this city, is rapidly nearing completion, with a force of about 200 workmen employed continually. It is announced that the plant will be fully ready to begin its output of cement early in the spring. When in full operation this plant will employ a force of about 400 men and these men and their families will in themselves form a fair sized town as a suburb of Des Moines. Even now there are about eighteen substantial dwellings erected and occupied by the employes of the company. The capacity of the plant will be over 5,000 barrels of cement per day. It will require many trainloads of rock and shale each day to keep the plant busy. The larger part of this material will be brought from near Earlham.

CARROLL BANK MAY PAY ALL.

Examiner Bostwick Completes Examination of Defunct Bank.

Carroll.—The First National bank of this city, now in the hands of I. W. Fowler of Ottumwa as receiver, will pay out, according to the report made to the national treasury department by Bank Examiner H. M. Bostwick. It is estimated that 75 per cent of the doubtful paper will be collected, placing its value at $380,000. With the 100 per cent which has been levied on the stockholders, all depositors will be paid in full, and there may even be a small dividend to be returned to the stockholders.

Teachers' Course in High School.

Marshalltown.—The high school of Marshalltown has installed a course for pupils who are preparing themselves to teach school following their graduation. Superintendent A. Palmer and Principal Nelson are back of the movement and will select from the senior class all those students who are expecting to enter the teaching profession in country schools. They will be given special work in method of teaching, psychology and other branches and fitted for the active duties of the school room. As present high school courses are arranged pupils are competent to teach in so far as their knowledge of what to teach is concerned, but wholly unfitted in the practical side of school teaching.

Incorporate Interurban.

Dubuque.—New articles of incorporation will be filed in a day or two for the Plattesville & Interurban line. The project has been in abeyance some time, but it is declared that conditions in the money market are now such that it will be possible to float the stock. The line is to be known as the Dubuque, Wisconsin and Illinois railroad.

Present Iowan With Sword.

CHURNING.

SAYS BONI SPENT $11,000,000

PRINCESS DE SAGAN'S COUNSEL IN SENSATIONAL ADDRES.

Paris Feasts on Dark Side of American Woman's Married Life While in France.

Paris. — The suit brought by Count Boni de Castellane against Princess de Sagan, his former wife, for the custody of his three children, was continued in this city Wednesday. The princess, before her marriage to Count de Castellane, was Miss Anna Gould.

Counsel for the princess raked the count fore and aft when he reached the subject of the fashion in which he had dissipated his wife's fortune, spending at the rate of $1,000,000 a year for 11 years. M. Clemenceau revealed the exact terms of the settlement his client offered to make at the time of her divorce. These the count refused, on the ground that they were insufficient, and in so doing, said counsel, he proved himself eligible for an insane asylum. These terms were $200,000 cash, or an income of $30,000 a year, this income to be increased when the estate of his former wife was out of the hands of the trustees, she to take over all the debts then pending.

Princess De Sagan.

M. Clemenceau took up one by one the accusations made against the princess by the count regarding her travels in Italy with de Sagan before their marriage. It should be remembered, the lawyer declared, that the princess was not a young girl traveling with her fiance, but a divorced woman in the company of the man she was going to marry. Furthermore, she is an American, M. Clemenceau said. "Conduct that would appear to be out of the ordinary in France," he said, "is perfectly proper on the other side of the ocean."

Daring Bank Robbery.

Pepperell, Mass.—Burglars blew open the safe of the First National bank here Wednesday, took $14,000, and escaped in an automobile.

The thoroughness and skill with which the work was performed has convinced the police that the burglars were professionals. Three were in the party, and although they were seen escaping in the auto, all trace of them was soon lost, and the authorities were unable to ascertain in what direction they departed. It is believed, however, that the burglars went in the direction of Groton.

Valuable Necklace Recovered.

R MESSAGE OF PRESIDENT

ENT FROM CHIEF EXECU- VE READ IN CONGRESS.

CHANGES IN LAWS

Currency System Declared erfect—Control of Corporations Province of the National Gov- ment—Conduct of Labor Lead- Criticised—For Postal Savings nks.

shington.—In his message to ss, read in both houses Tues- President Roosevelt makes im- t suggestions as to what he ers necessary legislation.

president congratulates the na- n its present excellent financial ing, but calls attention to the of remedying defects in the cur- system. He says:

financial standing of the nation e present time is excellent, e financial management of the na- interests by the government dur- e last seven years has shown the sfactory results. But our cur- system is imperfect, and it is ear- to be hoped that the currency ssion will be able to propose a ghly good system which will do with the existing defects.

ng the period from July 1, 1901, to ber 30, 1908, there was an increase amount of money in circulation of 89. The increase in the per capita this period was $7.06. Within this here were several occasions when s necessary for the treasury de- ent to come to the relief of the market by purchases or redemp- of United States bonds; by increas- posits in na l banks; by stim- additional issues of national bank and by facilitating importations broad of gold. Our imperfect cur- system has made these proceedings ary, and they were effective until netary disturbance in the fall of mensely increased the difficulty of ry methods of relief. By the mid- November the available working e in the treasury had been reduced pproximately $5,000,000. Clearing associations throughout the coun- d been obliged to resort to the ent of issuing clearing house cer- es, to be used as money. In this ency it was determined to invite riptions for $50,000,000 Panama canal and $100,000,000 three per cent. ates of indebtedness authorized by t of June 13, 1898. It was proposed deposit in the national banks the ds of these issues, and to permit use as a basis for additional circu- notes of national banks. The effect of this procedure was so that it was necessary to issue only 89 of the Panama bonds and $15,- of the certificates of indebtedness. ing the period from July 1, 1901, to mber 30, 1908, the balance between et ordinary receipts and the net ary expenses of the government d a surplus in the four years 1902, 1906, and 1907, and a deficit in the 1904, 1905, 1908 and a fractional part e fiscal year 1909. The net result a surplus of $99,283,413.54. The finan- perations of the government during period, based upon these differences en receipts and expenditures, re- d in a net reduction of the interest- g debt of the United States from 41,640 to $897,253,990, notwithstanding there had been two sales of Panama bonds amounting in the aggregate 4,631,980, and an issue of three per certificates of indebtedness under act of June 13, 1898, amounting to 500. Refunding operations of the ury department under the act of h 14, 1900, resulted in the conver- into two per cent. consols of 1930 of 40,400 bonds bearing higher rates of st. A decrease of $8,687,956 in the al interest charge resulted from operations.

short, during the seven years and months there has been a net sur- of nearly one hundred millions of pts over expenditures, a reduction e interest-bearing debt by ninety ns, in spite of the extraordinary ex- of the Panama canal, and a saving early nine millions on the annual est charge.

e message reiterates the well- n views of the president that the ol of great corporations, espe- y the railroads of the country, d be vested in the national gov- ent. He says:

elieve that it is worse than folly ttempt to prohibit all combinations s done by the Sherman anti- law, because such a law can nforced only imperfectly and un- y, and its enforcement works al- as much hardship as good. I gly advocate that instead of an un- effort to prohibit all combinations, shall be substituted a law which expressly permit combinations n are in the interest of the public, shall at the same time give to some y in the national government full r of control and supervision over e railways of the country should be mpletely under the interstate com- e commission and removed from domain of the anti-trust law. The r of the commission should be made ughgoing, so that it could exercise plete supervision and control over ssue of securities as well as over raising and lowering of rates. As rds rates, at least, this power should mmary. . . . Rates must be made w as is compatible with giving prop- turns to all the employes of the rail- from the highest to the lowest, proper returns to the shareholders. they must not, for instance, be re- d in such fashion as to necessitate t in the wages of the employes or abolition of the proper and legitimate s of honest shareholders.

Interests of the Wageworker.

rning to conditions affecting the eworker and the man of small ns, the president says:

ostal Savings banks will make it for the poorest to keep their sav- ings in absolute safety. The regulation of the national highways must be such that they shall serve all people with equal justice. Corporate finances must be supervised so as to make it far safer than at present for the man of small means to invest his money in stocks. There must be prohibition of child labor. Limitation of women labor, shortening of hours of all mechanical labor, stock watering should be prohibited, and stock gambling so far as is possible discouraged. There should be a progressive inheritance tax on large fortunes. Industrial education should be encouraged. As far as possible we should lighten the burden of taxation on the small man. There should no longer be any paltering with the question of taking care of the wageworkers who, under our present industrial system, become killed, crippled, or worn out as part of the regular incidents of a given business. As far as concerns those who have been worn out, I call your attention to the fact that definite steps toward providing old-age pensions have been taken in many of our private industries. These may be indefinitely extended through voluntary association and contributory schemes, or through the agency of savings banks, as under the Massachusetts plan.

Urgent Need of Reform.

Our present system, or rather no system, works dreadful wrong, and is of benefit to only one class of people—the lawyers. When a workman is injured what he needs is not an expensive and doubtful lawsuit, but the certainty of relief through immediate administrative action. No academic theory about "freedom of contract" or "constitutional liberty to contract" should be permitted to interfere with this and similar movements.

I renew my recommendation that the principle of the eight-hour day should as rapidly and as far as practicable be extended to the entire work being carried on by the government; the present law should be amended to embrace contracts on those public works which the present wording of the act seems to exclude.

I renew my recommendation made in a previous message that half-holidays be granted during summer to all wageworkers in government employ.

Judges Too Poorly Paid.

Coupled with a eulogy of the judiciary of the nation the president urges that, beginning with the supreme court, the judges should have their salaries doubled.

As was to be expected, the attitude assumed by certain labor leaders during the recent election comes in for bitter criticism. The president asserts that demands made on congress for legislation were unjust and impractical and could but work harm to the cause of labor. While declaring that our judicial system is sound and effective at core, the president says:

There are certain decisions by various courts which have been exceedingly detrimental to the rights of wage-workers. This is true of all decisions that decide that men are, by the constitution, "guaranteed their liberty" to contract to enter a dangerous occupation, or to work an undesirable or improper number of hours, or to work in unhealthy surroundings; and therefore cannot recover damages when maimed in that occupation, and cannot be forbidden to work what the legislature decides is an excessive number of hours, or to carry on the work under conditions which the legislature decides to be unhealthy.

There is also, I think, ground for the belief that substantial injustice is often suffered by employes in consequence of the custom of courts issuing temporary injunctions without notice to them, and punishing them for contempt of court in instances where, as a matter of fact, they have no knowledge of any proceedings. Organized labor is chafing under the unjust restraint which comes from repeated resort to this plan of procedure.

Injunction Must Remain.

The power of injunction is a great equitable remedy, which should on no account be destroyed. But safeguards should be erected against its abuse. In substance, provision should be made that no injunction or temporary restraining order issue otherwise than on notice, except where irreparable injury would otherwise result; and in such case a hearing on the merits of the order should be had within a short fixed period, and, if not then continued after hearing, it should forthwith lapse. Decisions should be rendered immediately, and the chance of delay minimized in every way. Moreover, I believe that the procedure should be sharply defined, and the judge required minutely to state the particulars both of his action and of his reasons therefor, so that the congress can if it desires examine and investigate the same.

Harm Worked by Law.

Discussing measures necessary for the proper control of giant corporations operating in defiance of law, the president says:

Real damage has been done by the manifold and conflicting interpretations of the interstate commerce law. Control over the great corporations doing interstate business can be effective only if it is vested with full power in an administrative department, a branch of the federal executive, carrying out a federal law; it can never be effective if a divided responsibility is left in both the states and the nation; it can never be effective if left in the hands of the courts to be decided by lawsuits.

The courts hold a place of peculiar and deserved sanctity under our form of government. Respect for the law is essential to the permanence of our institutions; and respect for the law is largely conditioned upon respect for the courts. It is an offense against the republic to say anything which can weaken this respect, save for the gravest reason and in the most carefully guarded manner. In no other nation in the world do the courts wield such vast and far-reaching power as in the United States. All that is necessary is that the courts as a whole should exercise this power with the far-sighted wisdom already shown by those judges who scan the future while they act in the present.

Forest Preservation.

The manifest necessity for forest preservation is pointed out as a duty the present generation owes to its descendants, and the president cites the case of China, where reckless de-forestation has resulted in creating deserts, as an object lesson.

Inland Waterways.

Immediate action by the present session of congress for the improvement of our inland waterways the president declares to be imperative. He recommends the creation of a permanent commission authorized to coordinate the work of all the government departments relating to waterways, and to frame and supervise the execution of a comprehensive plan.

Postal Savings Banks.

Urging the immediate institution of postal savings banks, the message says:

I again renew my recommendation for postal savings banks, for depositing savings with the security of the government behind them. The object is to encourage thrift and economy in the wage-earner and person of moderate means. It is believed that in the aggregate vast sums of money would be brought into circulation through the instrumentality of the postal savings banks.

Parcel Post.

The much-discussed advisability of the establishment of a parcel post service is thus dealt with:

In my last annual message I commended the postmaster-general's recommendation for an extension of the parcel post on the rural routes. The establishment of a local parcel post on rural routes would be to the mutual benefit of the farmer and the country storekeeper, and it is desirable that the routes, serving more than 15,000,000 people, should be utilized to the fullest practicable extent.

Education.

Dealing with the important subject of education, the president says:

With the limited means hitherto provided, the bureau of education has rendered efficient service, but the congress has neglected to adequately supply the bureau with means to meet the educational growth of the country. I earnestly recommend that this unfortunate state of affairs as regards the national educational office be remedied by adequate appropriations. This recommendation is urged by the representatives of our common schools and great state universities and the leading educators, who all unite in requesting favorable consideration and action by the congress upon this subject.

The president points out the necessity of better organization of the various bureaus responsible for the public health, and urges the placing of all soldiers' homes under the jurisdiction of the war department.

Statehood.

On the question of statehood the president says:

I advocate the immediate admission of New Mexico and Arizona as states. This should be done at the present session of the congress. The people of the two territories have made it evident by their votes that they will not come in as one state. The only alternative is to admit them as two, and I trust that this will be done without delay.

An international agreement concerning interstate fisheries is at present being attempted, and in this connection the message continues:

I call the attention of the congress to the importance of the problem of the fisheries in the interstate waters. On the Great Lakes we are now, under the very wise treaty of April 11 of this year, endeavoring to come to an international agreement for the preservation and satisfactory use of the fisheries of these waters which can not otherwise be achieved. Lake Erie, for example, has the richest fresh water fisheries in the world; but it is now controlled by the statutes of two nations, four states, and one province, and this province by two different ordinances in different counties. All these political divisions work at cross purposes, and in no case can they achieve protection to the fisheries, on the one hand, and justice to the localities and individuals on the other.

Country's Foreign Policy.

This nation's foreign policy is based on the theory that right must be done between nations precisely as between individuals, and in our actions for the last ten years we have in this matter proven our faith by our deeds. We have behaved, and are behaving, towards other nations, as in private life an honorable man would behave towards his fellows.

I take this opportunity publicly to state my appreciation of the way in which in Japan, in Australia, in New Zealand, and in all the states of South America, the battle fleet has been received on its practice voyage around the world. The American government can not too strongly express its appreciation of the abounding and generous hospitality shown our ships in every port they visited.

Our Southern Neighbors.

The commercial and material progress of the 20 Latin-American republics is worthy of the careful attention of the congress. The International Bureau of the American Republics is doing a useful work in making these nations and their resources better known to us, and in acquainting them not only with us as a people and with our purposes towards them, but with what we have to exchange for their goods.

Panama Canal Being Rushed.

The work on the Panama canal is being done with a speed, efficiency and entire devotion to duty, which make it a model for all work of the kind. The men on the Isthmus, from Col. Goethals and his fellow commissioners through the entire list of employes who are faithfully doing their duty, have won their right to the ungrudging respect and gratitude of the American people.

For Ocean Mail Lines.

I again recommend the extension of the ocean mail act of 1891 so that satisfactory American ocean mail lines to South America, Asia, the Philippines, and Australasia may be established.

Citizenship for Porto Ricans.

I again recommend that American citizenship be conferred upon the people of Porto Rico.

Should Develop Hawaii.

I call particular attention to the Territory of Hawaii. The importance of those islands is apparent, and the need of improving their condition and developing their resources is urgent.

Progress in the Philippines.

Real progress toward self-government is being made in the Philippine islands. I trust that within a generation the time will arrive when the Filipinos can decide for themselves whether it is well for them to become independent, or to continue under the protection of a strong and disinterested power, able to guarantee to the islands order at home and protection from foreign invasion.

Good Work Done in Cuba.

In Cuba our occupancy will cease in about two months' time; the Cubans have in orderly manner elected their own governmental authorities, and the island will be turned over to them. Our occupation on this occasion has lasted a little over two years, and Cuba has thriven and prospered under it. Our earnest hope and one desire is that the people of the island shall now govern themselves with justice, so that peace and order may be secure.

The president urges that national parks adjacent to national forests be placed under the control of the forest service of the agricultural department; he also points out the benefits derived from pure food legislation.

The National Guard.

Urging continued efforts to increase the efficiency of the National Guard the president continues:

Now that the organized militia, the National Guard, has been incorporated with the army as a part of the national forces, it behooves the government to do every reasonable thing in its power to perfect its efficiency. It should be assisted in its instruction and otherwise aided more liberally than heretofore. The continuous services of many well-trained regular officers will be essential in this connection. A bill is now pending before the congress creating a number of extra officers in the army, which if passed, as it ought to be, will enable more officers to be trained as instructors of National Guard and assigned to that duty. In case of war it will be of the utmost importance to have a large number of trained officers to use for turning raw levies into good troops.

The Army.

As regards the army I call attention to the fact that while our junior officers and enlisted men stand very high, the present system of promotion by seniority results in bringing into the higher grades many men of mediocre capacity who have but a short time to serve. No man should regard it as his vested right to rise to the highest rank in the army any more than in any other profession. It is a curious and by no means creditable fact that there should be so often a failure on the part of the public and its representatives to understand the great need, from the standpoint of the service and the nation, of refusing to promote respectable, elderly incompetents. The higher places should be given to the most deserving men without regard to seniority; at least seniority should be treated as only one consideration. In the stress of modern industrial competition no business firm could succeed if those responsible for its management were chosen simply on the ground that they were the oldest people in its employment; yet this is the course advocated as regards the army, and required by law for all grades except those of general officer. As a matter of fact all of the best officers in the highest ranks of the army are those who have attained their present position wholly or in part by a process of selection.

The scope of retiring boards should be extended so that they could consider general unfitness to command for any cause, in order to secure a far more rigid enforcement than at present in the elimination of officers for mental, physical or temperamental disabilities. But this plan is recommended only if the congress does not see fit to provide what in my judgment is far better, that is, for selection in promotion, and for elimination for age. Officers who fail to attain a certain rank by a certain age, should be retired—for instance, if a man should not attain field rank by the time he is 45 he should of course be placed on the retired list. General officers should be selected as at present, and one-third of the other promotions should be made by selection, the selection to be made by the president or secretary of war from a list of at least two candidates proposed for each vacancy by a board of officers from the arm of the service from which the promotion is to be made. A bill is now before the congress having for its object to secure the promotion of officers to various grades at reasonable ages through a process of selection, by boards of officers, of the least efficient for retirement with a percentage of their pay depending upon length of service. The bill, although not accomplishing all that should be done, is a long step in the right direction; and I earnestly recommend its passage, or that of a more completely effective measure.

Japanese Exposition.

The Japanese government has postponed until 1917 the date of the great international exposition, the action being taken so as to insure ample time in which to prepare to make the exposition all that it should be made. The American commissioners have visited Japan and the postponement will merely give ampler opportunity for America to be represented at the exposition. Not since the first international exposition has there been one of greater importance than this will be, marking, as it does, the fiftieth anniversary of the ascension to the throne of the emperor of Japan. The extraordinary leap to the foremost place among the nations of the world made by Japan during this half century is something unparalleled in all previous history.

For More War Vessels.

The navy is the last subject dealt with. In that connection the president says:

I approve the recommendations of the general board for the increase of the navy, calling especial attention to the need of additional destroyers and colliers, and above all, of the four battleships. It is desirable to complete as soon as possible a squadron of eight battleships of the best existing type.

I most earnestly recommend that the general board be by law turned into a general staff. There is literally no excuse whatever for continuing the present bureau organization of the navy. The navy should be treated as a purely military organization, and everything should be subordinated to the one object of securing military efficiency. A system of promotion by merit, either by selection or by exclusion, or by both processes, should be introduced.

PROVED BY TIME.

No Fear of Any Further Trouble.

David Price, Corydon, Ia., says: "I was in the last stage of kidney trouble

—lame, weak, run down to a mere skeleton. My back was so bad I could hardly walk and the kidney secretions much disordered. A week after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I could walk without a cane, and as I continued my health gradually returned. I was so grateful I made a public statement of my case, and now seven years have passed, I am still perfectly well."

Ready with the Answer.

Miss Baxter, feeling the effects of a torrid afternoon in June, was attempting to arouse the interest of her languid class by giving, as she supposed, an interesting talk on the obelisk. After speaking for half an hour she found that her efforts were wasted. Feeling utterly provoked, she cried: "Every word that I have said you have let in at one ear and out of the other. You"—pointing to a girl whom she noticed had been particularly inattentive throughout the entire lesson—"tell me, what is an obelisk?"

The pupil, grasping the teacher's last words, rose and promptly answered:

"An obelisk is something that goes in one ear and out the other."—Success Magazine.

Why He Remembered.

By some shuffling of the social cards the clergyman and the dog fancier were at the same afternoon tea. The wandering talk unexpectedly resolved itself into the question. Who were the 12 sons of Jacob? Even the cleric with the reversed collar had forgotten, but the doggy man reeled off the names without error, from Reuben down to Benjamin.

The clergyman looked surprised.

"Oh, I'm not great shakes on Scripture," said the man with the fox terriers, "but those are the names which some chap gave to a dozen puppies I'm willing to sell."

Kicks.

Harry Payne Whitney the day his own and other noted horsemen's racers were shipped from London on the Minnehaha, said of the death of racing in New York:

"A good many jockeys have been hard hit. A jockey told me last week a very sad tale of misfortune. I listened sympathetically."

"'Ah, Joe,' said I, 'when a man is down, few hands are extended to him.'

"The jockey as he chewed a straw, smiled bitterly.

"'Few hands—yes—that's right,' he said, 'but think of the feet.'"

Not Anxious at All.

"One word of our language that is almost always misused," said the particular man, "is 'anxious.' You will hear people exclaim how anxious they are to see a certain play, or anxious to get a new hat, or anxious to take a trip to Europe, when they are not anxious at all, but eager or desirous. If anxious were used only in the right place we wouldn't hear it half so often."

Rewards Constantly Paid.

The rewards of great living are not external things, withheld until the crowning hour of success arrives; they come by the way—in the consciousness of growing power and worth, of duties nobly met, and work thoroughly done. Joy and peace are by the way.—Mabie.

CAUSE AND EFFECT

Indigestion and the attendant discomforts of mind and body are certain to follow continued use of improper food.

Those who are still young and robust are likely to overlook the fact that, as dropping water will wear a stone away at last, so will the use of heavy, greasy, rich food, finally cause loss of appetite and indigestion.

Fortunately many are thoughtful enough to study themselves and note the principle of Cause and Effect in their daily food. A N. Y. young woman writes her experience thus:

"Sometime ago I had a lot of trouble from indigestion, caused by too rich food. I got so I was unable to digest scarcely anything, and medicines seemed useless.

"A friend advised me to try Grape-Nuts food, praising it highly, and as a last resort I tried it. I am thankful to say that Grape-Nuts not only relieved me of my trouble, but built me up and strengthened my digestive organs so that I can now eat anything I desire. But I stick to Grape-Nuts."

A Fair Opinion.

The constitutional dislike to giving an opinion on any subject, which had always distinguished the Gorham family, reached its fullest development in Abel Gorham. He could scarcely be persuaded to express his mind freely about anything, still less about any person. Yet he managed to preserve a reputation for keen discernment.

"I really wish you'd tell me what you think of young Hobbs," said one of the summer residents. "Come, Mr. Gorham, I mean to give the young man a lift if he's worth it."

"M-m," said Mr. Gorham, with his usual deliberation. "When you come to lifting anybody that can be lifted is wuth lifting, seems to me. As to Pete Hobbs, I'm expecting he'll turn out just about such a sort of a man t' take him to be. I don't know as I'm called upon to speak any plainer'n that."—Youth's Companion.

Mirandy Knew.

Mrs. Gaybird burst into the village post office all out of breath.

"Anything for me?" she asked, in anxious tone.

The postmaster shook his head.

"Nartnin'," he replied.

"Goodness gracious!" exclaimed Mrs. Gaybird. "I was expecting a letter from my husband as to when he was coming home."

"Wall, I'll ask Mirandy," said the old man. And he called to his wife in the kitchen: "Say, Mrs. Gaybird's called to know if there's any mail—sez she's lookin' fer a letter or somethin' from her husband as ter when he's comin' back. Is there anythin' fer her?"

"Yes, there is," called back the postmistress. "He sez he'll be to home this comin' Friday!"

Children and the Factory.

It seems strange that no attempt has been made in any country to found a factory system without calling upon mere children to pay the biggest sacrifice in life and limb. It was the same in England at the beginning—toddlers of eight years of age were sent into the mills during the first 35 years of the nineteenth century. It was the same in the northern states of America. It is the same to-day in the southern states. It is the same in Japan—the world's latest recruit to the factory system. And so it is the same in India.—London Co-Operative News.

Your P's and Q's.

The expression, "mind your P's and Q's," is so common that most of us have never given thought to its origin. It is a peculiar phase of human nature that when we grow up with anything from infancy we never investigate it. The other night Prof. Martel, lecturing to his dancing class thus elucidated: "The initials stand for pied and queues—feet and pig tails. It was the caution given by all French dancing masters as far back as the time of Louis XIV., and up to the time of the revolution. It was then the fashion for the feet to be put in position and the bow to be made very low—a thing most difficult to do gracefully without moving the 'pieds' or deranging the wig and throwing the 'queue' forward; hence the warning ministered by the terpsichorean professors."

Washington Apples Famous in Europe.

Ernest Panu of Heisingfors, Finland, who arrived in Seattle the other day, has been making an investigation of conditions in the central fruit growing sections of Washington, particularly in the Yakima and Wenatche valleys, with a view to influencing emigration from his native country. The fame of Washington, he says, has spread throughout Europe and the possibilities of fruit growing are acting as a strong incentive for the discontented classes of the old countries to head this way.—Seattle Times.

His One-Course Treat.

"I've got the meanest beau these days," wailed the bachelor girl. "I never saw anything like him. He takes me into some little two-for-a-nickel cafe after the theater and says: "What will you have?" then before I can get a word in edgeways he adds: "We'll have oysters first."

"And that's all there is to it. Oysters are first and last. They are all he offers me."

Engagement Bracelets.

Men's "engagement bracelets" have arrived in London. The bracelet is a plain flat band of pure gold, which is fastened tightly on to the wearer's arm above the elbow. It is snapped on to the arm with a buckle or joined with an invisible spring. When once it is on it cannot be removed except by a small needle specially manufactured to touch the spring in a tiny hole which is left for its insertion.

We must not forget to mention that among the events of last week a number of "old maids" had a supper to exercise in the art of cooking so we were informed.

A little girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wellemeyer Monday morning. Grandma Griewe and Dora Lau are assisting in taking care of the little pilgrim.

Our collectors for Christmas have done unusually well this year and we may expect good big packages, unless the price of goods is too high. The choir and children are hard at work getting up a fine program.

The sights on the roads this week looks as though prosperity had returned to this part of the country. Loads of grain, hay, hogs and poultry are headed for market. Last year much of it was hauled the other way and yet we find only a few who are really satisfied with the condition of things. This seems to be human nature.

Have you read Roosevelt's last message to Congress? It is certainly a great message and a master piece in plainess, directness, fearlessness and the fruit of a clear and unbiased mind. It sets forth the conditions and needs of our country, in a way that all may understand and is worthy to be studied by every man, woman and child. His watchwords seems to be "Do something."

SYNOPSIS.

Three girls — Elizabeth, Gabrielle and Elise—started for Canada to spend the summer there. On board steamer they were frightened by an apparently demented stranger, who finding a bag belonging to one of them, took enjoyment in scrutinizing a photo of the trio. Elise shared her stateroom with a Mrs. Graham, also bound for Canada. The young women on a sightseeing tour met Mrs. Graham, anxiously awaiting her husband, who had a mania for sailing. They were introduced to Lord Wilfrid and Lady Edith. A cottage by the ocean was rented by the trio for the summer. Elizabeth learned that a friend of her father's was to call. Two men called, one of them being the queer-acting stranger on the steamer. The girls were "not at home," but discovered by the cards left that one of the men was Elizabeth's father's friend. The men proved to be John C. Blake and Gordon Bennett. The party was told of the search for smugglers in the vicinity of the cottage. Elise visited Mrs. Graham to find that her life was not the happiest. She learned that the Grahams and Lady Edith were acquainted. A wisp of yellow hair from Mr. Graham's pocket fell into the hands of Elise. Mrs. Graham's hair was black.

CHAPTER V.

After all, it was Gabrielle who first opened the door in our wall of reserve and allowed Gordon Bennett to penetrate beyond it, and in the light of after events I was very glad, indeed, I was not responsible. It happened this way.

She had washed her hair and gone out in the sun to dry it, taking a book and a box of chocolates to help pass away the time, and, after wandering about a little, had established herself at the top of the flight of steps leading down to the boathouse, as the most secluded as well as the sunniest place she could find.

Just what really happened I don't know; I believe she got to dreaming out there in the sunshine, but this is what she said:

"I was sitting quietly reading when I heard a little thump, and there was that miserable comb balancing on the bottom step. Of course I went after it, and of course before I got there it toppled over and went through a crack of the slip into the water."

"That slip is hoodooed," interrupted Elizabeth. "Why don't you do as I do, and keep away from it?"

"It was low tide," continued Gabrielle, "and I could look through the crack and see it lying on the sand beneath the water, so I took a stick and tried to poke it out. I got along very well by progressing from crack to crack, but at the critical moment I got excited and poked too hard, and it shot out just beyond my reach. That made me wild, for I knew I couldn't face Elizabeth without it, so I simply lay down and grappled with my stick."

"Well?" I inquired, as she paused with a reminiscent chuckle.

"Well, as I was lying there with my face the color of a boiled lobster, fishing away for all I was worth, I heard a voice say: 'Allow me,' and there he was in a sailboat, the picture of coolness and comfort. He rolled up his sleeve, though, and went to work, and finally got it, then calmly landed and introduced himself, saying something about having been unfortunate in his efforts."

"That was your opportunity to be dignified and squelching," I interrupted. "You should have frozen him with a glance."

"I tried to," she returned, "but all at once I remembered my hair, and who could be dignified then?"

"So you brought him home with you as a reward of merit," laughed Elizabeth. "I shall never forget how you looked as you came up the veranda steps."

"Yes," said Gabrielle, and the two sat and stared as though we had escaped from the zoo. Take your comb, Elizabeth; I never borrowed one before, and I never will again."

"I suppose," remarked Elizabeth, reflectively examining her recovered property, "we may be said to have dropped into his life; first your bag, then Elise's sidecomb, and now this of mine. It's fate—we've got to know him, but it wasn't so bad, after all, was it?"

Indeed, we had all enjoyed the afternoon. Even Gabrielle returned to the veranda, with her hair as high up on her head as she could get it and with her most impressive manner, but we none of us referred to our trip up on the steamer, and our visitor departed without once mentioning our property in his possession, although my sidecombs were obviously not mates, which made me very uncomfortable.

Elizabeth asked him to come again, and when reproached for her cordiality said she did it only to please us, and quite expected to be bored to death herself; from which we knew she was very favorably impressed.

A sudden storm came up that afternoon, and when Mr. Bennett rose to go the sky was very black and lowering, and the ocean roared ominously, so he left his boat tied to our slip and went up into the village to do some errands and wait until it should be over. Instead of a short squall, however, it settled down into a heavy rain, with howling easterly wind and tossing, turbulent sea, so he was obliged to spend the night in the village, as, of course, he could not cross to his island in his small boat.

It was our first real storm in the cottage, and as we heard the boom of the waves and listened to the wind sweep about our little home until it sometimes trembled upon its foundations, I must admit we were slightly nervous and could not settle to any occupation. So we gathered around our stone fireplace, lighted the driftwood Mary Anne had placed ready, and watched the wonderful green, lavender, scarlet and blue of the crackling flames in silence.

Elizabeth sat on the rug and leaned her head against Gabrielle's knee, and their faces gradually assumed the dreamy, far-away expression which means they have withdrawn into their own inner world, where outsiders may not follow them, and where memory and anticipation are softened by mutual interest and mutual affection. But I did not care, for I also had a little inner world with memories, and liked to anticipate the future, now very hazy and indistinct, to be sure, but filled with delightful possibilities and alluring in its very vagueness.

So I leaned back in my low wicker chair and built castles in the air, while the rain beat unnoticed against the windows and the surf thundered angrily upon the shore.

"What's that?" cried Elizabeth, sharply, and with one accord we sprang to our feet.

For above the noise of the storm we had heard a crash, as of metal striking metal, and the fall of a heavy body, apparently right beneath us.

"It's the storm," said Gabrielle. "Only the storm."

But she was white and trembling as she spoke, and cast an apprehensive glance at the floor, as though she expected it to open and engulf us.

"The cellar," whispered Elizabeth—"some one is down there."

Now, the cellar was a part of our abode we had not yet explored, so it had all the mystery of the unknown, and as we crept stealthily into the kitchen we experienced a sensation of standing over a bomb which might at at any time explode and annihilate us. Gabrielle valiantly advanced to the door leading down into it, and opened it the fraction of an inch.

"Who is there?" she said, beginning bravely enough and ending with a quavering whisper.

Of course there was no reply, and we would have been frightened to death if there had been, yet we felt indignant at the stillness, as well as at the impenetrable darkness our eyes could not pierce.

"Shall we go down?" Her voice was rather tremulous, and she looked relieved when we shook our heads decidedly.

"If we only had a dog," I hazarded, "we could put it down ahead of us to find out if any one was there; but we haven't."

"No," agreed Elizabeth, thoughtfully; "but we have Mary Anne."

As though in response to her name, the outer kitchen door opened, and Mary Anne herself, wet, draggled and breathless, stood before us.

Her usually ruddy face was pale, and her eyes rolled wildly as she looked from one to the other, while her shawl slipped unnoticed to the floor, and we saw that her gown was badly torn and her arm scratched and bleeding.

"You've been out?"

It was Elizabeth who spoke, and her voice brought Mary Anne's wandering eye to a focus and held it a moment.

"Yes, miss."

She picked up her shawl and folded it carefully, smoothing the creases with trembling hands.

"It's a wild night, Miss Elizabeth," she said, with a shudder. "The storm got into me blood, miss, and sleep I couldn't fur thinking of them I knows who are maybe out on the sea, so I got me shawl and started fur me brother's 'ouse to see if 'e 'ad got 'ome safe and sound; but I couldn't git down the bluff, Miss Elise, the wind being that vi'lent it clean druv me back. And I stumbled, Miss Gabrielle, and 'urt meself ag'inst the side of the 'ouse, miss, as you kin see fur yerself. 'Ow, but it's a night! God save them out on the wide water."

Mary Anne paused for breath and looked curiously at us.

"But what are ye all in the kitchen fur?" she inquired in a more natural way. "Is it afraid ye are, too, and come out 'ere to look fur me to keep ye comp'ny?"

We told her about our fright, and she promptly reassured us, saying she had locked everything securely early in the evening, but would go down and investigate.

"I'll go with you and hold the light," I volunteered; but Mary Anne declined my society more firmly than politely.

"And what good would you be, Miss Elise—jumpin' at yer shadder and drippin' candle grease over me clean floor? No, thank ye kindly, I'll go alone; full well I know there's nothin' bigger than a rat down there."

It was very pleasant to hear her moving about, and when she called up to us with a laugh that the hanging shelf had fallen, coming down upon the coal shovel and scuttle, we laughed also, and felt a weight lifted from our hearts.

"Them ropes was rotten," announced Mary Anne, laboriously ascending the stairs, "and it's a mercy I didn't set the cream there to raise as usual, which, praise be given, I didn't. Don't you worry no more, but go to bed, and I'll make some chocolate to warm you like, for it's very comfortin' to the innerds on a night like this."

It was acceptable advice, and we gladly followed it, but as we left the kitchen I chanced to glance back and saw Mary Anne at the cellar door, her head bent and her whole bearing tense and alert—much the attitude of a dog who waits an expected command in its master's voice.

Yet when she appeared upstairs a little later, carrying a tray with three cups of steaming chocolate, and filled with motherly solicitude as to our comfort, she was merely a respectable, middle-aged servant, whose opinions one would receive with due respect. She had rearranged her dress, and her manner was quite natural and composed as she drew aside the curtain and looked into the night, with a comment on its wildness.

We joined her at the window, and as we stood looking out a beam of light pierced the enveloping darkness, casting a broad path across the black water, and we could see a little boat making its way around the point of the island—now riding the waves gallantly, now tipped so far to one side it seemed certain to capsize.

"Our friend the searchlight," remarked Gabrielle, in the tone of one who welcomes an old acquaintance, but a smothered sound as the little boat careened dangerously caused me to glance curiously at Mary Aanne.

She was leaning against the window frame, and was evidently in pain, for her face was livid and her breath came in short gasps.

"It's nothing, Miss Elise," she muttered, as she caught my eye. "The dyspepsy ketches me around the 'eart now and then. And to think of some mother's son in that little cockle-shell to-night! Come, now, get into bed and drink your chocolate while it's 'ot."

"I think," remarked Elizabeth, as she sipped appreciatively, "that Mr. Bennett's boat will be beaten to pieces against our slip to-night. I wish we could get into the boathouse for such emergencies. You must make your brother get us a key, Mary Anne."

"Yes, miss," said Mary Anne quietly.

I tried to say something, but found myself suddenly too sleepy to articulate, and saw Mary Anne retreat with the empty cups as though through a veil.

I slept heavily that night, and dreamed that Gordon Bennett made a boathouse of our cellar in spite of our remonstrances to the contrary. I also had a curiously vivid impression of Mary Anne and a candle passing and repassing my door, but when I tried to call out and ask her what she wanted I could make no sound, and could only struggle with the oppressed, smothering sensation which Elizabeth said always accompanied nightmare. I was willing to take her word for it, never having experienced it myself, but I did not like it, and mentally resolved to drink no more chocolate at night, if it produced such unwelcome after-effects.

"All at Once I Remembered My Hair, and Who Could Be Dignified Then?"

VALUABLE TIMBER IN ALASKA.

Traveler Tells of Vast Forest Wealth in the Territory.

"Although the hardwood men of the United States may have to witness with alarm the depreciation of the area of oak and walnut in the Appalachian ranges and the lower Mississippi there is plenty of the other sort left on the continent," remarked E. H. Mertes of Spokane, Wash.

"The world has no idea of the resources from a timberman's viewpoint of the great untouched Alaskan forests," continued Mr. Mertes. "Up from Valdez and stretching on above the Tanana river the forest growth of Alaska, mainly pine it is true, but the biggest, finest pine in the land—is prodigious. The interior of Alaska is given over to much stunted growth owing to the severe winters, but along the softer climated coast the forests are simply indescribable in their uncut luxuriance. It will be many years before the woodsman's ax is heard over the thousands of square miles included in this domain."

Garden of the Gods.

The Garden of the Gods is a tract of land about 500 acres in extent near Colorado Springs, Col. It abounds in weird and fantastic pinnacles and towers of red and white sandstone some of them more than 500 feet in height. Among the chief features of interest are the Cathedral Spires, the Balanced Rock, etc. The gateway of the garden consists of two enormous masses of red sandstone, 330 feet high sufficiently far apart for the roadway to pass between them.

Puzzled.

New Yorkers had been warned to boil water.

"What for?" they asked, with guild interest.

"To make it safe to drink," replied the sanitary official.

"But why drink it?" they queried with a keener curiosity.—Philadelphia Ledger.

SOO CITY AND CREW LOST

LAKE STEAMER GOES DOWN IN NEWFOUNDLAND GALE.

No Doubt of Vessel's Fate Remains—Was Being Taken to the Gulf of Mexico.

St. Johns, N. F.—Wreckage which has come ashore at Cape Ray leaves little room for doubt that the sturdy little steamer Soo City, which for 20 years plied as an excursion vessel on the Great Lakes, went down with her crew in the midst of the gale that lashed the Newfoundland coast for two days this week.

The steamer was in command of Capt. John G. Dillon of Brooklyn, who was formerly commander of the United States government transport Missouri. A wife and three children awaited his return home. The exact number of the crew is in doubt. It is known, however, that no less than 18 men were on board, and it has been reported that the crew was recently increased to 28 men.

The Soo City was recently sold by the Indiana Transportation Company to Felix Jackson of Velasco, Tex., and was being taken to New Orleans, where it had been planned to put her in service between that city and Texan ports. She carried no passengers. She was to be first overhauled in New York, and for that purpose had been consigned to Agent T. H. Franklin of New York.

The steamer sailed from Michigan City on November 1 and reached Ogdensburg, N. Y., November 11. Up to that time the steamer was in charge of Capt. F. V. Dority of Milwaukee, but at Ogdensburg the command was turned over to Capt. Dillon. She was last reported at Quebec November 14. A week later, when nothing had been heard, much anxiety was felt, and on Wednesday last the vessel was listed by the Maritime Exchange among the missing. The steamer's first mate was John Casey of Chicago.

Friday a deck cabin and fittings and 16 life preservers came ashore. These all bore the name "Soo City," or other marks identifying them as belonging to the lake steamer. During the day life buoys, deck boards and other gear unquestionably belonging to the steamer were washed in.

reply to Mr. Taft until after the Ohio senatorial situation has been clarified. It is understood that President-elect Taft's action in tendering the secretaryship to Mr. Burton is made entirely without respect to the senatorial fight in Ohio in which his brother, Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, is a prominent factor.

India Uprising Is Planned.

Vancouver.—The World says British officers working among the Sikhs and Hindus of the Pacific coast unearthed the details of a proposed uprising against British rule in India. The story is to the effect that outrages are now taking place at widely separated points in India for the purpose of scattering the British troops. The main rising will take place in April next, at Amritzar. Stocks of arms of modern type, recently manufactured in Japan and smuggled into India, are hidden in various districts.

TORTURED SIX MONTHS

By Terrible Itching Eczema—Baby's Suffering Was Terrible—Soon Entirely Cured by Cuticura.

"Eczema appeared on my son's face. We went to a doctor who treated him for three months. Then he was so bad that his face and head were nothing but one sore and his ears looked as if they were going to fall off, so we tried another doctor for four months, the baby never getting any better. His hand and legs had big sores on them and the poor little fellow suffered so terribly that he could not sleep. After he had suffered six months we tried a set of the Cuticura Remedies and the first treatment let him sleep and rest well; in one week the sores were gone and in two months he had a clear face. Now he is two years and has never had eczema again. Mrs. Louis Leck, R. F. D. 3, San Antonio, Tex., Apr. 15, 1907."

Grown-Up Children.

It is not only the frivolous whom the spirit of childishness is just now leading astray. Silliness is the fashion even among the wise. Women especially affect a kind of childish shrewdness in talking of serious subjects. Like children who have the habit of romancing, they lose the sense of reality, and because they never talk exactly as they think they begin to think exactly as they talk.—London Spectator.

LAME BACK PRESCRIPTION

The increased use of "Toris" for lame back and rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is effective: "To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Compound and one ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

GAVE PROMISE TO BE QUIET.

Audience Willing to Be Good if Only Band Wouldn't Play.

A Kansas man tells of a music hall in a town of that state which bore the unenviable reputation of possessing absolutely the worst band anywhere. On one occasion a "headliner" from Chicago had been promised by the management for a "turn," and consequently the hall was packed to the doors. When, however, the time had come for the "head-liner" to appear, instead of that eagerly awaited attraction the audience was astounded to see the agitated manager come before the curtain holding a telegram in his hand.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said he, "I very much regret to inform you that the 'Great Stewart' cannot (hisses and catcalls) possibly arrive for at least another half hour. (Great applause.) In the meantime the band will play you a selection."

At this a dead silence followed, which was finally broken by a man in the gallery.

"Smitty, Smitty!" he shrieked. "Don't let the band play. We'll be quiet, honest we will!"—Harper's Weekly.

No Sale.

The commander-in-chief examined the new noiseless gun.

"The explosion, I understand, is not audible," he commented.

"You are correctly informed," replied the inventor.

"Take it away," resumed the commander-in-chief. "The sort of shot that can be heard round the world is my style."

It is claimed that the mound builders were the first baseball players, but nobody has ever discovered anything to indicate that they were the first umpire maimers.

Dr. Hillis thinks the millennium has arrived. The man who needs 14 tons of hard coal and doesn't know where he is going to get the money to pay for it is probably convinced that a millennium doesn't amount to much, after all.

A simplified spelling society in England wants to have school children taught to spell by ear. To show how tastes differ, it is a matter of common complaint among business men here that some of the graduates of the common schools spell that way now.

Can the proposition that the minimum salary for an unmarried Episcopalian clergyman in the diocese of New York should be $1,200 and for a married clergyman $1,200 with a suitable place to live in, or $1,500 in money, be taken as an official statement of the exact cost of a wife?

When the officers of the American battleships arrived at Tokyo last month they were welcomed by crowds of school children, who sang "Hail Columbia" and other American songs in English. When have American school children ever welcomed foreign visitors by singing songs in their native tongue?

In view of the fact that the price of stock exchange seats in New York has jumped recently from $70,000 to $75,000, it is a little discouraging to learn that the owner of a pew in fashionable Grace church, on lower Broadway, which he bought for $3,000, has been able to get only $1,100 bid for it, at auction.

Cornetists standing in the belfry of the Park Street church in Boston played "America" at noon on October 21, in honor of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Rev. S. F. Smith, the author of the words sung to the music in this country. "America" was first sung publicly in this church, on July 4, 1832.

About 250 buffalo, remnant of the famous Pablo herd recently purchased by the Dominion government, will be taken from Montana and placed in the new buffalo park on Baltic river, a thousand miles northwest of Winnipeg. Germany in 20 years has increased its yearly mining product from 100,000,000 metric tons to 242,609,000 metric tons, worth $439,086,200. Coal forms 85 per cent. of the output. Other minerals are salt, iron ores, copper, lead, zinc, pyrites, gold, silver, manganese, arsenic, saltpeter, vitriol and alum. The workmen number about 700,000, and the companies about 2,000.

Dr. Norman Ditman has received the Gibbs prize of $20,000, offered by the New York academy for the best original research work on the kidneys. The prize was founded to create an interest in the study of Bright's disease. Iowa State News

Events of Recent Occurrence Throughout the Commonwealth.

FAIR PAYS $60,000.

Educational Features Are To Be Largely Augmented.

Des Moines.—More than $60,000 in premiums and prizes will be offered by the Iowa state fair this year. It was voted by the board of directors of the department of agriculture to add $6,200, at least, to the premiums, to reclassify the premium list so as largely to expand the agricultural department, and to make the educational features of the fair most conspicuous. An appropriation of $1,000 was voted to organize a school exhibit for the fair next August. Prof A. V. Storm of Ames college will have charge of this department. It was voted to duplicate any appropriation up to $1,000 which the trustees of the agricultural college may make for the extension and experiment work in charge of Professor Holden at the fair. And $2,000 was appropriated for the purpose of making an agricultural exhibit fittingly to represent the agricultural interests of the state. This work will be put in the hands of an organizer who will see that the products of Iowa are suitably displayed at the fair this year, in itself a great educator.

LEMUEL KINKEAD DEAD.

Veteran Attorney and Orator Is Stricken During the Night.

Des Moines.—Lemuel Kinkead, war veteran, lawyer and orator and one of the oldest and foremost members of the Iowa bar, died unexpectedly during the night of Dec. 10 at his residence. Death was due to a stroke of apoplexy, while he was sleeping and the end was without pain. The death was not discovered until 8:30 o'clock, when Mrs. Kinkead touched him to awaken him from what she thought was sound sleep. She found the flesh was cold. His death is a complete surprise. He was at his office and court house the day before. He seemed as jolly as ever, and even boasted of his health and physique to Deputy Clerk Calvin Hicks. Colonel Kinkead is survived by his wife, three sons and two daughters.

YELLOW CORN IS KING.

Carries Off Commercial Club Trophy At Show.

Des Moines.—D. G. Wilson of Panora took the Commercial club's corn trophy at the recent corn show at the state house. The trophy was offered for the best ten ears of corn of any variety. On the same ten ears Mr. Wilson was awarded $5.00 in the state sweepstakes for the best ten ears of yellow corn and the gold medal for the grand sweepstakes for the best ten ears of any variety. U. S. Chacey of Hedrick took the grand sweepstakes for the best single ear of yellow corn and the best single ear of any variety. L. W. Roe of Oskaloosa took the sweepstakes for the best ten ears of white corn, and Leon Harris of Des Moines sweepstakes for best single ear of white corn.

AGED TWINS DIE TOGETHER.

George and Henry Dyke Victims of Fire at Minburn.

Clarinda.—While asleep in their little hermit shanty at Hepburn, Ia., two aged twin brothers, George and Henry Dyke, were burned to death. Their shanty was discovered in flames by a rural carrier, and he made an effort to get into the shack but he could not and before help could arrive, the little structure was burned to the ground. Amid the ashes were found the charred remains of two old men. It is believed that the structure caught fire from an overheated stove. These Struck by a Mail Crane.

Burlington.—Engineer C. Thompson of the Burlington fast mail train, was struck in the head by a mail crane, near Middletown, Iowa, and probably fatally injured. His train was running at full speed, and he was leaning out of the cab looking backward when the arm of the crane struck him, crushing the side of his face.

Few Delinquent Taxes in Grundy.

Waterloo.—Grundy county no doubt set the low mark for delinquent tax sales in the state, it probably being the smallest. Only eleven pieces were offered on which the total tax was only $138.50. A total of forty-two pieces had been advertised for sale, but all except eleven were paid before the sale opend.

TAX FERRET LOSES.

Woodbury Collector Accidentally Discovers Fact.

Correctionville.—D. B. Shontz, tax ferret for Woodbury and several other Iowa counties accidentally made the discovery that he had been defeated in the lower court in his effort to collect $75,000 in back taxes from the Sioux City stock yards company. The decision was rendered last September and as not a word has leaked about the ruling, Mr. Shontz is rather inclined to the view that there was an effort to keep it secret for six months when his right to appeal to the supreme court would have been foreclosed by limitation. When he happened across the adverse decision he at once took steps to perfect his appeal. On the result of this case in the higher court depends not only the collection of an enormous sum of taxes from the Sioux City stock yards company, owned jointly by the Swift, Armour and Cudahy packing interests, but the authority of county treasurers in the matter of making assessments which the assessor over-looks and the tax ferrets uncover, will be decided.

STATE ANTI-TOXIN PLANT.

This is the Plan of Dr. Moerke of Burlington.

Burlington.—A state institution for the manufacture of antitoxin and its free distribution throughout the state is the energetic proposition of Dr. A. C. Moerke of this city, a member of the state board of health. Dr. Moerke is desirous of having the state install a plant for the manufacture of antitoxin at Iowa City, and the other members of the state board are in accord with him. At present antitoxin costs the people $1.50 a thousand units. It has been shown that it can be manufactured for not to exceed 15 cents a thousand units. In cases of diphtheria, tetanusy or an disease where its use is required if a life is to be saved the cost of the quantity necessary for the treatment will run up as high as $30. A number of states manufacture antitoxin as a part of the work of the board of health and supply the public either at cost or in some instance gratis.

MAN STABS HIMSELF.

Popular and Prosperous Man, Tries to End His Life in Hotel.

Oskaloosa.—Joe Shaw, a popular and prosperous farmer residing a few miles northeast of this city, attempted to commit suicide in the Hotel Lacey pool room, when he tried to stab himself with a huge pocket knife. The heavy clothing worn by the man shielded his body from the knife blade and he only received a few scratches. Shaw had been drinking heavily of late and becoming despondent over some business affairs he attempted the rash deed and he would have been successful if friends had not interceded and taken the knife away from him. It was his second attempt at suicide.

Perry Gets High Office.

Oskaloosa.—Returns from the recent election of the national officers of the United Mine Workers of America indicate the election of Edwin Perry, present secretary of the Iowa district, to the office of secretary and treasurer of the national organization Figures received at the Oskaloosa general offices indicate a large majority for the Iowa district. Mr. Perry will have an easy victory over other candidates.

Offers Babe in Want Ad.

Dubuque.—Two hours after the announcement appeared in the local papers that Mrs. Anna Fischel, 19-year-old wife, whose husband deserted her, when their baby was three weeks old, wished to give away the baby boy, born last Christmas eve, forty applications offering to adopt the youngster were received. The woman declares she cannot care for the child and make a living at the same time.

Beautify The Capitol Grounds.

Des Moines.—Resolutions asking for the improvement of the capitol grounds were made by the Iowa Horticultural society and the Iowa Park and Forestry association. These associations propose that the state purchase several acres surrounding the capitol and park it. On this tract could also be erected a state building to accommodate offices which have been crowded out of the present state house.

OPENS WAR ON PRESIDENT

HOUSE ADOPTS RESOLUTION FOR COMMITTEE ON MESSAGE.

Story That Roosevelt Is Preparing Return Blow—Legislative Appropriation Bill Quickly Passed.

Washington. — Immediately after the convening of the house Friday Representative Perkins of New York introduced a resolution, which had heretofore been agreed upon, providing for the appointment of a special committee of five members to consider the proper means of dealing with that portion of the president's message which criticises the course of congress in prohibiting the detail of secret service men to duty outside of their own bureau. The resolution is preceded by a preamble reciting some expressions of the message. No effort is made to give voice to the feeling of the house. The resolution was passed.

If the plan of the house to censure President Roosevelt does not stir up a genuine explosion, it won't be the president's fault. He is now at work, it is reported, getting together data concerning the personal and official life of a number of the congressmen, which he expects to fire into congress to show what might happen were there to be a genuine investigation of congressmen, such as he said in his message the congressmen seemed to fear.

Of course the present talk may be intended only to frighten some of the more timid congressmen—especially those who may have some loose skeletons in their desks—into a sudden apathy on the promised censure.

When the legislative appropriation bill was called up in the house of representatives Friday by Mr. Bingham of Pennsylvania the extraordinary situation was presented that for the first time in 12 years no general debate was asked for. Even the first reading of the bill was dispensed with by unanimous consent.

Mr. Bingham, having the measure in charge, explained its provisions, the main features of which already have been printed. Its reading for amendment then was begun.

OFFICER AND FANATIC DEAD.

Two More Victims of Kansas City Street Battle.

Kansas City, Mo.—Two more names were added to the list of dead as a result of Tuesday's battle between religious fanatics and the police here, the total number of dead now being four.

Shortly before noon Louis Pratt, 45 years old, the foremost disciple of James Sharp, died at the general hospital, and an hour later Michael Mullane, a policeman, succumbed to his wounds at St. Joseph's hospital. Policeman Albert O. Dalbow and Lula Pratt died immediately after being shot Tuesday.

Sharp was arrested Thursday night at Monticello, Johnson county, Kansas. He gave himself up without resistance. "Adam God" was wounded in both hands. He told the officers that he was willing to be taken now that he had "finished the work that God sent me to do."

Found Guilty of Murder.

Duluth, Minn.—William Schreiber was found guilty of murder in the first degree here Friday. He killed Frank Massapust, a settler, near Ashawa, last February. His acquittal had been generally expected.

FATALITIES IN GARAGE FIRE

Chicago Mother Leaps with Child and Both Die.

Chicago. — With men and women of Chicago's most exclusive and fashionable residence section as horrified spectators, two persons, a mother and a child, received fatal injuries in a garage fire Friday night.

Two others were burned so badly they are not expected to live.

While Mrs. George M. Pullman, Mrs. Secor Cunningham, Mrs. Stanley Field and other leaders of Chicago's society world stood by watching the flames Mrs. Florence Carr, wife of a chauffeur employed by James K. Deering threw herself from a window of the burning building to the ground below carrying in her arms her young son.

Arthur Meeker placed the boy in his auto and raced across the city toward the nearest hospital. The boy died soon after the hospital was reached.

J. W. Thorne of Montgomery Ward & Co. used his automobile to convey the mother to a hospital. She died as the machine was rushing across the streets.

ATTEMPTS TO BRIBE UMPIRES.

Officials of Deciding National League Game Make Charges.

New York.—Even more sensational than the tumultuous close of the recent National league playing season were the closing hours of the league's annual meeting here Friday when charges of attempted bribery of the umpires who officiated at the game that decided the championship of 1908 between New York and Chicago at the Polo grounds, October 8, were sprung and the magnates appointed a committee to probe them, even intimating that criminal prosecutions might follow the investigation committee's report. An official statement by the league says none of the persons named are in any way connected with organized baseball.

MANIAC HOLDS UP VILLAGE.

Edgewater, N. J., Terrorized by "John the Baptist."

Edgewater, N. J.—Proclaiming himself to be "John the Baptist, come to save the world," an armed fanatic wrought up to a high pitch of maniacal fury, terrorized this village for a full hour late Friday. He appeared suddenly on the main street, waving a big revolver, held up the proprietors of several stores, exchanged many shots with a hastily formed posse and at last was wounded when the police and a mob of citizens ran him down. In all the fusillade no one was hit but the maniac himself, and his wounds are not regarded as dangerous. He says he is Oscar Pomeroy of Nebraska.

France Lets Castro Land.

Bordeaux.—Cipriano Castro, the president of Venezuela, was allowed to land on French soil Thursday when he arrived at Pauillac, 30 miles from Bordeaux, on the steamship Guadeloupe. After a conference with a representative of the French government President Castro came ashore and proceeded to Bordeaux in a special car. The announcement was made that the president would go to Paris Thursday evening an agent of M. Pichon, the foreign minister, informed President Castro that he would be welcomed as a private citizen, and that as a chief of state he would be given every protection during his sojourn in France.

CHAPTER VI.

It was a very beautiful world which ...eeted us in the morning after the ...orm, all swept and garnished and ...eshly painted for our delectation.

I wish I could describe it, as we ...ood upon our veranda drinking in the ...fe-giving ozone and feasting our eyes ...on the landscape. Perhaps if I ...ere an artist I could better express ...e bright azure of the sky, the deep... blue of the sparkling ocean rippling ...th white-capped waves, the wonder...l clearness of the atmosphere, and ...e glorious sunlight gilding every...ing until the commonest objects ...ere endowed with a charm hitherto ...nsuspected.

I had wakened tired and unre...eshed, and both Gabrielle and Eliza...eth looked rather pale and heavy-...ed, so we decided to spend the day ... home, and established ourselves ...on the veranda for one of the long, ...zy mornings in which we frequently ...dulged.

Lady Edith Campbell soon joined us, ...esh and dainty in her pretty morning ...ostume and simple hat, and we ...eeted her with enthusiasm.

"Wilfrid has gone fishing," she re...arked, as she removed her hat, "and ...s he means to be away all day, I shall ...ot be missed." How very cozy you all ...ok, and what a wonderful morning, ...s it not?"

"If storms bring days like this," re...marked Gabrielle, from the hammock, "I shall not care how often they come."

"Oh, shall you not?" replied Lady Edith, with a little shiver. "I do not believe I agree with you. Last night was terrible even in the village; what it must have been in this exposed place I cannot imagine. I am always afraid of the wind, and then, too—"

She paused uncertainly and looked at us.

"Such a dreadful thing happened! Do you care to hear hotel gossip?"

We hastened to assure her that we loved all gossip, hotel or otherwise, and she resumed.

"Well, last night Mrs. Bundy, the fat old lady who had the table next to ours, you know—"

"Who wore a diamond sunburst on her forefinger and headlights in her ears," interrupted Gabrielle.

"And came to breakfast in a velvet teagown, with an emerald necklace," supplemented Elizabeth. "Of course we remember her. Did she die of apoplexy or anything?"

"She was robbed," said Lady Edith gravely. "All her jewels were taken, and they were very valuable. Poor old woman! Was it not dreadful? She is in a state of hysterical collapse this morning, and who can wonder?"

"Robbed!" I exclaimed, incredulously.

"Yes, robbed. It makes one very uncomfortable, does it not? They say it is the work of an expert, and have put the matter into the hands of the police, hoping to recover the jewels."

"Whom do they suspect?"

"I do not know;" she hesitated a moment, then resumed quietly: "You see, the hotel was crowded last night with strangers storm-bound on the island, and it will be difficult to form an opinion. Mrs. Bundy was alarmed at the storm, and spent most of the night in her daughter's room. It is probable the thief got in then, or when she was at dinner."

"But," objected Elizabeth, "it must have been some one who knew she had them. It could not have been a stranger."

"One can never tell," said Lady Edith, thoughtfully. "But I confess it has made me nervous. I did not bring many jewels, fortunately, but I have my mother's pearls and a few other trinkets I would not care to lose, and I do not know what to do with them, since it appears unsafe to trust things in one's room, even if they are securely put away. Mrs. Bundy insisted that she locked up her emeralds with her own hands, and had the key on a ribbon around her neck."

"I am glad we left when we did," I remarked as she paused. "Not that I am burdened with jewels, but it must be awfully unpleasant."

"It is," she agreed: "one is inclined to look suspiciously at one's neighbors, not to mention servants. As for me, I have put my treasures in this box and carried it with me everywhere this morning. I would not even trust my maid, who has been with me for years. I do not know what in the world to do with them, and am more than half inclined to dig a hole and bury them deep and safe."

She gave a vexed little laugh as she spoke, and raised a box wrapped in white paper which she held on her lap, and which had appeared to contain bonbons.

"I'll tell you," said Elizabeth, impulsively. "Leave them here. There is a little iron safe under the china closet in the dining room. I can't imagine why it was put there, for it is not big enough to hold much silver, even if we had anything but the most obvious plate; but it possesses two padlocks, and you could lock it and keep the keys."

"Do you really mean it?" said Lady Edith, incredulously.

"Yes—why not? I'm sure we won't be pursued for our valuables, and, if you will take all responsibility for leaving them, you are more than welcome to the exclusive use of the safe—isn't she, girls?"

Of course we agreed willingly, and were quite repaid by the look of relief in her big brown eyes and the pretty, eager manner with which she endeavored to express her gratitude.

"Let us put them away at once and get them off our minds," suggested Gabrielle, springing from the hammock and leading the way to the dining room.

So we opened the door—which looked like an ordinary wooden panel below the corner closet—and disclosed the little iron safe with its two padlocks—both so rusty from disuse that it took all the strength I possessed to turn the keys.

"There!" I remarked, handing them to Lady Edith and closing the outer wooden door. "Now you can rest in peace."

"You have removed an incubus from my shoulders," she said, with a quick display of dimples, "and I am more grateful than I can express. I should not have had an easy minute after Mrs. Bundy's experience, although I am inclined to believe it was one of the strange men who spent the night here, rather than a guest or servant of the hotel. I would rather think so.

"And do you know," she continued, thoughtfully, "my maid says that several of these men left very early, without waiting for breakfast—as soon as it was light, in fact. That in itself seems suspicious, under the circumstances, but then, as I said, every one is inclined to suspect every one else, and it is all very horrid and uncomfortable. Now, do let us go outside again, and not waste this glorious day."

We had a delightful morning, for our guest was even more charming than usual. There was a subdued exhilaration in her manner, and an exuberance of spirit we had never seen before; her cheeks were softly pink, and her eyes shone, as she chatted merrily of various things after the fashion of girls the world over. In her softened mood, with the grande dame manner laid aside, she was quite irresistible, and I found myself wondering why her left hand bore neither wedding nor engagement ring, and whether she as well as her brother had an unhappy romance to be lived down and forgotten.

She did not, however, convey the impression of a lovelorn damsel, for a more radiant creature I have never seen. By the time lunch was over we felt as though we had known her always, and were planning a summer abroad, part of which was to be spent at her father's castle in Scotland.

"I hope," she added, "that Wilfrid will have quite recovered his poise before you come over, and you can see him as he really is—such a dear fellow! And then, who knows what might happen? One of you might be induced to stay in the old world, for we have many friends, and American girls are very popular, you know."

After lunch Elizabeth declared her intention of going down the cellar to see what it was like, saying that it made her very uncomfortable not to know what she lived over; but she returned immediately, with a most disgusted expression.

"Mary Anne is scrubbing," she announced, "and the whole place is as wet as the ocean. I'll have to wait until to-morrow. Just now I would need a boat."

"What's the use of bothering?" inquired Gabrielle, placidly. "It would not worry me if I never explored the cellar. Just so I know it's there, I don't care what it looks like."

"Well, I do," returned Elizabeth, "and I'm going down there the first thing in the morning, if I don't forget it."

"Suppose we walk down to the wharf in the village," suggested Lady Edith, "and meet Wilfrid. We might induce him to take us for a sail."

But I still felt very indolent and preferred the hammock, with its many pillows and cool breeze, to the long, hot walk to the village, so the other three started cheerfully off, leaving me to my own devices.

For a while I swung idly to and fro watching the dancing water and admiring the effect of the sunlight on the occasional sail which ventured around the point from the island colony on the other side. I was thinking in a desultory way of poor Mrs. Bundy and her lost emeralds, and of Lady Edith and her mother's pearls, and wishing she had opened the box and shown them to us before locking them away, when I heard a step upon the gravel path, and Gordon Bennett lifted his cap and smiled amicably upon me, as though he were quite in the habit of paying us daily visits.

I noticed then what white teeth he had and how he smiled with his eyes as well as his lips, but this is an unimportant digression.

"I apologize for coming so often," he remarked, appropriating a comfortable chair. "My excuse is that I wish to return your property. I forgot it yesterday."

He drew Gabrielle's bag from his pocket as he spoke, and regarded it affectionately.

"At last," he continued, "I suppose it belongs to one of you; I found it on the steamer coming up, you know, just where you had been sitting."

I acknowledged our ownership of the property, and extended my hand for it, but he held it thoughtfully, as though unwilling to relinquish it.

"Would you mind," he said at last, with some hesitation, "telling me why when I started to bring you this bag, that night on the steamer, you all turned and fled as though I had been a carnivorous animal?"

There was a twinkle in his eye which made me hotly resentful, although I tried to preserve a cool and indifferent manner.

"Would you really like to know?"

"Pining to be told; I have lost valuable sleep trying to work it out."

"Well, we thought you were crazy."

"Why, please?"

His voice was genuinely astonished, and I plunged at once into an explanation I hoped would be satisfactory.

"You see, it was those chairs you threw overboard. It was such an extraordinary thing to do. And Gabrielle said you muttered when you did it."

"Is that all?—relief and amusement struggled for supremacy in his voice, and I felt myself flushing uncomfortably.

"I think it's quite enough," I returned, irritably. "No men in their senses go around throwing chairs overboard."

"And is that why I got the cold shoulder when I called?"

Mr. Gordon Bennett laughed then as he has never dared laugh since when referring to that subject, for we don't like to talk about it, as it makes us appear rather foolish.

CRAZE FOR TITLED HUSBANDS.

Cynical Bachelor Criticizes Aims of Average Rich American Mother.

"'Not only an English earl, but an Italian prince and a German count proposed to my daughter while we were abroad, but—'

"That is the sort of thing," said a cynical bachelor, "that we hear on all sides from the average rich mother on her return from Europe. What does it denote? Why, hang it, it denotes that the average American mother feels actually ashamed nowadays if her daughter doesn't marry into a noble foreign family. To marry into the foreign nobility is the correct thing to do, and the girl who doesn't land a duke or a count or something feels ashamed, and her mother feels more deeply ashamed still.

"I don't want to boast, but, considering the quality of us American men, I think it's terrible that American heiresses only marry us as a last resort when they are ashamed of their failure to get a duke or marquis.

"If you think I'm exaggerating, listen to the shamefaced mothers of marriageable daughters who have returned from Europe without a title in tow. Like parrots they say nothing but:

"'Yes, Prince Petti and Lord Lacland and Count Sago all proposed to Mamie, but—'"

The Limit.

A bridge-playing set at an eastern university, who usually turned night into day, used to appear at morning chapel with remarkable regularity, and were pointed out as an example by the authorities. An alteration was made in the time, chapel not beginning until 30 minutes later, and the dean was astounded to see that none of these men, so regular before, was present. He sent for them and asked the reason. "Well, sir," said one, "it's like this: When chapel was at half past seven we could just manage it, but we can't keep awake till eight o'clock."—Harper's Weekly.

The juryman who toward the end of a very long trial wished to know what the terms "plaintiff" and "defendant" signified is not alone in his ignorance. A writer in the Philadelphia Press tells of a man whose coat had been stolen. He had charged a suspicious-looking individual with the theft.

"You say this man stole your coat?" said the magistrate. "Do I understand that you prefer charges against him?"

"Well, no, your honor," replied the plaintiff. "I prefer the coat, if it's all the same to you."—Youth's Companion.

Apparatus to Empty Canal Boats.

Following in some ways the general lines of the car dumpers in use on the Great Lakes, an apparatus is to be built in Philadelphia for the Lehigh Navigation Company which will take hold of a canal boat, elevate it 60 feet in the air, and empty its contents either on the wharf for conveyance to a storage pile, or into the hold of another vessel.

WOMAN'S WORK IN THE WORLD.

One Writer of Opinion It Is the Family and the Home.

While an unprecedented number of women have become wage earners, and investigators and practicers in fields formerly monopolized by men, this number is large and conspicuous chiefly by contrast with former times. The immense majority of women still fulfill their chief, and, in the last analysis, greatest destiny by being wives, mothers and home makers. And if they were truthful, even the women who live wedded to their work would confess that a book or a painting or a successful lawsuit or a new discovery is but a barren substitute for a little child, and the vast, echoing, empty crowded corridors of the world a poor makeshift for the firelight of the home hearth. Some of them boast that escape from economic servitude is compensation for all the ills of solitude, and it is undesirable that the economic dependence of women on men has produced many unhappy marriages, making chivalry an empty name. But there are other slaveries besides the slavery of dependence, which ceases to be, as soon as love enters into the question, and women have not always rid themselves of fetters by "living their own lives," unless, indeed, as is the case with women physicians and with women nurses, those lives are essentially lives of service, bringing out the maternal spirit in them, and thus expressing their true mission.—Appleton's Magazine.

HOW HE FOOLED THE PIRATES.

With Fresh Water Engine in His Boat, Owner Was Safe.

"Why, may I ask, do you have a fresh water engine in your boat?" asked the guest of the owner of a motor moat in one of the Long Island harbors.

"Just for this reason," replied the boat's skipper. "On two former occasions in this very harbor I've had my boats stolen and I'm only one of many who have suffered the same loss. During the summer months there is a good deal of thieving in the harbors and it is usually done by men who row out in the wee small hours and simply go aboard an anchored boat, set her loose from her moorings and start her off. Now, you see they must know how to run a motor boat in order to do this and most of them are accustomed to the makes of engines usually found in salt water. Hence, though I assure you it's not nearly so convenient, I've installed a fresh water engine in my boat and there are few pirates in this neck of wods that know how to run her—and I have my boat."

WHERE BULLETS FLEW.

David Parker of Fayette, N. Y., a veteran of the civil war who lost a foot at Gettysburgh, says: "The good Electric Bitters have done is worth more than five hundred dollars to me. I spent much money doctoring for a bad case of stomach trouble, to little purpose. I then tried Electric Bitters, and thsy cured me. I now take them ae a tonic and they keep me strong and well." 50c. at G. A. Pabst & Co. drug store.

A Mountain Christmas

BY FRANCES MARGARET FOX

SNOW had been falling in the mountains many days before Christmas. Down in the sunbright valley mother and little Nina gazed up at the shining peaks and were homesick. They would gladly have forgotten snow, but father was in a mountain cabin all alone.

"Will he hang his stockings by the stone fireplace?" asked Nina, "and don't you s'pose he'll be 'vited somewhere to dinner?"

"I wish we had stayed with him," said mother. "If he can live through the winter in the mountains, so could we."

"But he told us 'no,' don't you remember? He said he brought us to southern California on purpose so we could live always in a summer land."

Mother sighed. The little family had been west only a few weeks when father was offered a position as bookkeeper for a lumber company away up in the Sierras. Living in the mountains had been delightful through the summer, but at the first hint of cold weather the tent home was packed, father bought a cabin and sent mother and the little daughter to the valley.

Father was an artist and he declared that he should like nothing better than to paint pictures of snowy peaks with no one to interrupt him and nothing else to do but to guard the company's property.

"It is a wonderful chance," he had insisted.

Mother and Nina had tried to believe he was right; but the little bungalow which they rented already furnished, seemed but a poor excuse for a house.

"I wish I could see him hang up his stocking," continued Nina. "Oh, I wish I could put this penwiper I'm making in the very toe of it!"

Mother made no reply. She wished so much that she, too, might help fill that lonely stocking in the mountain cabin.

"Oh, mother, mother!" exclaimed Nina, dropping her spool and scissors and springing to her feet. "I have a be-autiful idea! You always have to keep your Christmas presents, don't you? You never can send them back, can you?"

"Surely not," was the answer.

"But, mother, s'pose you wish your Christmas present hadn't come. Would it be very polite to tell the ones that gave it to you that you were getting along nicely without their Christmas present and that you really didn't want it?"

"Why, of course not, Nina. We must think of the loving thought behind the gift, even if Uncle John should send no skates this very winter!"

Two arms flew swiftly around mother's neck.

"Oh, I have such a be-autiful idea," repeated Nina. "We'll ride on the stage with the Christmas box and give ourselves to father for a Christmas present. He wouldn't return his Christmas present, now, would he?"

"Would you be contented, Nina, to live up there all winter?" asked mother. "You must remember that we will be four miles from Fredalba. You will have no little girls to play with, no school, no Sunday school, no—"

"But, mother, can't we have a school with you for the teacher, and a Sunday school? Can't I have a whole row of snow men to play with? And, mother! we'll have a real Christmas!"

Thus it happened that two passengers went up the trail on the last stage of the old year.

"Anybody going to meet you in Fredalba?" asked the stage driver. "The weather is pretty severe up here a few thousand feet higher. Had lots of rain in the valley and that means snow storms in the mountains."

"No one will meet us," said mother, "but we know the trail from Fredalba and our burros are there, although we didn't expect to see them again until next summer."

"You can telephone from Fredalba," suggested the stage driver. "They tell me your husband has a telephone out at camp."

"But we're Christmas presents," explained Nina; "so we must surprise him. Don't you know that to-night will be Christmas eve?"

"If the wind dosên't come up, you'll be all right," the man replied, but unless I'm mistaken, there's a heavy snow falling in the mountains this minute."

At Fredalba every one advised mother and Nina not to attempt the trail until morning. This time it was mother who would push on. "We know the trail so well," said she, "and the burros know it better. In two hours we can reach camp."

"It seems to me," said the stage driver as he watched the two disappear around the curve, "it seems to me that some folks haven't any sense," and shutting his lips in a determined fashion he went to the telephone and called for Nina's father. "I'll tell him his folks are coming and to go out to meet them," he explained to the men standing near. "Otherwise the poor fellow may have a surprise he won't like on Christmas day."

To the stage driver's dismay there was no answer to his call. Father's cabin in the Sierras was evidently deserted.

"See here," said he to a friend, "you call Brown up in half an hour and tell him that his wife and daughter are on the trail."

"The wires are down," declared a big man who came in at that moment from outside. "No use trying to telephone."

were thoroughly frightened. They couldn't talk except to urge the burros on. The wind took their breath.

"We won't be Christmas presents, I'm afraid," sobbed Nina, through chattering teeth.

"Say your prayers," suggested mother, "it is all we can do now."

They had long since dropped the reins and trusted the burros to choose their own way. Mother recalled story after story of men who had perished on those mountain trails and she blamed herself for ever attempting such a journey. Suddenly a welcome sight appeared before the struggling travelers.

"The lights of Mr. Dean's cabin!" exclaimed Nina. "Oh, mother! We

With fear for the safety of his passengers, the stage driver drove down the trail to the valley.

In the meantime the two plodded along on the sure footed burros, call ing merrily to each other as they passed the well-known landmarks.

On and on, up and up they toiled, the snow falling faster and faster, the wind more furious every minute. One mile, two miles. By that time the snow blinded them and but for the faithful burros they could not have kept the trail.

A funny thing then happened. Both burros began to bray. Mother and Nina laughed and cried at the sound. Instantly the signal was answered. Robert Dean flung open the cabin door and in a flood of light beheld his visitors.

"Well, well, well!" he exclaimed. "Who told you that we're having a Christmas dinner here this evening, turkey and all? Why, Miss Nina, your father is or was at the table!"

The next thing Nina knew she was in her father's arms and mother was removing her wraps.

"Are we frozen or anything, mother?" asked the child.

"No we're all right and so are the burros," was the reply.

"Oh, how glad everybody is!" the little girl exclaimed. "And I'm hungry—and—and father, we're your Christmas presents!"

Father, for some reason couldn't say "thank you," but didn't speak of returning the precious gifts and it is doubtful if anywhere in the valley below there was such happiness as filled the mountain cabin that Christmas eve.

Christmas Ivy And Holly

BY FLOY CAMPBELL

Lo, now is come our joyfull'st time,
Let every man be jolly;
Each room with Ivy leaves is drest,
And every post with Holly.
Without the door let Sorrow lie,
And if for cold he hap to die,
We'll bury him in a Christmas Pye,
And evermore be merry.

ALL of the evergreen plants have long been considered symbolic of immortality, of rebirth. Hence they, and they alone, are appropriate decorations for the Christmas season, which was originally a celebration, under the disguise of various national religious forms, of the turning of the sun at the winter solstice, and the consequent renewal of life on the earth.

When Constantine was converted, he seized upon every underlying likeness, however remote, between the old faith and the new. Every familiar symbol that might be stretched to fit the strange faith; every old custom that would help to reconcile his lately, and sometimes forcibly, converted people to their unaccustomed belief, was adopted and re-explained. And the return of the sun, bringing life and light to the winter-bound earth, became the prototype of the coming of the Son of Man, bringing life and light to the soul of the sin-bound world. So that at first all the heathen observances were retained as far as possible, and merely given a new meaning.

At the Christmas festival, the ivy and holly still made a summer screen of the stone walls, as in ancient Germany they had turned the huge halls at mid-winter, to bowers of greenery, wherein the sylvan sprites, who dwelt in summer among the forest trees, might pass the frozen months without too much discomfort. An echo from Scandinavia is still heard in the saying current among the peasants of the old world that if any bit of holiday decoration is left in the house after Candlemas day (February 2), a troop of little devils will enter and sit, one on each withered leaf, every one bringing its own small curse upon the house. These little devils are merely the old forest sprites, detained against their will by their undestroyed winter refuge and fretting to return to the awakening woods of spring.

The churches were still green with Christmas garlands in those early days, and ablaze with candles, as the temples of Saturn had always been during the corresponding Roman festival of the Saturnalia. But, as Polydore Vergil remarks, "Trymmyng the temples with hangyngs, floures, boughes and garlandes, was taken of the heathen people, which decked their idols and houses in suche array." And as time went on, and it became no more necessary to make concessions that would help reconcile the people to their changed faith, these "heathen" customs became distasteful to the church. One of the early councils forbids men longer "to deck up their houses with lawrell, yvie, and greene boughes, as we used to doe at the Christmasse season."

This command was observed in the temples, but in the baronial halls the old customs lived on; lived down their questionable past; won again the toleration of the priests who had sternly banished them, and to-day all the evergreens again are admitted to the strictest church, so that we again can say at Christmas,

"Now with bright Holly all the temples strow
With Ivy green, and sacred Mistletoe."

The "Early Calendar of English Flowers," an old poem wherein each month is recognized by its appropriate plant symbol, ends with these lines:

Soon the evergreene Laurel alone is greene,
When Catherine crowns all learned menne.
The Ivie and Hollie berries are seene,
And Yule log and Wassaile come round agen.

The laurel is used not at all, and the ivy but little, in American decorations at Christmas, since both plants are exceedingly rare here. But in England the use of the ivy at least is universal, and the references to it in Christmas song and story alone would fill a small volume.

Besides its claim to appropriateness for the Christmas season which it holds in common with other evergreens, it has two especially strong recommendations of its own. On account of its habit of clinging strongly to its supporting tree or wall, it is a popular symbol of friendship and fidelity, and as such, an excellent decoration for the season of good will and universal brotherhood. And it was, in Roman days, sacred to Bacchus, who, when a baby, was hidden by his aunt, Ino, among its leaves, to save him from Juno's destructive wrath. Prynne says:

At Christmas men do always Ivy get,
And in each corner of the house it set;
But why do they then use that Bacchus weed?
Because they mean then Bacchus-like to feed.

This satirical explanation was but too true in the earlier days, when Christmas lasted for weeks, and was given over to a revelry almost wholly heathen in character.

To-day, in America, the Christmas decorations almost exclusively are of holly, which, for all its popularity, is less consecrated by legend than any other holiday greenery. To be sure we make a sparing use of the mistletoe, which, from the ancient Druidical meaning of purity given to its waxwhite berries, and from its use by them in the marriage rite, has come to give a charter for kissing as "broad as the wind." And we have added the bitter-sweet, which has no traditional signification whatever, is not an evergreen, and is to be tolerated merely for its beauty's sake, and for the slight suggestion it gives of the holly berry.

Our American holly is said to be less beautiful than the European plant, having leaves of a duller green. But, making all allowances for possible disadvantages, it still is a remarkably beautiful tree. And as a symbol of the immortality which it is the season's special mission to teach, it surely has no rival. The leaves remain on the branches for three years, losing their hold only when they are pushed off at last by the growing buds of spring.

Throughout England, so little is its supremacy disputed, that it is popularly known as "Christmas," just as the hawthorn is called "The May."

Its name has been a matter of considerable interest. Theophrastus and other Greek authors named the plant Agria; that is, wild, or of the fields. The Romans formed from this the word Agrifolium and called it also Aquifolium, from actum, sharp, and folium, a leaf. Bauhin and Loureiro first named it Ilex, from the resemblance of its leaves to those of the Quercus Ilex, a species of oak which was the true Ilex of Virgil. Linnaeus adopted the name Ilex for the genus, and preserved the name Aquifolium for the most anciently known species.

Our popular name, holly, probably is a corruption of the word holy, as Turner in his herbal calls it holy, and holy tree. The thorny foliage, and the berries like drops of bright blood, could scarcely fail to remind a Christian of the crown of thorns, and this, together with the universal use of the plant in the churches at Christmas easily would account for the name.

In Germany it is known as Christdorn. The Danish name is Christorn and the Swedish Christtorn. The same name, Christ's thorn, is found in some parts of England. But as no legend connects the holly with the crown of thorns, this name, universal among the Germanic peoples, must be merely the result of its appearance and of its Christmas popularity, as before suggested.

CALLER LEFT IN A HUFF.

Innocent Thought of Business That Gave Serious Offense.

"Business with me has been a li dull of late. I've had only a few ers," he remarked.

The friend smilingly rejoined:

"You'll have enough of them in short time—prosperity's coming ri along. Why," he added, emphatica "the next time I drop around, inste of being able to chat with you for h an hour, there'll be so many peo ahead of me that it'll take me t hours to get to you—maybe I ca see you at all."

"I hope so," rejoined the proprie cheering up over the prospects of newed business activity.

Thanksgiving.

An old deacon who was strongly im bued with the desire to use impressiv language—the definition of the word used being something to which he di not give the least thought, was a pas senger on a steamer which had a rough voyage; the passengers all be ing seasick and looking forward to a landing with pleasure.

The moment the old deacon touche the dock he fell on his knees and fervently cried: "Thank God that I have once more set my foot on vice versa."—Illustrated Sunday Maga zine.

Hoodooed.

A poor devil asked for alms. The inquisitive man questioned him. After a few interrogations he said to his companions: "Boys, don't give him a cent; he's a fraud." The beggar replied: "Gents, I am under a hoodoo. I'm an unlucky man. I do believe if I were to seize time by the forelock it would come right out and leave me as bare as a barber's pole." Then they all chipped in.

Late for the Show.

"What is the matter, my little man?"

"Eddie's mamma went an' whipped 'im."

"And you're crying because he is your little friend?"

"Naw, because she went an' done it before I could get there to watch 'er."

...ANT FOR TRIFLES

...D-FASHIONED "PINCH" BAG MOST CONVENIENT.

...tions, Needles and the Little Odds and Ends of the Sewing Room Kept at Hand in This Receptacle.

...For holding a few buttons, a paper ... needles and a spool of thread or ...o there is nothing in the way of a ...g that is more convenient that the ...-fashioned "pinch" kind. It is large ...ough to serve as an ordinary travel- ...g work bag and there are no draw- ...g strings or ribbons to be bothered ...h. Nothing could be simpler than

...e flat mouth which closes itself and ...pinched open.

...The "pinch" bag derives its name ...m this opening, which is fitted with ...o short, stiff whalebones. Ribbon ...best to make the bag of. When silk ... the yard is used seams must be ...rned and there is always more or ...s trouble in giving them a neat ...ish inside. Take a quarter of a yard ... plain or flowered ribbon about three ...ches in width, or wider if liked, and ...im both ends evenly. Flowered rib- ...n of this width is something of a ...arity, even on the bargain counter, ...t it can be found in a good quality with dainty floral patterns and a narrow satin edge. A white ground with pink flowers and a blue satin edge makes a dainty bag.

After the ends are evened turn them under for a narrow hem of the correct width to accommodate a strip of whalebone. Then hem this down with tiny stitches, using fine white cotton thread instead of silk. The cotton makes a firmer hem and shows less than the silk. The two hems should be turned on one side of the ribbon, the wrong side if there is any difference in the pattern or weave.

Use pure white whalebone, which comes in long strips and can be cut any length desired for the pinch top, or take two whalebone collar supports about three inches long. Cut two pieces to fit the hems. Make them just a fraction shorter than the width of the ribbon so that they will not punch through the ribbon afterward. If the whalebone strip is used soak it first in warm water, letting it remain in the water for 15 minutes or longer. This makes it cut easily. After the length is found and the whalebone cut, shave the blunt ends ever so little and cut them slightly round instead of perfectly square. Now slip a bone through each hem, fold the strip of ribbon double with the tops meeting evenly, and whip the edges of the ribbon together with white cotton, and the bag is ready to use. Unless it is pinched the top will stay perfectly tight, holding any small articles. To open the bag hold the whalebone ends between the thumb and forefinger and press or pinch.

One may have several of these bags, a whole set of different sizes and different ribbons, or they may match. They will be found most convenient for holding small articles. Lace buttons can be kept in one bag, papers of needles in another, hooks and eyes or patent fasteners in a third, and so on until a bag is provided for everything, and once put in order they will remain so.

A "pinch" bag will be found invaluable for keeping collar buttons, sleeve links and small lace pins within easy reach. There is no danger of their slipping out of the case.

Shadow Chemisette Has Come to Stay

...ad of Fashion That Undoubtedly Savors of Extravagance.

Slowly but surely have shadow ...emisettes been coming to the front, ...hough their success seemed inevi- ...ble from the first to those of trained, ...stidious eye. To the necessarily ...onomical majority, however, this ...overing up of one good thing with an- ...ther has a savoring of extravagance, ...nd, on the whole, it will be well to ...olster up that impression. But as ...ey stand, the shadow chemisettes ...e a fine inspiration, and a most wel- ...ome relief from their lingerie proto- ...ypes.

From the initial essay of veiling an ...ll-over ivory lace with fine-tucked ...hiffon toned to the color of the gown, ...here has grown the veiling of one ...hiffon with another, the under ...rimmed with ivory lace. And yet a ...urther step is the shadow corsage, ...he slight incidental matter that is ...ow all that is exacted by the high- ...aist skirt.

MAKING OVER OLD GOWN.

...okes by No Means Difficult to Change Into New Styles.

One of the comfortable advantages ...f the new fashions is the way old ...owns can be altered into new styles. ...t is not easy to make a frankly two- ...iece frock into an empire, but a good ...eal can be done along this line. What ...omen are working at most success- ...ully are yokes. The old V-shaped one ...as gone out.

The new ones are round and shal- ...ow, a little deeper in front than ...t sides and back. The universal fash- ...on for these with the highboned stock ...ttached gives one a chance to cut ...way the top part of old-fashioned and ...nbecoming gowns and replace bad ...nes with these good ones.

For these yokes colored net is used as much as lace. In fact, the latter is somewhat second style. The new method of draping a blouse, so that there is little fullness anywhere, gives one a chance to put into new uses the surplus material in the frock.

BAG FOR SILVER TEA-POTS.

Article Saved from Scratches and Preserves Proper Luster.

The careful housewife, who takes a pride in her shining silver tea-pot, and who, perhaps, polishes it up herself to the last degree of brightness, must often be disappointed to find how quickly it grows dull and tarnished after it has been cleaned, and how often, too, it suffers from mysterious scratches, when it is not actually in use. A wise precaution, and one which is easily adopted, is to provide a green bag, lined with wash-leather in a size which fits the tea-pot pretty closely when the string at the top is drawn. A bag of a suitable size and shape may be seen in our sketch, with the tea-pot drawn upon it to show the way in which it should fit. Similar bags of green baize, with wash leather linings, made in smaller shapes, would be useful also for a silver cream-jug and sugar basin, in cases where a whole tea service is used.

FARMERS' WEALTH

SECRETARY WILSON'S ANNUAL REPORT IS JUST ISSUED.

THEY PRODUCE $7,778,000,000

Corn Crop Is the Greatest and Totals 2,643,000,000 Bushels, Worth $1,615,000,000.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—After twelve years of service as head of the department, the secretary of agriculture in his twelfth annual report to the president, renders a comprehensive account of his stewardship and presents a review of the progress of agriculture in the United States during this period. The farm value of all farm products of 1908 reaches the most extraordinary total in the nation's history—$7,778,000,000. This is about four times the value of the products of the mines, including mineral oils and precious metals. The farmer contributes 87 per cent of the raw materials used in those manufacturing industries which depend mostly or considerably upon agricultural materials, and these industries use 42 per cent of all materials used in all industries. The gain in value of farm products in 1908 over 1907 is $290,000,000 and would have been much larger had not the prices of cotton and hay been low. During the last ten years the wealth production in the farms of this country has exceeded the fabulous sum of $60,000,000,000. Greatest of all crops is Indian corn whose production this year is 2,648,000,000 bushels. The value of this crop is $1,615,000,000. This wealth, grown out of the soil in four months of rain, sunshine and some drought, is enough to cancel the interest bearing debt of the United States and to pay for the Panama canal and fifty battleships. This crop is worth this year nearly as much as the great crops of cotton, hay and wheat combined. Compared with the averages of the preceding five years the quantity is 2 per cent higher and the value 43 per cent higher.

SEIZE VENEZUELAN SHIP.

Cruiser Gelderland Captures Coast Guard Vessel.

Willemstad, Dec. 14.—The Dutch cruiser Gelderland on Saturday morning captured the Venezuelan coast guard ship Alix outside Puerto Cabello. The Dutch flag was hoisted over the Alix, the crew of which was sent ashore. The guard ship then was manned by a Dutch officer and marines and towed to Willemstad. The capture of the Alix was plainly discernible from Puerto Cabello. The forts there did not fire upon Gelderland. The steamer Maracaibo, which arrived here from Venezuelan ports, reports that when she was at Maracaibo the air was full of rumors of a revolution in the interior of Venezuela. It is learned from the officers of the Gelderland that the battleship Jacob van Heemskerk and the cruiser Friesland are now off La Guaira and that further captures may be expected at any time. These two vessels left here on Friday, cleared for action, and it was believed at that time that the intention was to make a forcible demonstration at La Guaira.

HAINES' TRIAL ON TODAY.

Case Promises to Rival Murder Trials of Past.

Flushing, N. Y., Dec. 14.—The trial of Thornton Jenkins Hains, author and writer, which will begin here today, promises to rival in public interest many of the country's noted murder trials. Hains will be tried as an accessory to the murder of William E. Annis, a magazine writer, who was killed at the Bayside Yacht club last summer by the defendant's brother, Captain Peter C. Haines, Jr., U. S. A., stationed at Fort Hamilton. It will be charged that Thornton Haines armed with a revolver, waived the crowd back, as Annis, who was stepping out of his catboat was fired upon five times. Counsel for the Haines brothers, who will set up the defense of temporary insanity in the trial of Captain Hains, which will follow that of his brother, have indicated that the defense of Thornton Hains will be that one may not be held as an accessory to the act of another who is temporarily insane.

WHEN YOU RETIRE, COME TO PUGET SOUND.

"Farmers, like other hard workers, often desire to change their environments after they have obtained a competency."—Editorial. Why then not seek homes where climate, scenery, progressiveness and other attractions are all that the most fertile imagination can picture, as in the matchless Puget Sound Country. Here, in the wonderfully fertile Northwest, farmers are every week retiring to the progressive Puget Sound cities, and by investing in improved city property, they not only insure themselves the necessary steady income, but their estates continuously increase in value, without their least concern nor worry.

Especially is this true of investments made in Seattle's Central Business Property, which my Company places within reach of all. When you come next year to SEATTLE'S A-Y-P EXPOSITION, you will want to look into this. Better let me send you full particulars beforehand. Please write to me now.

ONLY THE TRUTH PERMISSIBLE.

Author's Conversion Made Change in Her Literary Output.

A virtue carried to excess may become ridiculous. To such action one may well preach: "Be temperate in all things," even in virtue! Amelia Opie, the English authoress, was not content with any half measures, as is shownin a letter from her, quoted in "Quaker Pictures," by Wilfred Whitten. Mrs. Opie's course of conduct is to be respected as proceeding from her conscientious nature, but fiction readers may congratulate themselves that her opinions are not universal.

Before she became a Quaker she wrote fiction. After her conversion she was asked to contribute a story to a magazine. Her answer to the editor ran as follows:

"Thou knowest, or ought to know, that since I became a Friend I am not free to what is called to make a story. I will write a fact for thy perusal, or any little matter of history or truth, or a poem if thou wishest, but I must not lie and say such and such a thing took place when it did not.

"Dost thou understand?"—Youth's Companion.

The Business of Flying.

We had been talking, a group at the Aero club in New York, about Mr. Roy Knabenshue's thrilling ride on the frame of a dirigible balloon across New York, a thousand feet above the pavements. We had just agreed enthusiastically that the air had been conquered as Capt. T. S. Baldwin came in, the veteran of hundreds of ascensions, who always gets back to his starting point with dirigible balloons, and who lately delivered to the government the biggest airship ever seen in America. We asked him how he felt about the conquest of the air.

"What are my sensations when I get up there?" he replied. "I don't remember that I ever had any. I have had to keep too busy watching the motor running back and forth on the frame to steer, swinging against its motion to keep from pitching, holding the balloon's head into the wind when I could, all the time keeping tight hold on the rudder ropes and watching aloft."—World's Work.

New Version.

A school-teacher in the Italian quarter of an American city told her children the story of the fox and the grapes. Tony was especially delighted with the story, and eagerly sought his chum, Joe, who was in another class. By good luck, the teacher overheard Tony's version.

In his excited, broken English he told the fable much as it is written, until he came to the end. This was his rendering of the climax:

"De olda fox he say: 'Da grape no good, anyhow; alla sour! I guess I go geta de banan."—Youth's Companion.

Considerate.

A young Baltimore couple, recently in matrimony, were going over their wedding presents just after their return from the honeymoon.

"How about that check for $300 we were told your Uncle Tom had promised?" asked the husband. "I haven't seen anything of it, Marie."

"Well," ventured the young wife, "perhaps Uncle Tom learned that your father had already given us a check for that amount and didn't wish us to have duplicated presents."—Harper's Weekly.

Don't Be Deceived by Noise.

Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importunate chink, while thousands of great cattle, reposed beneath the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field; that of course they are many in number; or that, after all, they are other than the little shriveled, meager, hopping, though loud and troublesome insects of the hour.—Edmund Burke.

A Life's Romance.

From London comes a story of the good old-fashioned stamp, a real life romance, in which two workhouse foundlings have been translated to a mansion of wealth and made heirs of a rich West End couple. It seems almost too good to be true, yet the Marylebone board of guardians have given it publicity. About five weeks ago a letter was received by the workhouse committee. It was evident the writer was a cultured and wealthy woman. "We have no children," said the writer, "and we are anxious to adopt a baby boy and girl. Have you any foundlings in your workhouse?" In reply to a letter the writer called. She was a handsome and fashionably-dressed woman. They took her to the children's ward and showed her two little foundlings, babies about fifteen months old. They were plump, well-nourished, extremely pretty and healthy children. "How sweet they are!" exclaimed the woman, fondling the babies. "What are their names?" "William Seymour and Mary Oxford," was the answer, but the explanation of these aristocratic names was the little ones had been found abandoned in Seymour and Oxford streets. "We shall have to change them," said the woman, and she was prepared to take them away then and there until it was pointed out to her that certain legal formalities must be complied with. A member of the board of guardians then paid a visit to Kent, where is the country seat of the couple who wished to adopt the children. Both made a stipulation that their name should not be divulged. They offered to enter a $500 bond for the care and maintenance and education of the children. "The children shall be as our own children," they said. The deed has been drawn up and the babies' adoptive mother and father have signed the papers by which two little waifs ultimately will become inheritors of a large fortune. Such is destiny!

Inauguration Expenses.

The District of Columbia is once more agitating for an appropriation by congress to pay the expenses of the inauguration on the fourth of March next. Probably many persons imagine that the nation does pay for this pageant, but it does not give a penny The entire expense is assumed by the residents of the District of Columbia and it is a big sum for a community that has little commerce. All the money for the parades, etc., is furnished by the citizens through subscriptions, save what can be secured by selling seats on grandstands and tickets to the so-called "inaugural ball." Of course, the states which send military organizations to participate pay their way, but at the same time the District committee has to do something toward entertaining them. The cost has become a burden and really it ought to be made a national affair says the Philadelphia Inquirer. The District needs no advertising, and it gets mighty little business out of the affair. It is a national function and congress ought to be willing to stand for the necessary expenses.

Lord Roberts can talk as well as Kaiser Wilhelm, another fighting man And Lord Roberts talks in the house of lords and not to a newspaper interviewer. "Bobs'" call for an army of a million men to defend England from a German army of invasion was a surprisingly frank expression. Great Britain and all Europe will sit up and take notice on being told that the incomparable British navy must stay at home to keep a German army from swooping down upon London and dictating terms. Between the kaiser and Lord Roberts The Hague will have to work overtime to bring about that reduction of armaments. Everybody is waiting for the other fellow to unload

Three groups of men in modern life challenge attention and admiration for their ubiquity and their audacity, says the Boston Herald. They are the explorer, the pioneer trader and advance agent of commerce, and the religious propagandist. Science, commerce and religion are fundamental facts in contemporary life, as the the motives of truth-seeking, gain-getting and altruism, which are back of them. Of the three great missionary faiths of the world, Buddhism, Mahommedanism and Christianity, the Christian religion has planted its outpost on the most continents and has developed the most effective propaganda machine.

Iowa State News

Events of Recent Occurrence Throughout the Commonwealth.

JUDGE N. W. MACY RETIRES.

Capt. John H. Clark, Veteran Court Reporter, Also Retires.

Clarinda.—With the adjournment of the district court here and by his own desire, Hon. N. W. Macy leaves the bench after a most honorable record of twenty years as judge in the Fifteenth Judicial district of Iowa, and simultaneously Capt. John H. Clark, the oldest court reporter in the state, lays down his pen after a service of thirty eight years. No district judge in the state has equaled the record of Judge Macy in the almost invariable indorsement of his decisions by the supreme court. He will be succeeded by Eugene B. Woodruff of Glenwood. After spending the winter in California, Judge and Mrs. Macy will return to their home in Harlan, where they wil enjoy the judge's retirement together. Captain Clark likewise will take life easy the remainder of his days at his home in Council Bluffs. Before the adjournment of the term here the members of the Page county bar presented Judge Macy with an elegant velvet rug and Captain Clark with an offering of gold.

WILL BUILD BIG CLAY PLANT.

Project Backed by Lehigh and Indiana Capitalists.

Webster City.—At a large meeting of business and professional men held at the Willson hotel, a deal was practically closed for the erection of an immense clay products plant for the manufacture of sewer and drain tile in this city. The plant will be erected in the spring at a cost of some $175,000, will employ 100 men, and will have an output capacity of from ten to twelve car loads per day. The company behind the movement is composed of practically the same men who own the Lehigh Clay Products company of Lehigh, Ia., and the Portland Sewer Pipe Manufacturing company of Portland, Ind.

This company has asked Webster City to furnish them a site of thirty acres, and an agreement was reached upon this point. In return for the site the company agrees to erect its plant here.

DYING MAN BURNED.

Creston Railroad Man Meets Awful Death.

Creston.—Sam Reynolds, a member of the steel gang working south of here a short distance on the St. Joseph branch of the Burlington, was found dead in one of the bunk cars by the watchman, who noticed smoke coming from the car, and upon investigation found Reynolds in a fallen posture against the stove with his clothes nearly burned from his body and his head and left side horribly burned. Life was extinct and it is thought he was stricken with apoplexy or heart failure while standing near the stove and dropped dead. falling across the stove. Shortly after noon he had complained of feeling ill and asked permission of the foreman to go to the bunk car, and nothing more was seen of him until his dead body was found.

MRS. MYERS FOUND GUILTY.

Mt. Pleasant Woman Convicted of Charge of Arson.

Mount Pleasant.—A verdict found Mrs. Anna Meyers guilty of arson. The jury was out twenty-five hours. The defendant was surrounded by her three small sons, her father and husband as the verdict was read. Eighteen ballots were taken. Her bond was fixed at $2,000. A motion for a new trial will be heard Jan. 13, or sentence will be passed. She attempted to burn the Livesay home near Winfield the night of July 8.

Big Sum to Morningside.

Fort Dodge.—Fort Dodge Methodists have offered $10,000 as their contribution to the endowment fund of Morningside college, Sioux City. It is hoped that $2,500 can be raised here and the rest in the Fort Dodge district. This sum will help to complete the $58,000 yet remaining of a $150,000 endowment fund that the college authorities are trying to raise.

Iowa Sends Poultry to Europe.

Pella.—Henry Rhynsburger, a poultry dealer of this place, who has one of the largest and finest egg and poultry plants in Iowa, is preparing a block of 300,000 pounds of poultry for Europe. He now has over half that amount near the Atlantic coast. Recently Mr. Rhynsburger shipped 10,000 birds east at one time.

NAB GIRL IN MAN'S ATTIRE.

Prisoner At Cedar Rapids Tells Story of Adventure.

Cedar Rapids.—A young woman, masquerading as a man, and telling a strange story of adventures, with which a murder committed two years ago in Philadelphia may be connected, was arrested here under the name of Earl Waters. The police arrested "Waters" for the perpetration of a practical joke in robbing his own room and filing a complaint against another person. Then they discovered "Waters" to be a girl, apparently about 18 years old. The girl does not know her own name unless it is Pearl Waters. She says she was born in Europe and that her earliest recollections are of life in New York. A woman with whom she lived was abusive and four years ago the girl donned a boy's suit and left. At Philadelphia she fell in with a young man, becoming his companion, though she did not reveal her sex. She says they become involved in a quarrel, afterward committed murder and then fled. They came to Cedar Rapids two years ago, since which time both have been employed as newsboys on trains.

SHELBY LAMBS MULTIPLY.

Several Thousand Being Raised in That County This Year.

Harlan.—Several thousand western lambs are being fed in Shelby county htis year, some of them having already been marketed. They are turned into the corn in September or October and feed upon the leaves of the corn and eat some of the grain. Besides doing this they clean the fields of fox tail and other weeds. The industry bids fair to increase in this county, as land has become too high for raising cattle or sheep and the great crops of corn make the county an ideal feeding ground for the cheaply grown stockers of the western plains. Comparatively few cattle are being fed and the amount of corn coming to the elevators reminds one of the time when there was no feeding at all. Many of the farms of Shelby county are this year yielding a gross income of not less than $35 per acre for the corn grown

BOOMS AS A PLASTER TOWN.

Another Big Concern Enters the Fort Dodge Field.

Fort Dodge.—The closing of a lease by the Acme Cement Plaster company, with headquarters in St Louis for the American Independent Plaster company of this city would indicate that Fort Dodge is to be one of the most important stucco manufacturing points in the United States if not the plasteropolis of the entire country. The Acme company is a million dollar corporation and one of three largest in this country. It already has eight other mills but has long wanted a mill at this point to better enable it to meet its competition. If this programme is carried out it will make this city the stucco center of the United States as the mills in operation steady produce seventy car loads a day or two full trains, making it the heaviest tonnage point on the Illinois Central road in Iowa.

NEW IOWA BUTTON PLANT.

Old Factory at Lansing is to Be Reopened.

Lansing.—The New Jersey Button company expects to begin operations at Lansing, Ia., with a force of fifty men on Jan. 1. Under the supervision of Manager Ritchie, the old plant located on the river front has been refitted and its capacity materially increased by the addition of new machinery. When all is complete Lansing will have one of the largest and best equipped pearl button factories on the upper Mississippi. A similar plant has been in operation at Guttenberg for several months. A force of one hundred men are employed in grinding and sawing the shells of the Mississippi mussel.

Farmers Victims of Tuberculosis.

Iowa City.—That the farmers of Iowa are more likely to contract tuberculosis than the city residents is shown by the proportion of inmates in the Iowa tuberculosis sanitarium. Dr. H. E. Kirschner, supreintendent of the colony, says that out of the eighty-seven patients a large portion come from the country districts and that when tracing back to ascertain the origin of the disease he finds that these patients usually worked among cattle affected with tuberculosis.

YOU CAN'T BEAT THE DUTCH.

CARACAS STIRRED BY RIOTS

MOBS SWEEP THROUGH CITY, UNHINDERED BY POLICE.

Crowds Burn Statues and Pictures of President and Pillage Property of His Friends.

Caracas, Venezuela.—The people of Caracas arose against President Castro. An infuriated mob, unhindered by the police, swept through the city, wrecking the property of his henchmen and his closest friends. The people rounded up all the statues and pictures of President Castro from the clubs and other semi-public buildings and burned them with rejoicing, on the Plaza Bolivar. Castro's rule in Venezuela probably is ended.

In spite of Holland's warlike activity on the coast, there have been no demonstrations against the Netherlands; they all have been directed against President Castro and Acting President Gomez.

The Venezuelan capital witnessed an outbreak of disorder, following the warlike activities of the Dutch warships along the coast, that made it necessary by nightfall to declare martial law in order to put an end to the rioting and pillaging. There were several attacks on private property on the part of the mob before the authorities got the situation in hand, and several of the agitators were arrested. There was no actual conflict between the people and the police. The pillaging was confined to the properties of Venezuelans, notably Senors Rivas and Thielen. No foreigners were molested.

Further dangerous demonstrations are anticipated. No official act deposing Castro from the presidency of Venezuela yet has been taken, but such a step is expected any moment.

Berlin.—President Castro of Venezuela maintains his composure in the face of alarming reports which have been published here regarding the disturbance in Venezuela. When dispatches were shown to him Wednesday that the people of Caracas had arisen against him, he said quietly:

"I don't believe it. I had dispatches from Caracas this morning, but they mentioned nothing of the kind."

WRIGHT IN REMARKABLE FLIGHT

Creates Wild Enthusiasm by Performance with His Aeroplane.

Le Mans.—Wilbur Wright, the American aeroplanist, made a most remarkable flight in his aeroplane Wednesday. Instead of rising gradually, the machine shot up like a rocket to a height of 240 feet. The aeronaut then permitted it to drop about 50 feet, at which altitude he stopped the engine. The machine glided down smoothly and gracefully, landing about three-quarters of a mile from the starting point. Members of the English Aero club who were present became wildly enthusiastic over the splendid performance.

House Calls for Facts.

Washington.—The house of representatives Thursday by unanimous vote adopted a resolution requesting the president to supply it with any evidence that may be in his possession that will justify the statement in his last annual message in relation to the attitude of members of congress toward appropriations for the secret service of the government.

The Perkins committee will continue in session during the Christmas holidays to receive such evidence from the president.

Two Thousand Miners Strike.

Charleston, W. Va. — Obeying the strike order of President Benjamin Davis of the District No. 17, United Mine Workers of America, nearly 2,000 men who were employed in the 14 active mines in the Paint Creek territory failed to report for work Wednesday. Practically the entire working forces of the mines, except the bosses, have become strikers, and the operations are closed.

TOBACCO COMBINE ILLEGAL

Federal Circuit Court Decree Orders Trust to Dissolve.

New York.—Nine companies, with their subsidiaries, are named as constituting an illegal combination in a final decree, filed Tuesday in the United States circuit court, putting into effect the judgment recently obtained by the government in its suit to dissolve the so-called tobacco trust.

The companies named are the American Tobacco Company, the American Snuff Company, the American Cigar Company, the American Stogie Company, MacAndrews & Forbes Company, P. Lorillard & Co., R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Company and the Conley Foil Company. Each of the first five of these companies the court declares is in itself a combination in violation of law.

The order enjoins these companies from continuing as parties in the combination and restrains them from engaging in interstate or foreign trade until "reasonable competition" between them is restored. Appeals by both the government and the defendants will act as a temporary stay of the decree.

PLUNGE TO DEATH WITH AUTO.

Milwaukee Man and Chauffeur Drowned in the River.

Milwaukee. — An automobile containing three men dashed into the open draw of the Oneida street bridge at one o'clock Thursday morning and went to the bottom of the river, carrying two of the occupants to their death. A third was rescued with difficulty and is at the emergency hospital.

The dead are Oscar Z. Bartlett, member of the board of trade, and Albert Kunz, chauffeur.

A. F. Solliday of the Solliday Motor Company was rescued.

The car approached the bridge from the east, coming down the Oneida street hill at a high rate of speed. The driver apparently did not notice that the bridge was open until the car was within 20 feet of it. Kunz then made a frantic effort to avoid the river, but only succeeded in turning the car as far as the curb, where it bounded into the air, turning a complete somersault between the dock and the center pier of the bridge.

FREEDOM DAWNS IN TURKEY.

New Ottoman Parliament Is Opened by the Sultan.

Constantinople.—Turkey made her bow as a full fledged constitutional monarchy Thursday, when the new Ottoman parliament held its first session.

Thursday was proclaimed a general holiday in honor of the parliament and the city did its best to observe the occasion fittingly. The decorations were unprecedented and most of the population was in the streets eagerly discussing the prospects of the new regime. Practically every regiment in the Constantinople garrison lined the route under arms when the sultan drove to open the assembly, while school children stationed at vantage points along the way sang the hymn of liberty as the imperial cortege passed.

Well-Known Author Dead.

New Haven, Conn.—Donald Grant Mitchell, 84 years old, the well-known author who wrote under the nom de plume "Ik Marvel," died at his home, "Marvelwood," in Edgewood, a suburb of this city, Tuesday night. Y.; Mrs. Mason Hoppin and the Misses Elizabeth, Bessie and Harriet Mitchell, all of New Haven.

Four Celebrations of New Year's Day

EW YEAR is celebrated in this country at least on four different dates in addition to the regular national New Year's celebration on January 1. The t of these foreign celebrations will that of the Greeks and Russians a few other nationalities which ere to old style dates. They will e New Year on January 14, 13 days r than the New Year of the new e. Next in order comes the Chi- New Year, on February 13, and, a day later, February 14, comes Mohammedan first day of the year. Jewish New Year falls nealy nine ths later, about the middle of Sep- on the first day of the month of shri."

he celebrations vary both in ac- dance with the religions of the va- s peoples and their climatic, al and national characteristics. h the Greeks, Russians, Servians, garians and Macedonians, all of m adhere to the Greek Catholic rch, New Year's is one of the most sant if not the pleasantest festival the year. With the Jews, on the trary, the New Year, Rosh Has- a, as it is called, is far from being leasant affair. It is a day of retri- ion, of judgment. It is preceded weeks of prayer, fasting and peni- ce, and is followed by ten days wn as the days of repentance, ich wind up with Yom Kippur, the of atonement, a most grewsome weird day, dreaded by every or- dox Jew.

Greeks Celebrate Two Days.

he most interesting and joyous ebration of the New Year is that of Greeks. The Greek New Year ts two days. In these two days the ek nature with its unbounded joy life comes into its own. The heart every Greek thrills on that day with bounded joy. Passionately he aits the evening, when in his little eece, in a genuine Greek restau- nt, with male cooks and attendants, can get his genuine Greek food, llenic dishes, and wash them away h Greek wine which was purpose- imported into this country for the lidays.

"Christmas is a great holiday with ," said a prominent Greek, "but it is er all a solemn day. It is a religi- us holiday. No gifts are exchanged Christmas and the three days which e holiday last are given over to ligious meditation. How different is with the New Year! Next to our tional holiday on March 25, which mmemorates the date of our inde- ndence, just as July 4 commemo- tes the birth of the American na- n, New Year's days, for we have o of them, are our greatest holidays. Greece New Year is essentially a mily holiday. There we have a chil- en's afternoon which is devoted en- ely to the young ones, who are giv- the utmost opportunities to enjoy themselves. In this country, how- ever, it is slightly different. Out of the 13,000 Greeks living in Chicago only 200 have their families here. There are only between sixty and eighty children, and as we are only just planning to build a school of our own, we have not yet the means nor the call for a children's afternoon on New Year's day."

Still, many of the Greek families will observe this ancient custom in this country. They will have their children's afternoon. They will have their delicious New Year's pudding known as "king's pudding." In fact, in many cases the pudding will be even more delicious than it would have been in old Athens. For one of the ancient customs among the Greeks is to hide some gold coin in one portion of the pudding and he who gets the share of the pudding with the gold coin in it becomes the favorite as well as the leader of the two days' joy and sport. In this country, where gold is more plentiful than in Greece and where it is more easily earned by the Greek father, the pudding promises to contain more gold and be much more delightful to the finder of the same.

Russians Like Our Food.

Russians in this country celebrate but one day, and they, too, attempt to produce a home atmosphere. However, home food is not thought of. The bread, the meat, and the wine of the United States are considered as good as and even far better than the products of their own land.

The Macedonians, Servians and Bulgarians celebrate the New Year, perhaps less elaborately, also on the same day as their Greek and Russian coreligionists.

The Turks celebrate their first of the year with the modesty characteristic of people who have not yet any hold on a place.

The Chinese will have their customary celebration of the Chinese New Year on February 13 with feasting and enjoyments with which the holiday is observed in the Celestial empire.

In striking opposition to the spirit of joy and happiness which pervades the New Year of the Greeks and Christendom generally is the New Year of the Jews. With the Jews who also observe the New Year for two days, the days are not days of feasting and enjoyment but days of judgment. According to the belief of every orthodox Jew, every member of the Jewish race is tried on the New Year. The books kept in heaven are opened on that day, the record of each man for the year just ending is looked through, and taken under advisement for ten days. On the tenth day, the day of atonement, the fate of each man for the coming year is drawn up whether he should live or die, prosper or be poor. On the day of atonement the fate is sealed and nothing can change it any more.

HEARST'S PUBLISHER ACCUSED

S. S. CARVAHLO CHARGED WITH CRIMINAL LIBEL.

J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Bases Complaint on Article Saying He Originated Peonage in Stockade.

New York.—On a charge of criminal libel, made by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., S. S. Carvalho, president of the Star Company, publishers of William R. Hearst's New York American, was arrested Thursday and arraigned in police court before Magistrate Finn.

At the solicitation of Clarence J. Shearn, attorney for the Hearst publications, and without any objection being raised on the part of Assistant District Attorney Garvan, who had charge of the prosecution, Mr. Carvalho was paroled in the custody of his lawyer until December 26, for examination.

Mr. Rockefeller, accompanied by his counsel, Lawyer Murphy, appeared in District Attorney Jerome's office early in the day and made complaint that the article published in the New York American of December 17, under a Chicago date of December 16, with the head line, "J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., originated peonage in stockade, it is said," tended to injure his good name, reputation and credit and to make him appear ridiculous.

He submitted a typewritten affidavit embodying these charges to District Attorney Garvan, to whom the case was assigned. On the presentation of the affidavits to Magistrate Finn, he issued warrants for the arrest of Mr. Carvalho, Bradford Merrill, treasurer, and Edward H. Clark, secretary, of the Star Company.

Mr. Carvalho was found in his office. Merrill and Clark were not in their offices. Mr. Carvalho took his arrest good naturedly.

Bradford Merrill, treasurer of the Star Company, explained Thursday night that the article at which Mr. Rockefeller had taken offense had come from Chicago in the regular routine way, that it had not originated in New York, and that an investigation would be started at once. "If we find that we have wronged Mr. Rockefeller," said Mr. Merrill, "we will, of course, do everything in our power to atone for it."

TOTAL POPULAR VOTE GIVEN.

14,853,059 Ballots Cast in the Last Election.

New York. — The total popular vote of the various presidential candidates at the last national election was made known Wednesday in an official form by the filing of the last of the official votes, that of Michigan.

The totals show the following votes cast:

Taft (Rep.), 7,637,676; Bryan (Dem.), 6,393,182; Debs (Soc.), 448,453; Chafin (Pro.), 241,252; Hisgen (Ind.), 83,186; Watson (Pop.), 33,871; Gilhaus (Soc. Lab.), 15,421. Total for all candidates, 14,853,059.

This grand total exceeds by 1,342,351 the total number of votes cast in the presidential election of 1904, when the grand total was 13,510,708.

Compared with that election, the candidates of the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties increased their vote this year. The reverse is true of the candidates of the Prohibition, Populist and Socialist Labor parties. The Independence party did not figure in the presidential election of four years ago.

"KENTUCKY JOE" ARRESTED.

Alleged Leader of Post Office Robbers Is Caught.

Bluefield, W. Va.—Henry Collie, alias "Kentucky Joe," was arrested here Thursday by local officers acting under the direction of secret service agents. Collie, it is said, has several aliases, some of which are Joe Miller, J. C. Miller and Joe Foster. He is 60 years old and is alleged to be the leader of a gang of post office robbers and safe blowers who have been operating in Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee for more than three years. Three of his alleged confederates were arrested at Tazewell, Va., last week.

Rostov-on-the Don Burning.

St. Petersburg.—Dispatches received here state that a great fire was raging at Rostov-on-the-Don, which had destroyed the center of the town, together with another entire quarter. Several lives were lost. Rostov-on-the-Don is a busy commercial center and is the principal shipping point for the wheat and other products of southeastern Russia. It has a population of 120,000.

Creditors Will Get Little.

Detroit, Mich.—That not more than $50,000 is collectable out of apparent assets of $1,200,000 was indicated by Wednesday's testimony before Bankruptcy Referee H. P. Davock in the case of Cameron Currie & Co., the Detroit brokerage firm that failed last July. Estimates have been made as low as three per cent, regarding the amount that unsecured creditors will realize on their claims.

WANT KNOX'S PLACE

WILD SCRAMBLE AMONG PENNSYLVANIA POLITICIANS.

FORAKER IN HOT CONTEST

No Contest Will Be Made against Root in New York—Contests in Four States.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—While the terms of thirty-one senators, more than one-third of the entire body, expire on March 4, next, eighteen of this number already have been re-elected or assured of re-election, either through successes in primary contests or pledges of a majority of the membership of the several state legislatures charged with the duty of electing senators before the beginning of the next congress. In addition to the vacancies occurring by reason of a provision of the constitution there will be a vacancy in Pennsylvania on account of the forthcomig resignation of Senator Knox to accept the portfolio of secretary of state in the Taft cabinet. There will be a scramble between prominent representatives of Pennsylvania for Mr. Knox's post which will occasion public interest equal to the contest going on now in Ohio for the seat of Senator Foraker, and in Connecticut for the seat of Senator Brandagee. That Secretary of State Elihu Root will be given the New York senatorship, now held by Senator Platt, is conceded and a contest is not expected. If pledges made by certain republican members of the Oregon legislature are kept Chamberlain will come to the senate, but if they are violated, as many leading republicans of the state are demanding, it is possible that Fulton will be chosen to succeed himself. Contests have been narrowed down to Ohio, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Indiana, where a democrat will be elected to succeed Hemenway, the legislature of the state having been lost by the republicans in the recent election.

WESTERN UNION IS ROBBED.

Pacific Coast Operators Take Thousands of Dollars.

Portland, Ore., Dec. 21.—An investigation in the case of the Western Union Telegraph company, carried on recently has disclosed an organized system of theft among railroad operators on the Pacific coast by reason of which the telegraph company has been robbed of several thousand dollars. Complaints are made that messages filed at certain stations had not been sent or delivered. A secret service was organized and it was discovered that in some instances 60 per cent of the money received for messages filed at railroad offices never reached the telegraph company. The telegrams were properly delivered but all records had been destroyed. Following the discovery of the theft and the accumulation of proof, warrants were obtained for the arrest of several operators.

BIG METEOR HITS KANSAS.

Aerial Visitor of Great Brilliancy Alarms People.

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 21.—The strangest meteor ever seen in this part of the country was witnessed falling yesterday afternoon between 5 and 6 o'clock. The meteor appeared to drop somewhere in Kansas. The meteor itself seemed to be a ball of about the size of a street lamp. Its tail or stream of sparks was several feet in length. It was visible about thirty seconds. A peculiar white streak and what is regarded as a phenomenon which the meteor seemed to leave behind it as a path was visible for fifteen minutes. It was also observed at Wichita and Salina, Kans.

Fight Increased Rates.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 21.—Shippers and importers are arranging to unite in a statewide protest against the increase in transcontinental tariffs, announced by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe roads, effective Jan. 12. Opposition will take the form of meetings in the leading cities when representatives of various industries will set forth the grievances against the carries. An executive committee appointed to deal with the question announced this order of procedure as more desirable than appeal to the courts or the interstate commerce commission.

Archbishop of Bordeaux Dies.

Chamberry, France, Dec. 21.—Cardinal Victor Lucian Sulpice Lecot, archbishop of Bordeaux, died at a hotel here from hemorrhage of the brain, while returning from a visit to Rome. Cardinal Lecot was the leader of the movements among a group of French ecclesiastics to find a basis of settlement in the difference which has arisen between the government and the church.

ECZEMA ALL OVER HIM.

No Night's Rest for a Year and Limit of His Endurance Seemed Near —Owes Recovery to Cuticura.

"My son Clyde was almost completely covered with eczema. Physicians treated him for nearly a year without helping him any. His head, face, and neck were covered with large scabs which he would rub until they fell off. Then blood and matter would run out and that would be worse. Friends coming to see him said that if he got well he would be disfigured for life. When it seemed as if he could possibly stand it no longer, I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. That was the first night for nearly a year that he slept. In the morning there was a great change for the better. In about six weeks he was perfectly well. Our leading physician recommends Cuticura for eczema. Mrs. Algy Cockburn, Shiloh, O., June 11, 1907."

An Encouraging Average.

"I have been looking over my financial operations," said Mr. Easigo. "I must say they are more successful than usual."

"Have you been making large profits?"

"No. I don't expect anything like that."

"But you say you were successful?"

"Comparatively successful. During the month I have loaned money to five friends, and only three of them have quit speaking to me."

CHILD SPOKE WITH AUTHORITY.

Had Biblical Proof of the Existence of Cannibal Cows.

"Now, children," said the pretty teacher, "I want you all to write a composition on the cow. You know what a cow is. You know that a cow gives us all the milk we drink. Now, write me something original about the cow as you know her; nothing commonplace." It would take several pages to print the results, but there is room for at least one composition by a girl of seven:

"A cow is a quadruped, having four legs and four feet. She gives milk, and sometimes has horns, but not always. The cow's baby is called a calf and sometimes bossy. When a cow talks she lows. A cow with horns can hook, but a cow without horns is helpless. A cow is a carnivorous animal when she has a chance, but she ordinarily eats grass, if there is any. A cow is a cannibal if you let her alone, for she will eat her own kind."

The horrified teacher exclaimed: "Sallie May, where on earth did you get the idea, the ridiculous idea, that a cow is carnivorous and a cannibal? You meant to say that a cow is herbivorous or graminivorous." "No, teacher, I read it in the Holy Bible. Don't you remember there were seven fine fat cows feeding near a brook, and seven lean and hungry cows came and ate them up? See Genesis 41:4." Teacher reserved decision.

RICH IN RECUPERATIVE POWER.

Forests of Northern Maine That More Than Hold Their Own.

That is the one astounding thing in this whole region of northern Maine, the regenerative power of the forest. Men with axes have been hacking at the giants of the woods up here for two centuries and more. The goliaths have been laid low, indeed, yet for one tree that stood on a given space along the hillsides and in the valleys of No. 1 a century ago, five stand to-day.

They are giants no more, it is true, but they are splendid trees, and just as the Liliputians might prevail where Gulliver was bound, so these trees hold their own against man and even press in on his clearings and wipe them out. There must be many more lumbermen with axes along the Macwahoc, the Moluncus and the Mattawamkeag before this beautiful region will fail of its forest.

IN SOUTH AMERICA YEARS AGO.

Caustic Description of Venezuela and Colombia.

Prof. Hiram Bingham writes of his travels in Venezuela, saying of San Carlos: "In the time of Bolivar (about 1819) it was a place of great importance, boasted of 30,000 inhabitants and many wealthy citizens. Today it has barely 3,000 souls and a few interesting ruins. Earthquakes, revolutions and cattle plagues have combined against it. A few companies of sad-eyed soldiers and a handful of grafting politicians hardly make up for its lost estate. The ruins of the grand house where Bolivar is said to have been entertained shortly before the battle of Carobobo are most extensive, and cover a city block. Part of the outer walls are still standing. The corner room has recently been roofed over and turned into a butcher's shop. The ruins of another house not far away remind one of Italy, while those of the 'Casa Blanqueria' are almost Pompeian. Painted frescoes, elaborate reliefs, carved wood ceilings and tiled floors now shelter a polite but poverty-stricken family and their pigs and fowls. The exterior is decorated with caryatides that look like incas.'"

Of the ants in Venezuela Prof. Bingham says: "At one place on the sandy trail the ants had formed a living causeway over the fine sand of the path, in order to facilitate the great speed at which the majority wished to travel. The causeway was over two inches wide, and from one to three ants deep. So firmly did the 'bridgeites' hold together, I lifted the causeway four inches from the ground by thrusting a stick underneath, without breaking their formation."

Concerning Colombian inns and paper money: "Corrazales is a small village of 30 houses. The innkeeper did not like our looks, and denied the existence of food or lodging. Again we had to resort to compulsion. The only money desired here is 'billetes,' the Colombian paper, which is at 10,000 per cent. discount. A Colombian nickel coin was refused in payment for a spool of thread."

SYNOPSIS.

Three girls — Elizabeth, Gabrielle and Elise—started for Canada to spend the summer there. On board steamer they were frightened by an apparently demented stranger, who finding a bag belonging to one of them, took enjoyment in scrutinizing a photo of the trio. Elise shared her stateroom with a Mrs. Graham, also bound for Canada. The young women on a sightseeing tour met Mrs. Graham, anxiously awaiting her husband, who had a mania for sailing. They were introduced to Lord Wilfrid and Lady Edith. A cottage by the ocean was rented by the trio for the summer. Elizabeth learned that a friend of her father's was to call. Two men called, one of them being the queer-acting stranger on the steamer. The girls were "not at home," but discovered by the cards left that one of the men was Elizabeth's father's friend. The men proved to be John C. Blake and Gordon Bennett. The party was told of the search for smugglers in the vicinity of the cottage. Elise visited Mrs. Graham to find that her life was not the happiest. She learned that the Grahams and Lady Edith were acquainted. A wisp of yellow hair from Mr. Graham's pocket fell into the hands of Elise. Mrs. Graham's hair was black. During a storm the young women heard a crash in the basement of the cottage and a moment later Mary Anne, their woman servant, entered, her arm bleeding. To assure them there was no danger, Mary Anne descended to the basement alone and quieted their fears. Lady Edith told the girls of a robbery of jewels at the hotel. Fearing for the safety of her own gems, she left them in a safe at the cottage. Mr. Gordon Bennett was properly introduced, explained his queer actions, returned the lost bag.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

"I am glad it amuses you," I remarked, in my most frigid manner, which I have been told is extremely chilling.

"Oh, I say," he said quickly, "don't look at it that way. Why, it was nothing after all. I had made two trips on that old boat this summer, and one of those dilapidated chairs broke down with me and nearly pitched me overboard. I complained, but the company would not get new ones, which put my back up a bit, so I got into the habit of examining them, and when I found one weak in the back or legs I just pitched it overboard. That wasn't so bad, was it? Of course I never thought how it looked, and I did 'mutter,' but I'm heartily glad you did not hear what I said."

It was a very simple explanation—so simple, in fact, that I felt provoked it had not occurred to me, and I hated to think how he would relate the incident to his friend Mr. Blake, and how they would laugh over it. So I merely looked out at the ocean and made a frosty, impersonal remark about the view.

But instead of the familiar landscape I found myself looking straight into two very blue eyes with a trace of anxiety in them, and a sunburned hand was extended toward me appealingly.

"Let's shake and be friends," he said heartily. "I'm sorry I alarmed you, but I'm glad I found out my offense. I was determined I would know what it was. When the general wrote me his daughter was here, and I discovered who it was, I was delighted, for of course I saw you all on the boat, and I wanted awfully to know you. You don't mind my saying so? Then when I got snubbed so unmercifully I could not understand it. Shall we start all over again, and will you explain to your friends that I am in possession of all my senses and hope to keep them a while longer?"

Well, it was impossible not to smile also, and indeed I was very glad of a chance to descend gracefully from my high horse, so we shook hands gravely and started all over again, as he had suggested.

I inquired where he spent the night, and he mentioned the hotel we had deserted, so I told him about the robbery. He had heard nothing, having left very early in the morning, meaning to sail home in time for breakfast.

I asked him if his boat suffered any ill effects from the storm, and his manner grew all at once constrained and ill at ease, so I changed the subject, fearing that it might have been irrevocably damaged against our slip, and feeling somewhat responsible. I spoke of the cottage, and how we enjoyed life here, and the contrast it was to the hotel.

"Yes," he said absently; "it's a jolly little place. But, tell me, how did you hear of it, and how did you manage to get it? I understood it was not for rent."

I told him he was mistaken; that we had no trouble at all in securing it, and that the rent was ridiculously low, all things considered.

"I would like to know to whom it belongs," I remarked. "I understand it was some woman's whim, and she has tired of it. Perhaps we might get some of our relatives to buy it and come here every summer."

"Don't you know anything about it?"—he was looking at me curiously now.

"Not a thing," I said lightly; "do you?"

A dull red flush was distinctly visible beneath his coat of tan as he replied to my question.

"I'm not a native, you know. I was here for a bit last year, and I liked it; so when I had a chance to buy an island, house and all, I jumped at it. But I'm not wise about my neighbors. I do know that this cottage was occupied last summer, and I heard the people were very unsocial and never received a guest or entered the village while they were here; and, of course, there were stories. Gossip flourishes on a mystery, you know."

"Well," I returned, "I don't care how mysterious the former tenants were, but I'm glad they did not come back. Perhaps they were in mourning, or invalids, or something of that sort."

"No doubt," he agreed hastily; "no doubt."

And then we changed the subject and talked of other things till the sound of voices and laughter told me Elizabeth and Gabrielle were returning from the village. They brought Lady Edith and Lord Wilfrid both home with them to dinner, and it was not difficult to persuade Mr. Bennett to stay also, so we had the first of some very merry repasts, where morning costumes were allowed, and where Mary Anne, to quote her own words, "dished up hanything that came 'andy and prayed the Lord it would be enough."

That night I asked Gabrielle to look in her bag and give me my side-comb; but she found that it was not there, and that our picture also was missing.

"We will ask for it the next time we see him," remarked Elizabeth. "I don't think it is very nice in him to have taken it out."

"Oh, no," I objected; "don't say anything about it. I don't want to give him the satisfaction of knowing we missed it."

And we all agreed that this was our most dignified course.

CHAPTER VII.

Elizabeth inspected the cellar next morning, and I went with her, by request.

"Not that I'm afraid," she explained elaborately; "but it is always nicer to have some one to speak to, and, besides, one of you, at least, ought to take an interest in such things."

It looked very much like other cellars, with paved floor, coal bins, and so on, except that it ran far back, forming a sort of alleyway, which was very dark and unprepossessing and seemed to be a repository for old boxes, bits of paper, kindling wood, and the usual accumulated trash of a household. At the extreme end an empty packing case large enough to have contained a piano rested against the wall, which looked and smelled very damp and mouldy.

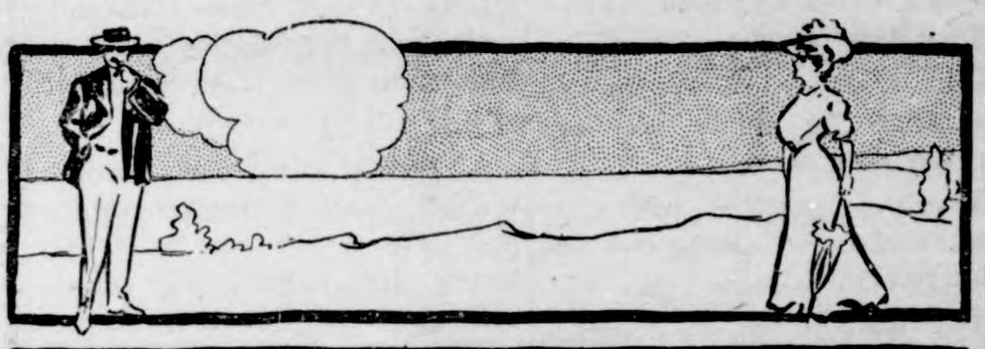
Elizabeth glanced about and curled her lip contemptuously; the zeal of the born housekeeper shone in her eye, and I knew she had visions of nicely whitewashed walls, with eminently proper receptacles for kindling and waste paper, and foresaw trouble ahead for Mary Anne.

We could hear the ocean outside, for the cellar was an excavation in the bluff, and it conveyed such an unpleasant impression of a vault-like cave that I was not sorry when Elizabeth proposed an adjournment.

"And here is the hanging shelf," I remarked, as I almost ran into it. "Mary Anne has lost no time in putting it up again—on chains this time, so I hope it is safe."

"How rusty they are!" said Elizabeth, pausing to examine them. "They look as though they had been here for years, but I suppose they are old ones she found somewhere. This place must be well aired; it is awfully musty."

She gathered up her skirts as she spoke, preparatory to going up the steps, and I was about to follow when something caught my eye, and mechanically I stooped and picked it up from a crack between two bricks.



"It Must Have Belonged to the People Who Were Here Last Year."

"Have you lost anything?" called Elizabeth from the stairs.

"No," I replied; "I have found something. Look here."

Together we examined my discovery as it lay in the palm of my hand—a man's cuff link of dull, raised gold, the head of the Sphinx on one side and the under link shaped like a small key.

Elizabeth turned it over curiously.

"It must have belonged to the people who were here last year," she conjectured. "It's very pretty, isn't it? I never saw one anything like it."

"Look, Mary Anne!" I exclaimed, as we entered the kitchen. "See what I have found."

Mary Anne advanced willingly, but as I raised the button by the little key and held it toward her, her jaw dropped suddenly and the color forsook her ruddy face.

"Where'd you find it, miss?"

"In the cellar, right by the steps."

"You've—been—down in the cellar?"

"Certainly; why not?"

Mary Anne wiped her face with a corner of her gingham apron, and poked wood into the stove with reckless prodigality.

"It's entirely too fore'anded you are, Miss Elizabeth," she grumbled—"the cellar lookin' like distraction and you goin' down there the fust time! What kind of 'ousekeepin' do you think I do? This very day I laid out to put everything shipshape down there and take you around meself. And the cellar's damp-like, and no place fur a lady tny'ow, and you like to take cold and sneeze yer 'ead off!"

Elizabeth laughed and assured her that this catastrophe was not liable to happen to-day, and suggested that the cellar might be improved by the introduction of fresh air and sunlight.

"And how soon you got the shelf fixed!" she added, by way of soothing Mary Anne's ruffled feelings.

"Shelf?" she repeated vaguely. "Oh, of course, miss. 'Ow could I git along without it? And what else did ye find in the cellar, Miss Elsie, besides the little button?"

I thought she watched me keenly as I replied I had not looked for anything more, and wondered she had not seen it on her trips up and down the steps.

"Me eyes are not so good as they once were, nor so bright as yours, Miss Elise," she remarked. "It's a pretty thing, now isn't it? What will you be doin' with it?"

But I did not reply, for Gabrielle, who had been to the village for the mail, now appeared, and Elizabeth immediately lost interest in everything else.

I do not wish to arouse false suspicions, but Elizabeth certainly wrote a great many very long letters, and received volumes all in the same handwriting, which always arrived on certain days of the week. She used to open them with an air of indifference and glance over them carelessly, then in a few minutes she would make some excuse to go off alone, and we could sometimes see her poring over them, dead to the world as she turned page after page, and smiling a smile which exasperated Gabrielle exceedingly, although she also did not a little corresponding on her own account that summer.

To-day, however, she handed Elizabeth her letter without comment, and only glanced casually at the cuff link when I displayed it in triumph, for she was eager to relate the news she had accumulated during her trip to the village.

"You know that smuggler?" she began, seating herself on the kitchen doorstep and removing her hat.

"No," I interrupted; "I'm happy to say I don't know him."

"You know about him, don't you? It's all the same thing. Well, I've been to the hotel, and I heard that he is suspected of having been on the island the night of the storm, and they think"—she dropped her voice cautiously—"they think he took Mrs. Bundy's emeralds."

"Who thinks so?"

"Oh, the detectives, of course. Lady Edith told me. And they say it was a very foolish thing for him to do, because he can now be arrested in Canada. And our government officials are perfectly wild, too, for a whole lot of things were smuggled in somehow right under their noses."

"Is he on the island now?"

"Oh, no. As Lord Wilfrid said, it would be madness for him to stay here now. He must have been one of the men who left the hotel so early that morning—before Mrs. Bundy discovered her loss. They are following them up, of course, but it was easy enough to register a false name and address. I can forgive his smuggling, but I can't forgive his robbing that poor old woman—she's just scared to death, and expects to have her throat cut every night, they say—so I hope they will catch him."

ASKED TO WATCH FOR HUBBY.

Cleveland Woman Thinks That Request Was the Limit.

"I don't care what anybody asks me now," remarked the woman with the heavily upholstered velvet jacket. "I'll be prepared now for anything. Nothing would surprise me. Not after what the woman across the hall asked me yesterday.

"It was after five o'clock, and I was busy getting dinner, for my husband is usually home by six. I guess the woman across the hall must have been figuring on having her dinner ready just on time, too. She knocked at the door, and when I asked her to come out to the kitchen she says: 'O, no, I haven't time to stop only a moment. I just wanted to ask you if you would look out of your window and let me know when my husband gets off the car and then tell me so I can hurry my supper on the table. He's always in such a hurry when he gets home. You'll watch out for him, won't you, dear? You know I can't see the car from our flat.'

"And she was gone before I had time to catch my breath. I can see myself sitting at the window and watching for her husband. The idea!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Effect Spoiled.

"Refused you? Surprising! Did you walk with her in the moonlight?"

"Yes."

"And vow you would gladly die for her?"

"I did; but just then some one yelled 'Hands up!' and I ran three blocks before her mischievous young brother caught me and told me it was only a joke."

State Capital Gossip

Many Items of Interest from Our Correspondent at Des Moines.

ure Is Successful.

Des Moines.—Seven hundred and wenty-four men have been cured of e liquor habit at the state inebri- e hospital at Knoxville during the st two years, so Dr. Miner, super- tendent of the institution told the eads of the state institutions at their uarterly conference.

John Cownie, chairman of the oard of control, gave a talk on the rming facilities at the state insti- utons and advised a more extensive ultivation owned and under the con- rol of the state. He said it is possi- le that the state will rent more nd in close proximity to the sever- l institutions and farm on a larger ale next year.

Mr. Cownie announced that the rounds of the tuberculosis colony t Iowa City will be enlarged next ear and an expert farmer will be mployed to direct the agricultural anch of the institution.

Superintendent H. W. Rothert of e school for the deaf, spoke of the ork of caring for the mutes of the tate, and said that the educational eatures of the institution had been rgely improved since the comple- on of the new buildings. During the rly part of the week, Superintend- nt Rothert took 150 of the children Omaha where they visited the Na- onal Corn Show.

Examine Des Moines Plan.

Des Moines probably never was ubmitted to a more microscopic ex- mination than is now being carried n by the three delegates from the ivil league of Salt Lake City, who re here to investigate the Des oines plan of government. The ex- mination is the more critical, the ore thorough, and the more exten- ive in its scope, in that it covers very class of people and every stra- um of society. It might even be onsidered a muck raking expedition, hough not of the objectionable kind. rom every conceivable angle, the peration of the Des Moines plan s being looked at. From the head f each department down to the inutest details of his office; from he handling of the public utilities orporations to a popcorn stand, and rom every point of the compass, the ity is being scrutinized as a model or the far away Utah city. And the onsensus of opinion of the three en, so far as their examination has one, is that Des Moines is one of he best governed cities in the coun- ry, and that it is good enough for alt Lake City.

Wonderful System.

"The Iowa board of control has a onderful system of accounts," said tate Senator S. C. Pemberton, Illi- ois, after the committee from the ister state had finished a full day's nvestigation of the conditions of con- rol of the state instituions of Iowa. Their system of accounts is almost marvel, and is by long odds the est we have seen. They seemed to e able to find any item, even as far ack as five years ago, at a moment's otice. The man who is responsible or the system should be entitled to large amount of credit for some of he success of the Iowa system."

Harding Feels Confident.

W. L. Harding of Sioux City, rep- esentative from the Eleventh dis- rict, and a candidate for the speak- rship in discussing the probability f his attaining the much desired hair, said: "I think I have better hance of landing the speakership han I had a few weeks ago. Of ourse, there are a number of older en out in the race and some of hem feel congdent of landing. It s impossible to say at this time, who will be speaker. However I am inding new friends all over the state nd believe my backing is of the kind hat wins."

Will Sue Pullman Company.

Attorney General Byers expects o sue the Pullman company for $70,- 015 filing fee and huge penalties for ailure to file articles of incorpora- ion. The capital stock is now $70,- 000,000. The Iowa law fixes a fee of 1 a thousand on the capital stock or a filing fee when the articles are led with the secretary of state.

More Accredited High Schools.

The University has added seven owa high schools to the list of ac- redited schools in the state—diplo- as from which will admit to State niversity of Iowa, without special xaminations, and seven others have een added to the partially accredited list.

Unique Reforms at Ft. Madison.

Fifty prisoners at the state penitentiary at Fort Madison sleep with the doors of their cells unlocked. These same fifty frequently work beyond the walls of the prison without chain and shackle during the six months the system has been in vogue. This is one of the reforms Warden Sanders is trying to institute at the penitentiary. In the course of a year each one of the inmates of the institution will have laundered shirts and suits made by tailors on the grounds, some of them inmates of the prison. Each man will have to appear with his shoes shined, a startling departure from the usual prison routine. Sanders was selected by the state board of control to establish new ideas at the penitentiary, and has succeeded so far that even the members of the boards sometimes look askance when his reforms are presented to them. As soon as possible Sanders will abolish solitary confinement and will try to give each one of the men conditions which will make him better, and teach him to live better when he leaves the prison.

May Ask Primary Change.

Changes in the state wide primary law which will permit the people to nominate the district court judges along with the other candidates for offices are being considered by some of the judges of the Polk county courts. It is not unlikely that the Polk representatives in the legislature will be asked to introduce an amendment looking towards this end at the coming session of the legislature.

The primary law at present provides that district judges are not to be nominated by the people at the primary but instead by the convention which meets later on to ratify the choice of the primary. The idea of the legislators was to make it unnecessary for the judges to make a political campaign which is not deemed in accordance with the dignity that should attach to the occupant of the bench.

Assessment is Affirmed.

The supreme court affirmed the assessment and taxation of $300,000 worth of property of A. Slimmer in a case appealed by him from Chickasaw county. An agent for him freely listed the property for taxation and no complaint was made of the assessment except in some minor details, which were promptly adjjusted, during several years. Then this suit was brought to recover the taxes so paid by the agent acting for Slimmer. The supreme court affirmed the decision of the lower court, holding that there was no estoppel of complaint against the assessment, the taxes having been collected for several years without any protest whatever being made.

Maj. Olmsted Urges Reforms.

The report of the inspection of the Iowa National guard which was made by Major Olmsted, makes a number of important recommendations. He urges that the honors of the national guard be passed around. He claims that the governor should select his staff on the grounds of military worth, taking his members from active participants in the affairs of the guard. The Iowa National guard was fifth in point of increase of strength in the last five years, seventh in regard to rifle practice and fourteenth in regard to membership. It is above the average in points of excellence.

Sheriffs Worried over Mileage.

A report has gone broadcast over Iowa that the supreme court has held that sheriffs cannot collect at the end of the year for the mileage they have not received in the past twelve months. Sheriff Kimmer from Indianola and Sheriff Culver from West Union have been in the city consulting with Sheriff Loper about the propping. They say it means a composition. They say it means a complete loss to every sheriff of sums of money that have been expended in carrying on the work of the office and for which the sheriff should not be held accountable.

Draft Law for Good Roads.

A tentative form of the state good roads law which the Greater Des Moines committee will make an effort to have passed at the next legislature will be drafted by Attorney General Byers and Thomas McDonald, engineer of the state highway commission, to be ready for reading at the meeting of the good roads committee to be held soon.

NATION IS LIBELED

PRESIDENT AGAIN DENOUNCES THE CANAL CHARGES.

MESSAGE TO THE SENATE

Roosevelt Uses Strong Language Concerning New York World and Joseph Pulitzer—Wants Latter Prosecuted.

Washington.—President Roosevelt Tuesday afternoon sent to the senate a statement concerning the purchase of the Panama canal property by the United States, denouncing in strong language charges that there was anything wrong in the acquisition by the United States of the Canal property.

"These stories," he continues, "were first brought to my attention as published in a paper in Indianapolis, called the News, edited by Mr. Delavan Smith. The stories were scurrilous and libelous in character and false in every essential particular. Mr. Smith shelters himself behind the excuse that he merely accepted the statements which had appeared in a paper published in New York, the World, owned by Mr. Joseph Pulitzer. It is idle to say that the known character of Mr. Pulitzer and his newspaper are such that the statements in that paper will be believed by nobody; unfortunately, thousands of persons are ill informed in this respect and believe the statements they see in print, even though they appear in a newspaper published by Mr. Pulitzer."

He Charges Libel.

"The charges form, partly, a libel upon the United States government. I do not believe we should concern ourselves with the particular individuals who wrote the lying and libelous editorials, articles from correspondents, or articles in the news columns. The real offender is Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, editor and proprietor of the World. While the criminal offense of which Mr. Pulitzer has been guilty is in form a libel upon individuals, the great injury done is in blackening the good name of the American people. It should not be left to a private citizen to sue Mr. Pulitzer for libel. He should be prosecuted for libel by the government authorities. In point of encouragement of iniquity, in point of infamy, of wrong-doing, there is nothing to choose between a public servant who betrays his trust, a public servant who is guilty of blackmail, or theft, or financial dishonesty of any kind, and a man guilty as Mr. Joseph Pulitzer has been guilty in this instance.

"It is, therefore, a high national duty to bring to justice this vilifier of the American people, this man who wantonly and wickedly, and without one shadow of justification, seeks to blacken the character of reputable private citizens and to convict the government of his own country in the eyes of the civilized world of wrong doing of the basest and foulest kind, when he has not one shadow of justification of any sort or description for the charges he has made. The attorney general has under consideration the form in which the proceedings against Mr. Pulitzer shall be brought."

The president refers to various papers which he transmits with his message and calls attention to numerous utterances and acts relating to the canal and its purchase. He cites the act of congress by which he was authorized to pay $40,000,000 for the canal property and says it was no concern of the president what the new Panama Canal Company did with the money.

Reply by the World.

New York.—The World, in the course of its answer to President Roosevelt's references to that paper in his special message to congress, says:

"Mr. Roosevelt is mistaken. He cannot muzzle the World. While no amount of billingsgate on his part can alter our determination to treat him with judicial impartiality and scrupulous fairness, we repeat what we have already said, that the congress of the United States should make a thorough investigation of the whole Panama transaction, that the full truth may be known to the American people.

"If the World has libeled anybody we hope it will be punished, but we do not intend to be intimidated by Mr. Roosevelt's threats or by Mr. Roosevelt's denunciation or by Mr. Roosevelt's power.

"No other living man ever so grossly libeled the United States as does this president who besmirches congress, bulldozes judges, assails the integrity of the courts, slanders private citizens and who has shown himself the most reckless, unscrupulous demagogue whom the American people ever trusted with great power and authority."

Convicted of Embezzlement.

El Reno, Okla.—C. M. Buckles, cashier of the First State bank of Oklahoma City, was found guilty Thursday by a jury of embezzling $1,872 while he was treasurer of Canadian county three years ago. He was sentenced to serve a year in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $3,485.

AMERICAN GUNNERS WERE POOR.

Proof of Bad Marksmanship During the Spanish War.

The Spanish war was won by two naval victories—Manila and Santiago. Naturally the fame of the American navy, and especially of its gunnery, flamed across the world As a matter of fact, the shooting at Manila and Santiago was about as bad as possible. At Manila 90 per cent. of the shots missed at a range of from 6,000 to 4,000 yards; at Santiago—the chief battle of the war—at least 98 per cent. A special commission of officers, which was appointed to examine the wrecks of the Spanish ships at Santiago, established this fact officially. It reported that of 9,500 projectiles fired, only 123, or 1.3 per cent. had found a mark on the Spanish ships. Making every possible allowance for hits which could not readily be seen upon the wrecks, not one shot in 50 struck its mark. The day of the battle was clear, the sea smooth, the targets were 20 feet high and 200 feet long and the range was 2,800 yards. English gunners at that time could have hit the Spanish ships at least two out of every five shots. Fortunately for us, the fact that we were fighting a thoroughly senile power, whose ships had neither gunners nor proper ammunition aboard, gave us an undisputed victory.—McClure's.

ONE ADVANTAGE FOR THE CAR.

Something That Builders of Autos Might Take Into Account.

Jefferson D. Thompson, the chairman of the Vanderbilt cup commission, was criticising at a dinner in New York a new motor car of rather dubious type.

"Even the advantages claimed for this car," said Mr. Thompson, "appear dubious to me. Take that vaunted feature, for instance, of excessive lightness."

Mr Thompson smiled.

"A young lady," he said, "once showed me proudly a very cheap, very light car that she had just bought.

"'Awfully light, isn't it?' said I.

"'Yes,' said she. 'Isn't it splendid! Whenever it breaks down we can always push it home.'"

Bootless Spoils.

Buccaneers, Choctaw Indians, whose supreme aim in fighting is that they may amass scalps and money; out of such came no chivalry and never will! Out of such came only gore and wreck, infernal rage and misery; desperation quenched in annihilation. Behold it, I bid thee, behold there, and consider! What is it that thou have a hundred thousand-pound bills laid up in thy strong room, a hundred scalps hung up in thy wigwam? I value not them or thee. Thy scalps and thy thousand-pound bills are as yet nothing, if no nobleness from within irradiate them; if no chivalry, in action, or in embryo ever struggling toward birth and action, be there.—Thomas Carlyle.

Never Worried Herself.

In declaring that she never knew her husband's first name Mrs. Esther Nieman of Monroe street created laughter at the Central police court.

"I have always called him 'Pop' from the first day I married him, and, as he did not object, I never worried myself about his first name," said Mrs. Nieman, who had her husband arrested on the charge of failing to support her.

The accused husband, by direction of the magistrate, was induced to tell his wife his full name.

"Certainly, I'm glad to do it," remarked the defendant, "but I think my wife has known right along that I am Jacob Nieman." — Philadelphia Inquirer.

Un Faux Pas!

A young gentleman living at X—— was invited by his rich aunt to visit her in London. While walking with her along Victoria street he saw her bow to a gentleman in clerical attire. "Who was that, aunt?" he inquired. "That!" exclaimed the lady. "Why, that is the vicar of X——!" "Strange!" remarked the nephew, thoughtlessly. "I believe this is the first time I have seen him." "He has been vicar ten years!" was the reply.

To avoid misleading ambitious rhymesters, perhaps we ought to say that the late Bloodgood H. Cuttter, the poet of Little Neck, L. I., who left an estate of $665,000, of which more than $500,000 was bequeathed to the American Bible society, did not make his money writing poetry.

The shah of Persia declares he will protect the rights of his subjects against the wicked designs of the evildoers who want a constitution. But even in the far orient phrases do not mean as much as they used to signify, and the shah's anxiety to protect his subjects from the evils of a constitution will be fully understood.

They ought to get some policemen in New York who in emergencies can show signs of almost human intelligence, says the Baltimore American. A man was arrested there lately for violently resisting an officer in trying to break through the fire lines. His entirely inadequate excuse—in the eyes of the policeman—was that the burning house was his own, his wife and baby were inside and he rated their safety above official red tape.

A test of the soot-laden air in Chicago shows that 7,000 pounds of organic and mineral substances are deposited on an acre of ground in that city from the atmosphere. Now let anyone dare to say that this condition of the air is not injurious to health. As Indianapolis is hardly less afflicted with smoke than Chicago, the deposits are probably as heavy there. No wonder every one complains of the difficulty of breathing and of keeping clean.

NAB GIRL IN MAN'S ATTIRE.

Prisoner At Cedar Rapids Tells Story of Adventure.

Cedar Rapids.—A young woman, masquerading as a man, and telling a strange story of adventures, with which a murder committed two years ago in Philadelphia may be connected, was arrested here under the name of Earl Waters. The police arrested "Waters" for the perpetration of a practical joke in robbing his own room and filing a complaint against another person. Then they discovered "Waters" to be a girl, apparently about 18 years old. The girl does not know her own name unless it is Pearl Waters. She says she was born in Europe and that her earliest recollections are of life in New York. A woman with whom she lived was abusive and four years ago the girl donned a boy's suit and left. At Philadelphia she fell in with a young man, becoming his companion, though she did not reveal her sex. She says they become involved in a quarrel, afterward committed murder and then fled. They came to Cedar Rapids two years ago, since which time both have been employed as newsboys on trains.

WILL BUILD BIG CLAY PLANT.

Project Backed by Lehigh and Indiana Capitalists.

Webster City.—At a large meeting of business and professional men held at the Willson hotel, a deal was practically closed for the erection of an immense clay products plant for the manufacture of sewer and drain tile in this city. The plant will be erected in the spring at a cost of some $175,000, will employ 100 men, and will have an output capacity of from ten to twelve car loads per day. The company behind the movement is composed of practically the same men who own the Lehigh Clay Products company of Lehigh, Ia., and the Portland Sewer Pipe Manufacturing company of Portland, Ind.

This company has asked Webster City to furnish them a site of thirty acres, and an agreement was reached upon this point. In return for the site the company agrees to erect its plant here.

NEW IOWA BUTTON PLANT.

Old Factory at Lansing Is to Be Reopened.

Lansing.—The New Jersey Button company expects to begin operations at Lansing, Ia., with a force of fifty men on Jan. 1. Under the supervision of Manager Ritchie, the old plant located on the river front has been refitted and its capacity materially increased by the addition of new machinery. When all is complete Lansing will have one of the largest and best equipped pearl button factories on the upper Mississippi. A similar plant has been in operation at Guttenberg for several months. A force of one hundred men are employed in grinding and sawing the shells of the Mississippi mussel.

GRAND JURY INDICTS JUROR.

Member of Petit Jury Held on a True Bill.

Council Bluffs.—The unusual and remarkable incident of a member of the petit jury being indicted by a grand jury was witnessed here, when a true bill was returned against Charles Sayles, a member of the petit jury for the present term. He was arrested and taken into custody by the county officials on a bench warrant. Sayles was indicted jointly with Harry Hall. It is alleged that they broke into an Illinois Central freight car on Dec. 14.

Cash Gifts to Workers.

Des Moines.—Cash gifts equalling ten per cent of their monthly salaries will be given to all of the employes of the Crane company in all its thirty-five branch offices, including Des Moines. Fifteen men who are in the service of the big Chicago firm, handling plumbing and heating supplies in this city will receive cash presents. The gifts made in this manner by the company will total close to $350,000 for all its offices.

Strikebreaker Set Free.

Toledo.—Toler, the strikebreaker who shot and killed an Iowa Central striker at Marshalltown last summer, was quickly acquitted of the charge of murder by the jury. Just thirty-five minutes' time elapsed from the jury's retirement until it filed back into the jury box and notified the judge that it had found Toler not guilty. Toler's defense was that he shot to save his own life.

JUDGE N. W. MACY RETIRES.

Capt. John H. Clark, Veteran Court Reporter, Also Retires.

Clarinda.—With the adjournment of the district court here and by his own desire, Hon. N. W. Macy leaves the bench after a most honorable record of twenty years as judge in the Fifteenth Judicial district of Iowa, and simultaneously Capt. John H. Clark, the oldest court reporter in the state, lays down his pen after a service of thirty eight years. No district judge in the state has equaled the record of Judge Macy in the almost invariable indorsement of his decisions by the supreme court. He will be succeeded by Eugene B. Woodruff of Glenwood. After spending the winter in California, Judge and Mrs. Macy will return to their home in Harlan, where they wil enjoy the judge's retirement together. Captain Clark likewise will take life easy the remainder of his days at his home in Council Bluffs. Before the adjournment of the term here the members of the Page county bar presented Judge Macy with an elegant velvet rug and Captain Clark with an offering of gold.

OTTUMWA IS DRY.

Thirty-Eight Liquor Houses Close Their Doors.

Ottumwa.—Thirty-eight saloon and wholesale beer and liquor houses closed here when the petition to close the saloons was filed with County Auditor McCarty. The closing of the saloons is the result of an agitation started by Billy Sunday at the close of his recent revival and which has been kept up by his followers. When it was thought that sufficient names had been secured, the petition was filed. Action on the validity of the petition will be started by the saloon men. It is claimed by the leaders of the movement that over 2,900 voters have signed the petition to close the saloons, and that these represent more than a majority necessary to make the petition effective, as there were 5,355 voters at the last general election.

DALLAS MAN ON WAR PATH.

Calvin Brewer, Heavily Armed, Resists Officers.

Dallas Center.—Murder was probably prevented here by the arrest of Calvin Brewer after his threat to shoot Clyde Brenton, cashier of the local bank and one of the most prominent men of Dallas Center. Brewer was apprehended at the home of his father-in-law, where he had defied anyone to come to take him from behind the furnace where he was hiding, heavily armed. After talking with him for three hours County Attorney Miller persuaded him to give himself up. The difficulty arose from a dispute over the sale of a crop of grain by Brewer from the farm which he rents of Brenton.

MRS. MYERS FOUND GUILTY.

Mt. Pleasant Woman Convicted of Charge of Arson.

Mount Pleasant.—A verdict found Mrs. Anna Meyers guilty of arson. The jury was out twenty-five hours. The defendant was surrounded by her three small sons, her father and husband as the verdict was read. Eighteen ballots were taken. Her bond was fixed at $2,000. A motion for a new trial will be heard Jan. 13, or sentence will be passed. She attempted to burn the Livesay home near Winfield the night of July 8.

Loses His Leg; Gets $15,000.

Newton.—A verdict of $15,000 for the loss of a leg was awarded to Michael J. Hughes of West Point, Neb., against the Rock Island railway in a damage suit which was on trial here. Hughes was injured at Colfax, April 2, 1907, while a passenger on Rock Island No. 6 from Omaha to Colfax. The train arrives in the night, and Hughes attempted to get off at a point near the interlocking switch west of the station, thinking that the train had reached the platform. He was thrown to the ground with his grips and fell under the wheels, his leg being crushed so badly that it had to be amputated. Hughes and other witnesses testified that the porter called the station and that the train stopped.

Plan Allison Memorial.

Dubuque.—Plans are nearing completion in Dubuque for the organization and incorporation of an Allison Memorial association, with the purpose of erecting a memorial to Allison in Dubuque.

ON THE FRONT PAGE AGAIN.

UNION LABOR LEADERS GIVEN PRISON TERMS

Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison Sentenced to Twelve, Nine and Six Months Respectively and Severely Scored in the Bucks Stove Case.

Washington.—Twelve months in jail for Samuel Gompers, president; nine months for John Mitchell, one of the vice-presidents, and six months for Frank Morrison, secretary, all of the American Federation of Labor, was the sentence imposed by Justice Wright of the supreme court of the District of Columbia Wednesday for contempt of court in violating an order previously issued enjoining them from placing on the "Unfair" or "We don't patronize" list the Bucks Stove & Range Company of St. Louis, Mo.

Samuel Gompers.

All three of the defendants were in court when sentence was pronounced, and notice of an appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia at once was filed, Gompers being released on $5,000 bond; Mitchell on $4,000 and Morrison on $3,000. In addition to the wife and daughter of Gompers, there were present a number of local labor leaders, and others who were attracted by the notice that a decision of the famous case would be announced. Mr. Gompers' family were visibly affected.

Gompers Weeps When Sentenced.

With tears coursing down his own cheeks, President Gompers heard the order of the court which condemned him to prison for a year. Both Mitchell and Morrison seemed stunned by the sentence, although Mitchell appeared to be the least concerned.

Asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, President Gompers declared that he had not consciously violated any law. There was much he would like to say, he said, but he could not do it at that time. He added, however, that "this is a struggle of the working people of our country and it is a struggle of the working people for the right. It is a struggle of the ages—a struggle of the men of labor to throw off some of the burdens which have been heaped upon them; to abolish some of the wrongs and to secure some of the rights too long denied."

Mitchell and Morrison confined themselves to an indorsement of what Gompers had said.

The decision of Justice Wright, which consumed two hours and 20 minutes in reading, was one of the most scathing arraignments that ever came from the bench in this city.

"Everywhere," the court said, "all over, within the court and out, utter, rampant, insolent defiance is heralded and proclaimed; unrefined insult, coarse affront, vulgar indignity measures the litigant's conception of the tribunal's due, wherein his cause still pends." The law's command has been, he said, to "stand! Hands off, until justice for this matter can be ascertained," but, he said, there had been a studied, determined, defiant conflict "precipitated in the light of open day, between the decrees of a tribunal ordained by the government of the federal union, and of the tribunals of another federation grown up in the land." One or the other, he declared, must succumb, "for those who would unlaw the land are public enemies."

Says Customers Were Intimidated.

The customers of the stove company, the court said, had been intimidated, browbeaten and coerced out of their business relations with their customers "by direct interference with and boycott of their (the customers') trade relations with their own customers and the public generally."

Following an exhaustive discussion of conspiracies in restraint of trade, Justice Wright said:

"From the foregoing it ought to seem apparent to thoughtful men that the defendants to the bill, each and all of them, have combined together for the purpose of:

"1. Bringing about the breach of plaintiff's existing contracts with others.

John A. Mitchell.

"2. Depriving plaintiff of property (the value of the good will of its business) without due process of law.

"3. Restraining trade among the several states.

"4. Restraining commerce among the several states.

The ultimate purpose of the defendants, the court said in this connection, was unlawful, their concerted project an offense against the law, and, it added, they were guilty of crime.

State Capital Gossip

Many Items of Interest from Our Correspondent at Des Moines.

Byers Would Enforce Law.

Des Moines.—In his annual report to Governor Garst, Attorney General Byers makes the following recommendations regarding the re-organization of the attorney general's department:

First. Make it possible for the governor "to take care that the laws are faithfully executed" by giving him the power upon proper complaint, to remove peace officers, mayors and prosecuting attorneys.

Second. A complete reorganization of the attorney general's department along substantially the same lines as the department of justice in the national government is organized; establishing a closer relation between the county attorney and the attorney general; requiring the county attorney to report to the attorney general promptly all matters of importance pending in his office in which the state is interested, and giving to the attorney general power to take charge, either himself or by assistants appointed by him for the purpose, of any case pending in the district court in which the state is interested and to appear before the grand jury in any county in any matter pending before that body of sufficient importance to justify, in his judgment, such appearance.

Third. Enlarging the powers and duties of oil and food inspectors, requiring them to assist prosecuting attorneys and the attorney general in securing evidence in all prosecutions in which the state is interested, whether it be a violation of the criminal laws of the state or for the collection of fees and fines due the state.

Fourth. Give the county attorney authority to follow appeals to the supreme court when requested by the attorney general, with ample provision for his compensation and expenses.

Fifth. Give to the attorney general's department sufficient force to properly transact the business of the office, with salaries high enough to secure the best possible service.

Sixth. A general revision of the laws governing criminal practice and procedure.

Unique Reforms at Ft. Madison.

Fifty prisoners at the state penitentiary at Fort Madison sleep with the doors of their cells unlocked. These same fifty frequently work beyond the walls of the prison without chain and shackle during the six months the system has been in vogue. This is one of the reforms Warden Sanders is trying to institute at the penitentiary. In the course of a year each one of the inmates of the institution will have laundered shirts and suits made by tailors on the grounds, some of them inmates of the prison. Each man will have to appear with his shoes shined, a startling departure from the usual prison routine. Sanders was selected by the state board of control to establish new ideas at the penitentiary, and has succeeded so far that even the members of the boards sometimes look askance when his reforms are presented to them. As soon as possible Sanders will abolish solitary confinement and will try to give each one of the men conditions which will make him better, and teach him to live better when he leaves the prison.

Maj. Olmsted Urges Reforms.

The report of the inspection of the Iowa National guard which was made by Major Olmsted, makes a number of important recommendations. He urges that the honors of the national guard be passed around. He claims that the governor should select his staff on the grounds of military worth, taking his members from active participants in the affairs of the guard. The Iowa National guard was fifth in point of increase of strength in the last five years, seventh in regard to rifle practice and fourteenth in regard to membership. It is above the average in points of excellence.

Draft Law for Good Roads.

A tentative form of the state good roads law which the Greater Des Moines committee will make an effort to have passed at the next legislature will be drafted by Attorney General Byers and Thomas McDonald, engineer of the state highway commission, to be ready for reading at the meeting of the good roads committee to be held soon.

Flaw in Pure Food Law.

The defect in the pure food law was discovered when Judge McHenry of Des Moines dismissed the case of H. R. Wright state food and dairy commissioner, against Andrew Neslund, a butcher, for the alleged violation of a section of the law referring to labels. Neslund had sold lard from a 50-pound tub, which was properly labeled, to E. C. Lytton, an employe of Mr. Wright's. My. Lytton purchased a pound of lard and Mr. Neslund did not place in the package a tag or label showing the ingredients of the product. This the state claimed was a violation of the law and succeeded in securing Neslund's conviction in Justice Roe's court. But Neslund appealed to the district cour,t averring that inasmuch as the tub was labeled and the purchaser well knew what he was buying, he was not guilty of the violation charged. He further argued through his attorney, that the law does not require a label or tag on small quanttiies sold at retail from bulk. Judge McHenry perused the law closely on this point and found that Neslund's contention was a correct one. It was obvious that the framer of the law intended to require a tag or label on each package thus sold at retail from bulk, the court said, but he had failed to so state in the law. Judge McHenry immediately drafted an amendment, correcting the defect, which provides that all packages sold under pure food laws shall be labeled, and it will probably be brought before the next legislature.

Epileptics Need Separate Hospital.

Many matters of importance in connection with public charities will be discussed at the state conference of Charities and Corrections to be held in Des Moines, Jan. 20, 21 and 22. Suggestions for the better care of the wards of the state will be made to the legislature and the boards of control and parole.

One of the most important recommendations will be for the establishment of a separate hospital for epileptics. Persons afflicted with epileptic maladies are now confined in the insane hospitals, and this is said to be detrimental to their welfare. Dr. George Mogridge of the Glenwood institution will set out the reason for the need of a separate hospital.

The state conference of Charities and Corrections was authorized by the legislature of 1888, but until recently no active work has been done. Withing the past year, however, the members have been making an active study of the needs of the state institutions, and these will be discussed at length at the January meeting.

Handle Twenty-Eight Million.

The work of checking over the thirty millions of insurance securities on file in the office of the auditor of state is nearly completed. A corps of examiners has been at work for over a week and the work has all been completed with the exception of about $2,000,000, which remains to be finished. The work thus far shows not a single cent off what is claimed by the reports of the different companies. The absolute checking of the figures indicate the excellance of the work which has been maintained in the insurance department for the last several years. Upon January 4 Security Clerk W. N. Lewis will turn over to the new clerk, C. B. Ellis, the work which he has had in charge in this feature of the department.

Garst Pardons Young.

Governor Warren Garst has extended pardon to W. G. Young of Sioux City, who has been under parole from the state penitentiary for six years. Young was sentenced for life many years ago after what many considered a mis-trial, and when he was paroled six years ago, practically every member of the legislature voted in his favor. He has been a model man on parole and will have the full privileges of citizenship hereafter as a reward.

Insurance Slots Don't Go.

Insurance will no longer be sold in Iowa by slot machines. The North American Accident company of Chicago, which has been operating slot machines which deliver policies to persons slipping a quarter in the slot, has removed them from the state, and has so notified Auditor of State Carroll in a letter in response to his own letter notifying them that the machines clearly were not legal.

CITY FATHERS WERE CHEAP

SHOCKING STATE OF AFFAIRS IN PITTSBURG REVEALED.

Accused Ex-Bank Officers and City Fathers Are Held After Preliminary Examination.

Pittsburg, Pa.—With a suddenness that startled Pittsburg from end to end, this city Wednesday moved into first place in the role of corruption and municipal graft.

Late at night, many hours after thunderbolts in the shape of sensational testimony were exploded, the people of Pittsburg were dumbfounded and unable to realize that the city is in a position to demand every laurel for being the champion legislative scandal center of America. The troubles of San Francisco are tame in comparison.

Furthermore it is stated the shocking developments here are mere preliminaries and subsequent steps against additional councilmen and business men will startle not only Pittsburg, but the whole country.

Apparently, from the testimony offered in court, the city's councils are absolutely rotten in every sense of the word. It was intimated strongly that over three score councilmen are "easy to reach" and the "reaching" necessitated only small sums ranging from $100 to $5.

Out of a mass of testimony it was gleaned that a majority of the council body of Pittsburg have been "reached." In the passage of one ordinance alone it was testified that 60 councilmen had divided $45,000.

Sensations followed one another in rapid succession during the hearing of the seven councilmen and two former bank officers arrested on charges of bribery, corrupt solicitation and conspiracy last Monday night.

W. W. Ramsey and A. A. Vilsack, former president and casnier of the German National bank, were first placed on trial and were held for court in the sum of $14,000 bail each.

The seven councilmen, President Brand and Members Klein, Soffel, Wasson, Melaney and Ferguson of common council and Atkinson of select, were then called for trial. Detectives told how they trapped them and they, too, were held in bail.

The principal witness was Robert Wilson, a private detective and superintendent of the Municipal league of Scranton, Pa., who is employed by the Voters' league of Pittsburg.

FIRE IN GOTHAM THEATER.

Performance Is Cut Short and Panic Is Averted.

New York. — Fire broke out in the Herald Square theater at Thirty-fifth street and Broadway Tuesday night, ten minutes before the close of the performance of "The Three Twins," and before it was brought under control had done considerable damage to the building, had driven the actors and chorus into the streets in their scant costumes and had caused great commotion among the theater crowd son Broadway.

There was no panic and no one was injured. the audience remaining in ignorance of the fire until most of them had passed into the streets. The fire caught from a large electric sign on the front of the theater building and spread to the executive offices, which are opposite the second gallery of the auditorium.

PACKERS ARE BEING PROBED.

Searching Investigation of Industry Started in Chicago.

Chicago. — Sweeping investigation of the packing industry in Chicago was begun Tuesday by District Attorney Sims, who issued subpoenas to 30 department managers and other employes of Morris & Co. Immediately after the deputy marshals had begun the service of the subpoenas Congressman William Lorimer appeared at the district attorney's office and held a long conference with Mr. Sims. Nearly 100 subpoenas are said to have been issued for the coming investigation before the grand jury. Mr. Sims refused to discuss the investigation, though he admitted it was on.

Ryan Quits Directorates.

New York.—Thomas F. Ryan, admittedly one of the greatest powers in the financial world, announced Wednesday that, yielding to the advice of his physicians, he had resigned from the directorate of 31 corporations. The only enterprises in the management of which the noted financier retains a hand are the Morton Trust Company, the National Bank of Commerce and the American Tobacco Company.

Deeds of Danish Ghouls.

Copenhagen.—The cathedral of Roeskilde, the burial place for centuries past of the Danish kings, was looted by burglars Tuesday night and large numbers of costly gold and silver wreaths, urns and shields were carried away. The tombs of both King Christian and Queen Louise were robbed of all the valuable gold and silver memorials sent by the crowned heads of Europe and the city of Denmark.

OIL TRUST OUSTED

THREE COMPANIES ARE DRIVEN FROM MISSOURI.

EACH IS FINED $50,000

Standard of Indiana, Republic and Waters-Pierce Found Guilty of Conspiracy by Supreme Court.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Declaring that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Republic Oil Company of Ohio and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Missouri had conspired and combined to monopolize the oil business in this state, the supreme court of Missouri Wednesday issued a decree ousting all three from the commonwealth, and fining them $50,000 each.

The decree against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company is tempered by the proviso that it may continue in business if, by March 1, 1909, it can show to the court that it has taken steps to operate as an independent concern and has satisfied the judgment against it. The other companies are given until March 1, 1909, to wind up their affairs in the state.

Decision Is Most Sweeping.

The decision, which was unanimous on the part of the seven judges, is so sweeping that Attorney General Hadley and Gov. Folk hail it as the end of illegal commercial combinations in Missouri, and the former asserts that, in conjunction with the decision of the supreme court of the United States in the tobacco trust case, it will affect similar suits in other states.

Attorney General Hadley, who has prosecuted the Missouri case since its inception in March, 1905, will become governor in less than a month and then will be charged with the enforcement of the decree issued.

Tried to Compromise Suit.

The attorney general followed up the promulgation by the court with a statement in which he asserted that attempts had been made to compromise the suit.

"At least three efforts have been made by attorneys for the oil companies to get me to compromise the cases," he said. "I invariably told them that the ultimate decision must be made by the courts, and refused their offers. It was intimated to me that the oil companies were willing to accept a good large fine and concede a victory to the state. The propositions were never reduced to details, but they were entirely legitimate and such as might be made in any other form of litigation."

Points in the Decision.

In coming to its decision the court says:

"If such abuses as those complained of are permitted to continue, untrammeled, it would be only a question of time until they would sap the strength and patriotism from the very foundations of our government, overturn the republic, destroy our free institutions and substitute, in lieu thereof, some other form of government.'

The principal indictments against the companies are:

"That they have created and become members of a pool, trust, agreement, confederation, combination, arrangement and understanding among themselves for the following purposes:

"First, to regulate, fix and control the prices to be paid by retail dealers and others in the state of Missouri for the refined products of petroleum sold and offered for sale in this state.

"Second, to control and limit the trade in refined products of petroleum in this state.

"Third, to control, limit and prevent competition in the business of buying and selling refined products of petroleum in this state between themselves and others engaged in like business, and,

"Fourth, to mislead the public into the belief that they were separate and distinct corporations and pursuing an independent business as legitimate competitors in the purchase and sale of the products of petroleum."

Suit Started Four Years Ago.

The state's ouster suit against the Standard, Republic and Waters-Pierce companies was instituted almost four years ago. The evidence was taken in St. Louis and in New York, where H. H. Rogers, principal, was compelled to testify before a special commissioner.

At the same time Rockefeller was compelled to remain in New Jersey to avoid Hadley subpoena service.

Stevens' Slayer Is Convicted.

San Francisco. — In Whan Chang, the Korean who shot Durham White Stevens, the American diplomat and adviser to the Korean emperor, in this city on March 23 of this year, resulting in Mr. Stevens' death two days later, was found guilty of murder in the second degree by a jury in Judge Carroll Cook's department of the superior court. Sentence will be passed December 26. The minimum penalty is ten years and the maximum life imprisonment.

LAME BACK PRESCRIPTION

The increased use of "Toris" for lame back and rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is effective: "To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Compound and one ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

Magistrate (to witness)—And where were you when this assault occurred?

The Selfishness of Grief.

Holidays are sad seasons for families from which loved ones have been taken away by death, but when we do our duty we give thanks for those still left us, and redouble our care for their happiness.

With the best intentions in the world we are meting out sorry treatment to the living by open grieving for the dead. There are few families whose ranks remain unbroken year after year. Absence permanent and temporary leaves vacant chairs at the family table, and the only wise thing to do is to forget them as far as possible by devotion to those whom we are privileged to keep. Perpetual mourning is unnatural and selfish, inasmuch as it makes discomfort for those about us, and we need all the cheer and brightness we can gather to ease the burden of living.

The Maiden's Prayer.

Most children are good listeners as well as good observers, and, more than that, they are quick to use the knowledge acquired through keenness in these directions. A case in point is that of little Janet, who had evidently spent part of her day in the kitchen and had overheard remarks made by the cook.

Like all good girls, little Janet said her prayers regularly just before being tucked in for the night. On this particular night she said:

"God bless me, bless father and mother and everybody, make me a good girl, keep me pure—pure as Loyal baking powder. Amen."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

The Land of England.

Twelve thousand seven hundred and ninety-one persons own four-fifths of the soil of England, their aggregate property, exclusive of that within the metropolitan boundaries, being 40,180,775 acres. In point of fact, the number of owners of four-fifths of the English land is nearer 5,000 than 12,000. Of these 500 are noblemen, and four or five of these swallow up the rest. —New York American.

Unobserving.

"When I was leaving town last month," said the returned traveler, "your uncle, Peter Roxley, was taken quite seriously ill. I hope it turned out all right."

"Of course," replied young Poorman. "Didn't you notice what a swell black suit this is?"

"Marriage Service" Defined.

A Boston cynic of the female persuasion defines the "marriage service" as "waiting on one's lord and master in the capacity of cook, laundress, seamstress and maid-of-all-work."

Third number lecture course.

The musical excellence and exceptional variety of the program of this organization is the product of the varied talents, thorough culture, wide experience and long concerted work of its members. Violin, piano, sopranos and baritone in solos instrumental and vocal duets, trios and quartette ensemble, inimitable child impersonations, a short comedy sketch, scenes from operas and a grand finale of piano voices and violin make up a brilliant and popular program of greater variety and merit than is usually given by a larger company.

Windred Townsend is one of Chicago's most artistic violinists. After having studied with America's best teachers winning the College Gold Meda! under Bemhard Listeman, Miss Townsend went abroad where she became a pupil of Geloso, the great Spanish French violinist, who praised her ability in highest terms. While in Paris Miss Townsend played with great success at the "Atelier reunions" where solo artists appear weekly and since her return to America has had most gratifying success in all her recitals and concert trous

CHILD SPOKE WITH AUTHORITY.

Had Biblical Proof of the Existence of Cannibal Cows.

"Now, children," said the pretty teacher, "I want you all to write a composition on the cow. You know what a cow is. You know that a cow gives us all the milk we drink. Now, write me something original about the cow as you know her; nothing commonplace." It would take several pages to print the results, but there is room for at least one composition by a girl of seven:

"A cow is a quadruped, having four legs and four feet. She gives milk, and sometimes has horns, but not always. The cow's baby is called a calf and sometimes bossy. When a cow talks she lows. A cow with horns can hook, but a cow without horns is helpless. A cow is a carnivorous animal when she has a chance, but she ordinarily eats grass, if there is any. A cow is a cannibal if you let her alone, for she will eat her own kind."

The horrified teacher exclaimed: "Sallie May, where on earth did you get the idea, the ridiculous idea, that a cow is carnivorous and a cannibal? You meant to say that a cow is herbivorous or graminivorous." "No, teacher, I read it in the Holy Bible. Don't you remember there were seven fine fat cows feeding near a brook, and seven lean and hungry cows came and ate them up? See Genesis 41:4." Teacher reserved decision.

RICH IN RECUPERATIVE POWER.

Forests of Northern Maine That More Than Hold Their Own.

That is the one astounding thing in this whole region of northern Maine, the regenerative power of the forest. Men with axes have been hacking at the giants of the woods up here for two centuries and more. The goliaths have been laid low, indeed, yet for one tree that stood on a given space along the hillsides and in the valleys of No. 1 a century ago, five stand to-day.

They are giants no more, it is true, but they are splendid trees, and just as the Lilliputians might prevail where Gulliver was bound, so these trees hold their own against man and even press in on his clearings and wipe them out. There must be many more lumbermen with axes along the Macwahoc, the Moluncus and the Mattawamkeag before this beautiful region will fail of its forest.

IN SOUTH AMERICA YEARS AGO.

Caustic Description of Venezuela and Colombia.

Prof. Hiram Bingham writes of his travels in Venezuela, saying of San Carlos: "In the time of Bolivar (about 1819) it was a place of great importance, boasted of 30,000 inhabitants and many wealthy citizens. Today it has barely 3,000 souls and a few interesting ruins. Earthquakes, revolutions and cattle plagues have combined against it. A few companies of sad-eyed soldiers and a handful of grafting politicians hardly make up for its lost estate. The ruins of the grand house where Bolivar is said to have been entertained shortly before the battle of Carobobo are most extensive, and cover a city block. Part of the outer walls are still standing. The corner room has recently been roofed over and turned into a butcher's shop. The ruins of another house not far away remind one of Italy, while those of the 'Casa Blanqueria' are almost Pompeian. Painted frescoes, elaborate reliefs, carved wood ceilings and tiled floors now shelter a polite but poverty-stricken family and their pigs and fowls. The exterior is decorated with caryatides that look like incas.'"

Of the ants in Venezuela Prof. Bingham says: "At one place on the sandy trail the ants had formed a living causeway over the fine sand of the path, in order to facilitate the great speed at which the majority wished to travel. The causeway was over two inches wide, and from one to three ants deep. So firmly did the 'bridge' ites' hold together, I lifted the causeway four inches from the ground by thrusting a stick underneath, without breaking their formation."

Concerning Colombian inns and paper money: "Corrazales is a small village of 30 houses. The innkeeper did not like our looks, and denied the existence of food or lodging. Again we had to resort to compulsion. The only money desired here is 'billetes,' the Colombian paper, which is at 10,000 per cent. discount. A Colombian nickel coin was refused in payment for a spool of thread."

Costly Parliament House.

Parliament house, Melbourne, which has been rushed by "the unemployed" of the commonwealth capital, is the costliest legislative palace in Greater Britain. A million has been expended on it, and it is not yet completed. It belongs to the parliament of Victoria, but since federation it has been the meeting place of the parliament of the commonwealth, its owners moving to a wing of the exhibition building close by.

Queen Alexandra's Favorite Roses.

The queen's favorite rose is one of the old time sorts known as Hermosa, a lovely free flowering pink rose which yields a rich harvest of beautiful fragrant blossoms. So fond is the queen of this rose that she causes it to be grown by thousands in huge borders near her favorite dairy, as well as in the gardens surrounding her home.—Girl's Own Paper.

Missing Chicken.

"I haven't missed any chickens lately," said the man who had a hennery.

"But pop has," replied the boy next door.

"What are you talking about? Your father hasn't any chickens."

"No, but he shot at a couple of yours yesterday and missed 'em."

Last, But Not Least.

"Young man," said the heavy father, "do you understand the style in which my daughter has been accustomed to live? She has always had every luxury she wants."

"And now I'm the luxury she wants," murmured the suitor.

Extravagance in Styles.

If directoire gowns really become fashionable, it is hoped that other extravagances of the same period will not also be revived. The beautiful Mme. Tallien, who led the fashions at the time of the French directory, is said to have appeared with rings on her toes. Her silk stockings were made with divisions like the fingers of gloves, and she wore sandals studded with jewels. Mme. Tallien was, however, sensible enough to discard the fashionable flaxen wig and to wear her own black hair unpowdered. Natural coiffures did not long remain simple, though. Under the empire they became so elaborate that the ladies of the court had to have their hair dressed the night before Napoleon's coronation, and were then propped upright in their chairs in order to sleep without damaging their headdresses.

An Old Friend.

The dark markings so conspicuous on the moon and known as the "Man in the Moon" are great plains, lying at a much lower level than the brighter parts. In all probability they are old sea bottoms, some of them having undergone upheavals and other changes since the water retreated from them, others presenting the appearance of being unchanged since the time when the waters dried up or were in some other way removed from them.

The Wearing of the Green.

That the styles in Porto Rico are quite up to date is evidenced by these remarks in a San Juan newspaper:

"Green is the thing.

"Ties, hats, spats, even garments are green. To be a sport one must be dressed in green.

"The new style ought to fill people who are out of a job with delight. Just consider how many suits which used to be black are now in the height of fashion!"

A La Modern Research.

"How did Pocahontas happen to save your life?" they asked Capt. John Smith.

"Simple enough. I had in my pocket a souvenir postal that she wanted for her collection," replied the wily warrior.

Whereupon the committee decided that the Indian was ready for civilization.—Bohemian.

Reverberating.

"Ha! Mrs. Taukaway, I'm not the only one who snores. I just heard you sawing wood."

"You're mistaken again, Mr. Taukaway. That was the echo of your own snoring that didn't die away for some seconds after you woke up."—Kansas City Times.

Thinking How Wonderfully Well it Suited Her Flower-Like Face.

SYNOPSIS.

Three girls — Elizabeth, Gabrielle and Elise—started for Canada to spend the summer there. On board steamer they were frightened by an apparently demented stranger, who, finding a bag belonging to one of them, took enjoyment in scrutinizing a photo of the trio. Elise shared her stateroom with a Mrs. Graham, also bound for Canada. The young women on a sightseeing tour met Mrs. Graham, anxiously awaiting her husband, who had a mania for sailing. They were introduced to Lord Wilfrid and Lady Edith. A cottage by the ocean was rented by the trio for the summer. Elizabeth learned that a friend of her father's was to call. Two men called, one of them being the queer-acting stranger on the steamer. The girls were "not at home," but discovered by the cards left that one of the men was Elizabeth's father's friend. The men proved to be John C. Blake and Gordon Bennett. The party was told of the search for smugglers in the vicinity of the cottage. Elise visited Mrs. Graham to find that her life was not the happiest. She learned that the Grahams and Lady Edith were acquainted. A wisp of yellow hair from Mr. Graham's pocket fell into the hands of Elise. Mrs. Graham's hair was black. During a storm the young women heard a crash in the basement of the cottage and a moment later Mary Anne, their woman servant, entered, her arm bleeding. To assure them there was no danger, Mary Anne descended to the basement alone and quieted their fears. Lady Edith told the girls of a robbery of jewels at the hotel. Fearing for the safety of her own gems, she left them in a safe at the cottage. Mr. Gordon Bennett was properly introduced, explained his queer actions, returned the lost bag and told of mysterious doings of a year before connected with the cottage. Exploring the cellar, one of the girls found a sphinx cuff-button, the exact counterpart of which both Gordon Bennett and Lady Edith were found to possess, also.

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

"Don't be 'opin' that, Miss Gabrielle;" it was Mary Anne who spoke, and she stood listening to the story with dishcloth in one hand and plate in the other. "Don't be 'opin' that. Remember the mother what bore 'im, and them that loves 'im, be 'e what 'e may."

"Well," said Gabrielle, "his mother should have brought him up better, that's all I've got to say about it; and I do hope he'll be caught and punished. Give us something good for lunch, won't you, Mary Anne? I'm starving.

"And, Elise," she continued, "I made an engagement for us all to go sailing this afternoon with the Campbells. And do you know—I almost forgot to tell you—the guests at the hotel had to submit to having their trunks searched. I think it was insulting, but Lady Edith said she thought it only right."

"But, Gabrielle," said Elizabeth, tucking her letter inside her shirtwaist, to be brought forth in private later, "you forgot I told Mr. Bennett he could bring his friend Mr. Blake this afternoon. I meant to have tea on the veranda."

"So you did. Well, we can all come home about four o'clock."

"And I'll be ready fur you," promised Mary Anne, eagerly. "Don't you fash yerself, Miss Elizabeth; I'll have everything laid out and ready, and I'll make you some nice little cakes, too, and 'ave them 'ot and ready, fur well I know you'll be 'ungry."

So when Lord Wilfrid sailed to our little slip that afternoon he found us waiting for him and quite prepared for a good time. There was a nice breeze, and the sea was not too rough, so we thoroughly enjoyed ourselves and made a tour among the neighboring islands, admiring the handsome residences with which they seemed to abound.

"But I would just as lieve have our cottage on the bluff as any of them," declared Elizabeth, contentedly, and we all agreed with her.

We sailed so near the American shore that we could distinguish the signs on the wharf of the little town where the boat landed, and Gabrielle proposed going ashore and looking around a little. Lord Wilfrid busied himself with his sail for a moment, then turned and looked steadily at his sister.

"Shall we land, Edith?" he said. "The wind is dead against us, and it will take some time to tack back home again, but of course, if you think best, I am quite willing."

"Oh, I hardly think it would be wise, dear," she replied. "The girls have an engagement, you know. Some other time."

So we sailed home again, speculating as to which island Gordon Bennett owned, until we saw that gentleman himself embarking with his friend in an immaculate little launch, glistening with white paint and absolutely spotless in every respect. We learned later on that the islanders are quite as particular about the appearance of their boats as are the cottagers at Bar Harbor about their equipages, and that there is among them a friendly rivalry on the subject. We hailed him merrily and challenged him to race us home, and in spite of Lord Wilfrid's statement about the wind the boat cut through the water at a good pace. The salt spray dashed up in our faces and our hair blew into our eyes, but we did not care, for we reached the slip a full minute before Mr. Bennett, and could exult over his defeat even while obliged to admire his boat.

"But this is not the boat you left at the slip the day it stormed," remarked Gabrielle; "this is much newer—yes, and much prettier, but I believe the other is faster. When you race with us you must always take your swiftest boat, you know."

"But I can't race that boat, unfortunately," he returned, with a short laugh. "When I came to get it that morning it had vanished entirely—broken away, I suppose—and I had to go home in a fishing smack I happened to be able to hire. I think it is very inhospitable of you to keep your boathouse door locked."

"I think so, too," agreed Elizabeth, "and if I can ever remember it I am going to get a locksmith from the village and have it opened."

We were all ready to do justice to the nice hot cakes and tea Mary Anne had waiting for us, and we found Mr. Blake quite an acquisition. He was a quiet man, who, as Gabrielle said, always seemed to be about to make a brilliant remark and never did, but kept us on the alert waiting for it.

Lady Edith took off her hat and laid it on the chair beside her, and I idly picked it up, smoothing out the veil which was knotted around it and thinking how wonderfully well it suited her flower-like face. Suddenly I paused, however, for in the veil fastening the chiffon to the hat brim, I saw a small pin shaped like a key, and the counterpart of one link of my cuff button.

I was about to draw it out and ask her about it, for the design was unusual, when I saw a gray shadow cross her face and her eyes dilate strangely. She was looking beyond me, straight at Gordon Bennett, and I looked also, wondering greatly.

He was bending forward, cup in hand, talking to Gabrielle, and a ray from the setting sun reached the spoon, causing it to gleam as he moved it and insensibly attract the eye. Something else gleamed also from his white cravat, and I saw that his scarf-pin was the head of the Sphinx in raised dull gold.

CHAPTER VIII.

"What I like best about Mary Anne," remarked Elizabeth appreciatively, "is that she is so dependable."

We were standing at my window watching Mary Anne and a market basket disappear in the direction of the village. We regarded her broad back and deliberate movements with genuine affection, knowing that her foraging would be eminently successful and our larder satisfactorily stocked, which desirable result was not by any means certain to follow when we ourselves went to market.

Gabrielle and Elizabeth had their hats on and even carried gloves, which meant that something unusual was about to happen.

"If wa had not made such a definite engagement with the Campbells, I would not go one step," announced Gabrielle. "I don't like to leave you alone with a headache."

"Of course you must go," I returned ruefully. "We have set too many times and been disappointed to put it off again. Then, too, remember Lord Wilfrid is to meet you over there at luncheon, and as he must have already started, there is no way of letting him know. I will be all right when you come home, but it is too bad."

For this was the day agreed upon after various disappointments, for a shopping expedition to the small town across the water. We intended to take advantage of the little steamer that crossed every morning and returned every afternoon, explore the place, and invest in a few articles the village could not supply. Lady Campbell and her brother were to join us, and we anticipated a very jolly time.

I was therefore awfully disappointed when I wakened that morning with the dull pain in my eyeballs I have reason to respect and treat with every deference. While the girls made their toilets, protesting vigorously against leaving me alone, I rested my heavy head against the window frame and tried to calculate how long it would probably be before my brain felt clear again and life would seem worth living.

"It is the kindest thing you can do for me," I said at last. "I prefer to be alone when my head aches. When you get off I will take something and lie down, and Mary Anne will make me some tea for lunch. By the time you come home tired and rather cross I shall be all freshly dressed and as cool and comfortable as possible. Now, if you don't start, you will miss your boat."

They finally set out, and I watched them walk down the path toward the village. Both were tall and slender, but there the resemblance ceased entirely. Gabrielle was strictly tailor-made from shoe to hat, but Elizabeth inclined toward softening the severity of such costumes by various feminine devices very telling in their effect, especially upon the masculine element of society.

When Gabrielle turned and waved her tightly-rolled silk umbrella in a farewell salute, I thought her plain, well-fitting skirt and jacket, immaculately severe linen shirt waist, stiff cravat and trim little hat with its knot of ribbon and long black quill, the only correct costume for any one. But when Elizabeth also turned and raised her red parasol I was not so sure, for the pretty tan-colored skirt and short Eton jacket, the dainty white blouse, and the light straw hat with a red rose under the brim, were certainly very becoming, as well as entirely suitable.

I lay quite still for some hours, then found myself gradually reviving and with a strong desire for a cup of tea. The house seemed very quiet, and though I opened my door and called several times there was no response. I was forced to conclude that Mary Anne had taken advantage of our intended absence to spend the day in the village, not knowing I had remained at home.

I therefore got up and went down to the kitchen to see what I could find; for I had eaten no breakfast, and felt that I would now be all the better for a little food.

The fire was out, and the prospects discouraging to one disinclined to make much of an effort; but I found some crackers, and remembered that Mary Anne had mentioned putting the milk on the hanging shelf in the cellar, so I got a glass and went after it, cracker jar in hand.

The cellar had been well aired and was much less damp and musty than on my previous visit. Also, the litter of boxes and other rubbish had been neatly piled along the wall, and the whole place seemed more habitable. The sea breeze swept through the open windows until the hanging shelf creaked on its rusty chains, and a ray of sunlight penetrated the dark recess, almost reaching the packing case at the end.

I found the milk and filled my glass, then wandered aimlessly into the recess, sat down upon an upturned box, and began my lunch. I do not understand why I should have elected to do this, when the entire house was at my disposal, but sometimes one obeys an impulse without any tangible reason for doing so.

As I sat contentedly nibbling a cracker and sipping the milk I heard voices, muffled but quite distinct, as though on the other side of a thin partition. At first I was alarmed, but in an instant I recognized Mary Anne's familiar tones and was correspondingly relieved, although her whereabouts was still a mystery.

"Now, then," said a man's voice impatiently, "don't let's have a scene, and, for heaven's sake, don't turn on the water-works—this place is damp enough already."

"Oh, Willy, my dear, dear boy," she said appealingly; "don't go for to be short wi' me—don't, now!"

PERIOD OF REST PROCLAIMED.

Absence of Light Regulates the Hours of Slumber.

If it were always daytime, we should never sleep. So says a scientist, according to Answers. There is no particular reason why we, or any other animals, should rest, on an average, eight or nine hours a day.

The period of rest has been determined by the fact that eight hours is the average time when there is a lack of sufficient light to enable us to move about in comfort.

This most fundamental distinction between night and day is wholly relative to the sense of sight. It only affects those types of life which have developed eyes.

Plants, being dependent for their growth upon the action of rays of sunlight which fall upon their leaves, have a wide distinction between day and night functions.

They eat and digest in the light, and grow during the hours of darkness.

The lowest forms of animal life—the sightless denizens of ocean depths—do not rest at regular intervals. They prowl around incessantly, seeking prey by the sense of touch alone. When they rest, it is at irregular periods. In other words, they have no distinct periodicity of their own.

But as soon as eyes are developed, and in proportion to this development, animals begin to divide their time into two main portions—a waking and a sleeping time. While there is light they perform all motive functions, When darkness comes they retire to nest or lair to rest.

The Sympathy of Friendship.

It is sublime to feel and say of another, I need never meet, or speak, or write to him; we need not re-enforce ourselves or send tokens of remembrance; I rely on him as on myself; if he did thus or this, I know it was right.—Emerson.

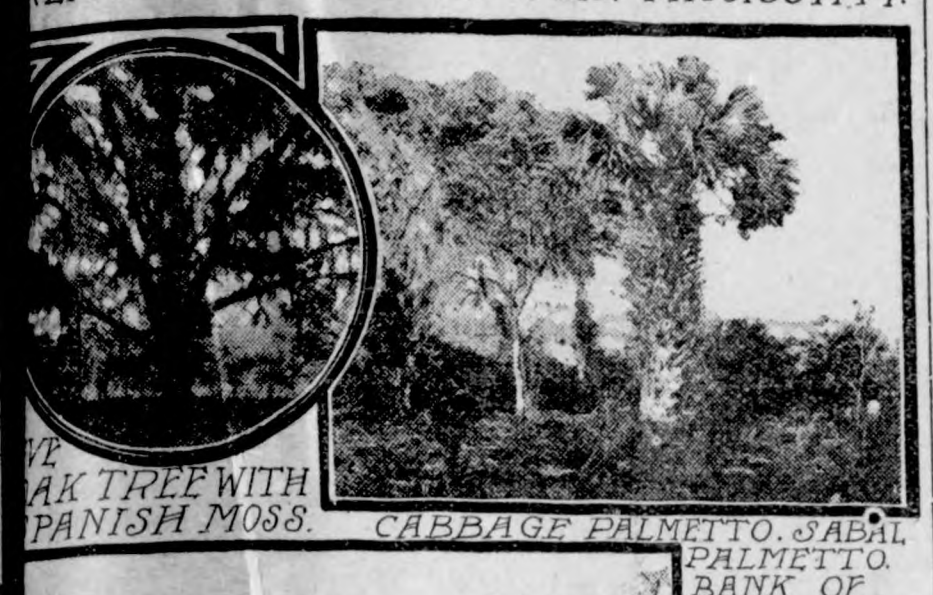
NATIONAL FOREST FOR FLORIDA

FIRST RESERVATION TO BE CREATED EAST OF THE MISSISSIPPI.



VE OAK TREE WITH SPANISH MOSS.

CABBAGE PALMETTO. SABAL PALMETTO. BANK OF KISSIMMEE RIVER

FOREST OF PALMS CABBAGE PALMETTOS.

OOD REPRODUCTION LONGLEAF PINE.

Florida goes the distinction of ng the first national forest cre- east of the Mississippi river. ident Roosevelt has just signed a lamation setting aside and nam- he Ocala national forest in Marion ty in eastern Florida and another lamation creating the Dakota na- l forest in Billings county, North ota. Inasmuch as the last named onal forest is the first in North ota, the two proclamations add more states to the list of e wherein land will be put under ntific forest administration. There now 19 states, and Alaska, having onal forests.

efore the creation of the Ocala, in ida, the two forests in Arkansas, Ozark and the Arkansas, were the ernmost national forests. Prac- lly all the other national forests in the Rocky mountain and the ific coast states. The Florida for- has an area of 201,480 acres, of ch about one-fourth has been taken nder various land laws. It covers lateau between the St. John's and lawaha rivers and at no point is elevation exceeding 150 feet above level obtained. The area is by na- e better fitted for the production of st growth than for any other pur- e. Nearly all of the area, however, ms particularly well adapted to the wth of sand pine, which is even replacing the less valuable cies, and with protection from fire ost the entire area will in time un- btedly be covered with a dense nd of this species. The long-leaf e, a much more valuable commer- l tree than the sand pine, appears her sparsely on this forest and is fined principally to the lower flat ds along the streams on the bor- s of the forest.

n addition to the pines and scrub wths, bald cypress, cabbage palmet- nd tupelo gum, gradually changing water oak, ash, elm, magnolia, hick- and maple are found bordering numerous ponds and lakes which scattered abundantly throughout confines of this forest.

Fire has played a very important t in bringing about the present rly forested condition of the Ocala, year after year large fires have rned uninterruptedly over this tract, ling all vegetation and consuming humus of the soil. Naturally pro- ted portions which have not been ject to the flames prove positively, wever, that the soil will rapidly re- nd to a little care taking and that prevention of fires would eventual- mean the reforestation of practical- the entire orea.

No sawmill operations have been nducted on the area included in the ala national forest. Turpentining boxing is carried on over contigu- s areas and through the careless d antiquated methods used the fu- re pine crop of the adjoining region greatly jeopardized. The soil is of tle value for agricultural purposes d about the only crop which can be oduced that will be of lasting value sand pine, and with proper care and tention there should in time be a luable forest of this species.

The new Dakota national forest con- sts of 14,080 acres in the Bad Lands gion. It is located in Billings coun- and lies an equal distance between e Northern Pacific railroad on the north and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul on the south. Its creation is important for it means that an experimental field for forest planting has been secured in North Dakota, the least forested state in the Union, having only one per cent. of tree growth. The forest service expects to establish forest nurseries with the hope that in time to come the area may be reforested by artificial means. This feature is expected to prove a very good object lesson to the settlers, who, it is hoped, will in turn plant windbreaks around their farms.

The forest is very open and for the most part contains a scattering stand of western yellow pine timber. Along the creek bed are found ash, box elder, cottonwood, elm and birch. Cedar breaks are also found on precipitous slopes bordering the streams. Western yellow pine is the only merchantable species, however, on the forest and the average stand per acre is not over 2,000 feet. The reproduction of pine is fairly good wherever mature trees occur, but owing to the open condition of the forest and the dense growth of grass it is for the most part unsatisfactory.

There is but little timber that will be sold from the forest at the present time, since this area is very isolated being surrounded on all sides by vast plains. Many homesteaders have in the past come to this forest for tim ber for logs to build their houses

No sawmill operations have ever been conducted on the area. When the Northern Pacific railroad was being built a larger number of trees were cut for railroad ties, and together with the logs which have been procured for house building by settlers this is the only use which has been made of the timber on the forest. It is understood that the logs used in the construction of President Roosevelt's cabin, which now stands in the state capitol grounds at Bismarck, N. D. were obtained from the area now included in the Dakota national forest.

Gov. Burke of North Dakota is very much interested in this forest and thinks it will be of inestimable value to the people who live in the region where the forest is created.

Both of the new national forests, the Ocala in Florida, and the Dakota, will be put under administration by the forest service as soon as possible.

WORK NEARLY DONE

ROOSEVELT FARM LIFE COMMISSION MEETS JANUARY 10.

REPORT IS KEPT A SECRET

Over 11,200 Replies Were Received from Individuals—6,000 School Meetings Held.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 26.—Hon. Henry Wallace has returned from Washington, D. C., where he has been attending the sessions of the country life commission appointed by President Roosevelt and which has been engaged in formulating its report to the president. The commission will meet again Jan. 10, to complete its work. The census bureau will have compiled and classified much of the information received by the commission in pursuance of its investigation by that time, and the states which have not held the school meetings for the purpose of securing information for the commission will have done so early in January. "The report will be made to the president in ample time for transmission to the congress, in the special message which he is said to contemplate," said Mr. Wallace. "The commission has discussed the form and many subjects which it expects to cover in the report, but no information has been given to the public, thus far, and cannot be until the report is in the hands of the president."

To the general list of inquiries sent out by the commission it received 11,200 replies from individuals. Mr. Wallace received in reply to the circular sent out by him relating to farm leases and farm labor more than 6,000 replies. Each of the commissioners made special inquiries on special subjects committed to them and have received thousands of answers. The commission visited more than a score of states and held extended hearings which have been reproduced on paper. There were more than 6,000 school meetings as suggested by the commission and some of the states have fixed dates in the future for further meetings, Missouri, having set Jan. 15, and Nebraska, Vermont and other states having also fixed dates in the future which will add extensively to the number of school meetings. After the visit to the west a few weeks ago the commission held hearings at Champaign, Ill., which was conducted by Mr. Wallace, and then at Ithaca, N. Y., Springfield, Mass., and Boston. The commission then went to Washington, D. C., where it held hearings in the agricultural department, and heard the women's federation representatives, and inspected the work of classification of information elicited by inquiries by the census department, then getting down to the work of framing the report.

Johnson Is Champion.

Sydney, N. S. W., Dec. 26.—Jack Johnson, the big negro from Galveston, Texas, is the world's champion heavy weight pugilist. He won the title in the arena at Rush Cutter's Bay, from "Tommy" Burns, the French-Canadian who had held it since James J. Jeffries relinquished it. The end came in the fourteenth round when the police, seeing Burns tottering and unable to defend himself from the savage blows of his opponent, mercifully stopped the fight. Previously it had been arranged that if the police interfered a decision should be rendered on points, and Referee McIntosh, without hesitation, declared the big black mail the winner, for all through the fight he had shown himself Burns' master in every style of fighting.

Boy Steals Thousands.

Mount Clements, Mich., Dec. 26.—John Upleger, a 15-year-old boy, is under detention at police headquarters pending an investigation of his explanation as to his possession of about $25,000 worth of postoffice money orders, checks and bank certificates of deposit, which were found in his room. For many weeks banks and local business men have complained of the loss of letters containing remittances.

Charged With Wife Murder.

New Brunswick, N. J., Dec. 26.—The police are searching for George R. Holman, accused of having shot and killed his wife, Margaret, just after they had eaten a Christmas dinner together at the home of his father here following a separation of several weeks. Anger at the woman's refusal to return and live with him is believed by the police to have been the cause of the tragedy.

Fine Horses Burned.

Lima, O., Dec. 26.—Fire destroyed the extensive stables of Davis & Sons, together with twenty-seven fine horses. Adjoining building were slightly damaged. The total loss will not exceed $25,000.

WHER BULLETS FLEW.

David Parker of Fayette, N. Y., a veteran of the civil war who lost a leg at Gettysburgh, says: "The good Electric Bitters have done is worth more than five hundred dollars to me. I spent much money doctoring for a bad case of stomach trouble, to little purpose. I then tried Electric Bitters and they cured me. I now take one a tonic and they keep me strong and well." 50c. at G. A. Pabst & Co's drug store.

A GOOD NAME

EVERY one desires to establish for himself a good name, but it takes time to win the confidence of your fellow men. Truth and perseverance are the alternate rungs on the ladder of success, and he who reaches the top must make no false step.

There are hundreds of cough medicines with all sorts of names, each claiming to be the best, but the test of time will prove whether or not they have established the right to be called the best.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has had thirty-five years of sale and use, and has cured coughs and colds under all conditions, in all countries and climates, and the verdict today is that it has no equal.

Careful selection of the drugs, intelligent and skillful compounding, the entire absence of opium, chloroform, or any other harmful ingredient, and the absolute purity of every article that goes into its composition, has built up and sustained its good name.

These are the things you should remember, and the next time you want a cough medicine, it is worth while to see that you get Chamberlain's and secure the virtues which a good name implies.

Every dealer who sells a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy guarantees it to give satisfaction or he will refund the money.
